THE ANDOVER NEWS.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, - EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., SEPT. 10, 1890.

The state of Indiana is short of funds. Gov. Hovey can't get his salary and will sue to obtain it.

The Republican State Committee re-nominated Judge Robert Earl to succeed himself on Court of Appeals bench. No State convention will be held.

The attorney for a Japanese murderer in Sing Sing, under sentence of death by electricity, proposes to make another legal fight against the law providing for electric executions.

Probably the youngest murderer ever executed in this country, was six years old Otto Luther, of Columbus, O., who was hanged last Friday, for killing little Maggie Thompson.

The original package dealers in most parts of the Union have signified that they will obey the United States law which forbids them to continue business. This is really very kind of them.

The Farmer's Alliance of Maryland have taken measures looking to a practical solution of their difficulties. They propose to establish in Baltimore an agricultural exchange which shall bring producer and consumer into direct communication. In some such way as this the question of the transportation of farm products must work itself out. It is our mode of distributing goods to consumers that cost so much and eat up the profits of all concerned. The goods pass through too many hands. Co-operation ought to try its hand in this field.

A law that concerns every property owner and real estate dealer and one worthy the attention of the people went into effect in this state September 1st. It is designed to work a radical and long needed reform in conveyancing. It was passed by the last legislature, approved June 2d, and is entitled "An act to provide for short forms of deeds and mortgages." It prescribes forms for a deed with full covenants, an executor's deed and a mortgage. These are plain, short and simple. They are stripped of all unnecessary verbiage. They contain no reiteration or iteration, no multiplication of synonymous terms, no useless words.

A dispatch from Washington to the Buffalo Express says: Advices received here from the 34th New York Congressional District are decidedly confusing as to whom the Republicans will nominate to succeed Congressman Laidlaw. Mr. Laidlaw recently returned from looking after his fences, and is decidedly sanguine in the belief that he will succeed himself. He expects to be first choice of many of the delegates, and second choice of a majority. However, should he fail he intends to name the man. The Hon. Lo Sessions, however, holds a different opinion. It is understood that he predicts Laidlaw's defeat, but declines to even guess as to whom the nominee will be.

AT THE END OF HIS ROPE.

Jerry Powderly has almost run his race. The strike has failed and he must now stand the curses of every workingman who has lost his job. The Federation of Labor at Baltimore yesterday gave Powderly the first public kick down-hill when it refused any pecuniary assistance to the New York Central strikers, on the ground that it had no confidence in the general executive board of the knights. A delegate declared that Powderly is a Jonah and that the next general convention of the knights will throw him overboard with no convenient whale in sight to cast him out.

The fate of every unsuccessful leader of strikes stares Powderly in the face. Martin Irons, who once tied up 6,000 miles of the Southwestern railroad system, is peddling peanuts in a St. Louis depot. If Powderly escapes a similar returning to the ranks of honest labor, it will be because he has saved enough of his salary to make him financially independent. But his influence as a labor leader is gone forever.—Buffalo Express.

The Erie's Kinzua Bridge.

The famous Kinzua Bridge near Bradford, Pa., will shortly be a thing of the past. The structure is too light to carry the heavy traffic which is now being done on that division of the Erie road, and is to be replaced with a detour. Said an Erie official the other day:

"Kinzua viaduct, which spans the gorge of Kinzua Creek, is over 2,000 feet long, and is 310 feet above the water. It was built for a single track at a cost of $237,000, and consists of 20 towers, each 10 feet by 28½ inches at the top and of varying width at the bottom, the highest being 103 feet by 38½ feet at the base. These towers are built of Phœnix iron columns in 30-foot sections and connected by internal wrought-iron sleeper-joints. It is the highest bridge in North America and, with one exception, in the world. The viaduct was designed to hold a weight of 266 tons, which is equal to a load of 3,075 pounds per lineal foot of track. This viaduct carries a branch of the New York, Lake Erie & Western Railroad from the petroleum fields of Bradford county to the coal fields of Elk county. It was begun May 5, 1882, and completed on August 29, 1882, in less than four months. When the viaduct was first contemplated it was found the detour would cost $3,000 more than the viaduct, but if the viaduct is built with heavier material it may be found that it will cost more than to make the detour.

"The viaduct for years has been one of the famous bridges of the world, and has been visited by many eminent engineers and railroad men from this this and other countries, and probably is the only bridge in the world which has just paid for itself in the amount of excursion business it has brought to the road building it."

Expelled From Church.

The Rev. John Dorrity Wood, the young Methodist minister who was arrested in Olean last spring upon a charge of bigamy preferred by wife No. 1, whom he married in New Jersey, and then married a lady in Buffalo, with whom he was living at the time of his arrest, was expelled from the church last week, at a meeting of the conference of the Olean district held in Angelica.

His trial for bigamy was down on the court calendar to be tried this week, but has been put over until the November term. Wood is out on bail, which it is thought he will forfeit before standing trial, as the action of the conference shows that his case is considered very dark.

Two more of Andover's sportsmen have been rabbit hunting. They started out one day last week and traveled several miles before they found any game. Finally they sighted a couple of rabbits near a farm house, and taking good aim, fired, killing both the rabbits. Next day a certain farmer came to town looking for the men who shot his tame rabbits! An Andover gentleman says it's time these rabbit hunters were called down.

Bundy--Leonard.

Last evening at the M. E. church in this village occurred the marriage of W. B. Bundy and Miss Margaret M. Leonard. At 8:30 o'clock the wedding party arrived at the church, and while the wedding march was played by Miss Flora Bundy, the bride and attendants passed up the aisle on one side of the church and the groom and attendants passed up the aisle on the opposite side, meeting at the altar in the front of the church.

Miss Retta Leonard of Friendship, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Miss Florence Cassidy of Tonawanda, was maid of honor. Messrs. E. W. Barnes of Wellsville, and E. J. Atwood of Andover, were the groomsmen. The ushers were Messrs. A. B. Burrows, A. V. Durand, J. E. Cannon, and G. B. Richardson, all of this place.

The bride's dress was of white India silk, trimmed with silver passementerie and point lace.

Rev. G. W. Gibson pronounced the beautiful Episcopal marriage ceremony, after which the wedding party and invited guests repaired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Burrows, where a reception and congratulations were given to the newly married couple. The spacious rooms were handsomely decorated with flowers, and the whole house presented a scene of joyousness which was appropriate to the happy occasion. A sumptuous wedding supper was served, and the entire evening was spent in a highly enjoyable manner.

The wedding gifts were numerous and, without exception, handsome and of fine quality. Among them were an extension table and six dining-room chairs, an elegant sideboard, several rocking chairs, a china dinner and tea-set, solid silver spoons, butter dish, knives, &c., several paintings and engravings, a "kitchen board," containing numerous articles used in the kitchen and pantry, and many other gifts. Altogether it was an elaborate collection of fitting tokens of friendship and esteem. All of the furniture is of antique oak.

The following named guests were present from out of town: W. H. Crandall and wife, C. D. Reynolds and wife and Miss Sophia Reynolds, Misses Effa and Jessie Crandall, E. C. Marvin, Alfred Centre; Geo. A. Green and wife, Belmont; Mrs. E. W. Barnes, Miss Taddie Barnes, C. M. Barnes, Miss Delphine Baldwin, E. C. Brown, F. V. R. Stillman, Mrs. Julia Dobbins, W. B. Coats and wife, E. A. Sweet and wife, Wellsville; Hon. A. C. Barney and wife, Misses Emma and Sarah Barney and Charles Barney, West Union; Mrs. Geo. H. Browne, Pittsburg, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bundy expected to leave last night on a wedding trip, but trains were prevented from running by high water. However, they will make the trip as soon as possible, and will visit New York, Westerly, R. I., Newport, Narragansett Bay and other places, and will be absent two or three weeks. Upon their return they will begin housekeeping in this village.

The bride is well known in Andover as a highly accomplished and estimable young lady, while Mr. Bundy enjoys the reputation of being one of Andover's most respected and substantial young men, and the happy couple will enter married life with the best wishes and hearty congratulations of a very large circle of warm friends.

MORE HIGH WATER!

Two Iron Bridges Swept Away in this Village, and Much Other Damage Done to Property.

Again are the people of Andover called upon to sustain a heavy loss by flood. The damage to roads and bridges in this town is as great, if not greater, than that caused by the memorable June flood a year ago.

Tuesday night it began to rain about dark, and when people went to bed the most they thought about it was that it had set in for "an all night's rain." As the night wore on the rain increased in force until it fell in a perfect torrent. About 1 o'clock the Andover creek overflowed its banks, and from that time until about 4 o'clock the water rose with great rapidity, until the northern end of the village was completely under water. The railroad track at the Main street crossing, and for a long distance above, was covered by more than a foot of water, as were the highways and all other ground in the vicinity. The water made fearful havoc in James Owen's tannery, completely ruining all his vats of liquor and putting out the fires under his boiler. The building was also badly damaged. Erie train No. 5 arrived here about 2 a. m., but could proceed no further owing to washouts at Dyke.

Between four and five o'clock the water began to recede and the roads near the creek soon became passable.

Shortly after 7 o'clock the people were greatly surprised to see the iron bridge over the creek slowly move from it foundations. The abutments under the north end of the bridge had never been in perfect condition since the floods a year ago, and yesterday's high water washed out the earth and stones to such an extent that the bridge had no support. The bridge moved slowly down stream a short distance and lodged, the iron-work being considerably twisted and broken.

When the bridge went the gas pipe, which ran across the lower side of the bridge, was broken, and fires all through the village went out instantly. The gas company very quickly plugged the end of the pipe at the south end of the bridge, and very little inconvenience from want of fire was felt by those living on the south side of the creek. Those living in Canada, however, were obliged to burn wood until this morning, when the pipe was again connected.

As soon as the water lowered sufficiently, the work of repairing the railroad track was begun, an extra force of men being put on.

The rain continued to fall all day Wednesday, but much more moderately than it had during the night previous. Towards night, however, it increased in force, and about dark the water began to rise again, at 9:30 the banks of the creek were full, and at 10 o'clock the track was again under water.

Dyke creek which runs at the south end of the village, did not show the effect of Tuesday night's rain as much as did the other creek, and very little damage was preceptible Wednesday along its course. But last night's rain brought the water up in this creek, until the iron bridge over it at Main St. was no longer able to retain its place, and at 10 o'clock last night it went down stream and lodged against the iron bridge at Second street, which was fortunately strong enough to stand the strain, without the least perceptible damage being done to this bridge.

The gas pipe which ran across the Main street bridge was also broken, and somebody's lantern got too near the escaping gas which was ignited, and burned until the gas was shut off at the main valve. Fortunately the company has another line at Second street bridge, and people south of Dyke creek did not lose their favorite fuel.

The force of the water in Dyke creek was so great that after the bridge went out the earth was washed out for a distance of about 18 feet on the north bank of the creek.

The damage to bridges and roads is very great in all the surrounding country, a great many bridges being completely destroyed, and travel is almost entirely suspended. Great damage is also done to crops and land.

Train 5 stayed at this station until last evening, when it started back to Hornellsville, but was compelled to stop at Tip Top.

The greatest sufferer from this flood is James Owen, who has sustained more than his share of loss by water during the past 15 months.

A work train came through from Hornellsville yesterday afternoon, and this afternoon at 2 o'clock a passenger train arrived here from Hornellsville but could not proceed farther until five o'clock. Two trains went east about six o'clock.

The reports from other places are very meagre, but it is learned that at Greenwood, Canisteo, Hornellsville, and Wellsville, and other places east and west the damage is very great.

Diphtheria on Train 12.

On board Erie train 12 last Saturday evening was a passenger named Antonio Silva, with his wife and four children. They came from San Francisco, California, and were enroute for Providence, R. I. After leaving Salamanca it was learned that Rose, a 4-year-old daughter of Silva's, was sick, and her symptoms indicated diphtheria. The train was stopped at this station and the whole family put off the train. Dr. O'Donnell was called by Station Agent Richardson and pronounced the disease diphtheria. The man had no money and Poormaster Crandall was notified and took means to provide the family with food and other necessaries. They remained in the depot over night, and Sunday morning the Board of Health quarantined the building. Sunday evening the railroad company sent a car from Hornellsville, in which the sick child and the rest of the family was placed, and the car was removed onto a side track at the west end of the railroad yard. The station was disinfected Sunday night and Monday morning the quarantine was raised.

The sick child died at six o'clock Monday morning and was buried at two o'clock in the afternoon.

It was reported that another of the children was taken sick with the disease, but the report proved untrue. None of the family showed any diphtheric symptoms and they departed on train 18 Monday evening.
