THE ANDOVER NEWS.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, - EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., NOV. 26, 1890.

General Hosted says Milo M. Acker of Steuben, should be leader of the Republican minority in the Assembly.

Jugigo, the Japanese murderer confined in Sing Sing prison, will be executed during the week beginning December 1st. Had it not been for the Electric Execution Law he would have been hanged long ago. Electricity may be a speedy means of death, but thus far it has been very slow in beginning operations.

The demand for the repeal of the electric execution law has dropped into a state of rest. Dr. Spitza, meanwhile, tells the society of Medical Jurisprudence and State Medicine that Kemmler "was dead in the first fraction of a second," and adds that the execution was the most dignified he ever saw, and he has seen many.

The Board of Supervisors of Chautauqua county at its recent session passed a resolution asking the representatives in the Assembly and Senate to secure the passage of a law abolishing the printing of the session laws in newspapers, and providing for the printing of the same in book form. This is substantially the same plan advocated in the NEWS two weeks ago. One thing is certain—the people are getting tired of the present system and the outcry against it will soon compel a change.

From reliable sources it is learned that twelve engineers, representing divisions along the the line of the Erie road held two conferences Friday and Saturday with President King, at which Vice-President Felton and General Superintendent Thomas were present. Late Saturday night a compromise was effected and the engineers returned home perfectly satisfied. They state that President King treated them courteously and assured them that certain things regarded by the subordinates as hardships would be examined into and made satisfactory. It is understood the engineers want pay for hours spent along the road instead of by trips and also pay for the time engineers are suspended when the men are afterward exonerated.

The Albany Journal in speaking of the strength shown by the Farmer's Alliance, says: "Three United States senators and 30 representatives in Congress are the claim made by the organization, and it does not seem to be excessive. The result of last week's election shows clearly that at a single bound the farmer in potitics has accomplished more than the Greenbacker during a hard fight of several years duration, the Labor man at the zenith of his power, or the Prohibitionist after the expenditure of thousands of dollars and numerous campaigns in all the great states of the North. The Alliance has elected governors and congressmen; and it has already acquired recognition as the most formidable third party movement in American politics of recent years."

The Seventh Day Adventists—there is a million of them in this country—are greatly interested in a peculiar case now on trial in the Federal Court at Nashville, Tennesee. A farmer named King was arrested for ploughing his field on Sunday, and convicted by the circuit court. The State Supreme Court confirmed the sentence and now Don. M. Breckenridge, former Postmaster General, has been retained as counsel by the General Society of Adventists, and the case has gone to the Federal Court. The case of Mr. King is to be made a test case, and no matter what the decision of Judge Hammond may be an appeal will be taken to the United States Supreme Court. The Society of Seventh Day Adventists do not recognize the Christian Sabbath, but observe Saturday as a day of rest and insist upon working or seeking amusement as they may see fit upon the Christian Sabbath. The society contend that their members have a right to worship as they may see fit and observe such Sabbath days as they like.

Dr. Talmage on Thanksgiving.

Only a few brief days and there will be a table spread across the top of the two great ranges of mountains which ridge this continent—a table reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific seas. It is the thanksgiving table of the nation. They come from the east and the west and the north and the south, and sit at it. On it will be smoking the products of all lands—birds of every avairy, cattle from every pasture, fish from every lake, feathered spoils from every farm. The fruit baskets will bend down under the products plucked from the peach fields of New Jersey, the apple orchards of western New York, the orange groves of Florida, the vineyards of Ohio and the nuts treshed from New England woods. The bread will be white from the wheat fields of Illinois and Michigan, the banqueters will be adorned with California gold, and the table will be agleam with Nevada silver, and the feast will be warmed with the fire-grates heaped up with Pennsylvania coal. The halls will be spread with carpets from the Lowell mills, and when darkness comes with its heavy draperies, the lights will flash from bronzed brackets of Philadelphia manufacture. The fingers of Massachusetts girls will have hung the embroidery, the music will be the drumming of ten thousand mills accompanied by the shouts of children let loose for play; and the gladness of harvesters driving barnward the loads of sheaves, and the thanksgiving of the nation which crowd the celestial gates with doxologies, until the oldest harper of heaven will not be able to tell where the terrestial song ends and the celestial song begins. Welcome, Thanksgiving day!

The Second Coming of the Lord.

The conviction that the second coming of the Lord is close at hand is strong among large numbers of Christian believers, and therefore a convention of Baptists is now in session in Brooklyn to give solemn consideration to the momentous subject.

This expectation is very different from the confidence which led Miller to predict the precise date of the second coming fifty years ago. The present millennialists do not undertake to cipher out from the prophecies of Scripture the exact day of the reappearance of the Lord. They merely interpret the signs and portents of this particular period as indicating that the beginning of His earthly reign approaches. They look for it in this century, perhaps, most certainly in the early part of the next century. All the signs of the times seem to them to be pointing to the speedy fulfillment of the prophesy of the book of Revelation. The present financial upturning will be so interpreted by them, and also the political upheavel through which we have passed this month. The wars of the century, the various preparations for war now made on so gigantic a scale throughout civilization, the spread of skepticism, the floods, the tidal waves, the cyclones, the earthquakes, the climatic variations, the social disquiet, and the religious controversies of the period convince them that the day is not far off. The prospect for the triumph of faith would seem black to them if they did not think they discovered the first rays of the millenial morning.

This impression is strong with the Baptists and Methodists, and it affects many Presbyterians also, and some Episcopalians. Bishop Cleveland Cox of Western New York has for many years been such a millenarian, and Moody and Sankey, Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army, and the evangelists of this time are generally sustained by the same hope. The air seems to them to be rustling with the wings of the angelic army gathering for the second advent.

The present convention in Brooklyn is likely, therefore, to start a discussion of the subject which may make it one of the most prominent before the religious public.—N. Y. Sun.

Truth Pleasantly Told.

A tramp will work if he is only given a fair trial—in a police court.

The proper place for practicing the mind cure is in an insane asylum.

They have girl train-wreckers in Ohio. The ambition of the gentler sex to get into the male professions is being carried too far.

A Watkins man whose wife was killed in a railroad accident buried her on Sunday and married again on Tuesday. The bridal party got pretty close to the funeral procession that time.

The Republican candidate for Assembly in the second district of Orange bounty put an item in his bill of expenses of $300 for traveling and "getting acquainted with people." Every candidate knows what that means.

The fact that a murderer is never haunted by visions of his dead victim till he is locked in jail is again illustrated by a case at Winchester, Ky. If this be always true, it is a good argument for life imprisonment instead of the death-penalty. Lock the man up and let the ghost have a chance to avenge itself.

The women of a fashionable Philadelphia church have agreed that they shall each earn a dollar and then they will give a social at which each will tell how she earned it, the fund, of course, to go to the support of the church. The idea is evidently based on the experience of Mr. Stanley. He made a few dollars traveling in Africa and is now making thousands telling how he did it.

About forty of the friends of H. Mourhess made him a surprise visit last Thursday evening. It was the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Mourhess' birth, and was celebrated in an appropriate manner by all present. Mr. Mourhess was presented with a very handsome rocking chair, a substantial token of the esteem in which he is held by his friends and neighbors.

The last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church held in New York in May, 1888, ordered that a vote be taken in all the churches in the denomination in October or November, 1890, on the question of admitting women as lay delegates to general conference in the future. The vote in the Andover M. E. church was taken last week, and resulted in 32 votes being cast in favor of admitting women, and only 2 against.

Geo. E. Brown last week sold to Hornellsville parties the right to take ice from the pond above the village, for a period of five years. Mr. Brown reserves the right to furnish ice to any person or persons in Andover. the Hornellsville parties taking their chances on the balance. As the pond is large enough to supply ice for the whole county, the risk is very slight. A large ice-house is to be erected near the pond, and a switch from the Erie road will be run to the same.

The post office at Silver Creek was robbed early Thursday morning. Money, registered letters and stamps amounting to about $1,000 were taken. The safe was broken open and the work indicates that it was done by professionals. The office is on Main St. and the burglary was a nervy under taking. Three strangers were seen in the village the night before; one about 6 feet tall, with mustache, no overcoat. The other two were shorter. One wore light-colored overcoat. Postmaster J. J. Lamphere has telegraphed post offices in all directions and a desperate effort is being made to capture them.

Mr. Burrows says he could have entertained fifty more, and hopes the next time he has a sociable the house will be filled(!) Sweet of Wellville, carried off the first prize, which was given for the largest number of correct guesses as to what the pictures represented. The honors for the other extreme were carried off by H. P. Benton, who can draw a ton of coal to better advantage than he can guess what other people draw. Miss Minnie Clair rendered selections of music in her usual artistic manner.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

Is What Brown Must Pay for Assaulting T. N. Boyd—Other Court News.

Just after the NEWS went to press last week the jury in the Brown-Boyd case brought in a verdict finding Brown guilty of assault in the second degree, and recommended the clemency of the court towards the prisoner. The jury was out nearly 24 hours, and had not the above recommendation been made a part of the verdict it is evident there must have been a disagreement or else a verdict of assault in the third degree. On Friday afternoon the court sentenced the prisoner to pay a fine of $500, and to stand committed until the fine is paid. It is understood Brown and his friends will pay the fine, which will in some degree reimburse the county for the expense it has been to in the trial of this case.

John H. Rumpff of Wellsville, was tried for grand larceny. There was no evidence against him and the judge instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

SOME GUMPTION.

A Real Wicked Man.

There was once a wicked man fishing on the Orchy. The river had been in bad condition all the week. On a Saturday it was rather big, and all men knew that the next day it would be perfection. "It's always so," growled an old general, who had to leave on the Monday. "We ought to keep the Jewish Sabbath up here." These were idle words, but the man above mentioned believed in deeds. He said he would walk home. He hid his rod on the bank, and on the Sunday, when the rest of his brethren were grumbling at the bridge of Orchy, and spending their time in throwing stones into the river, he was seven miles up the glen. The fish he got was laid in hiding also, and the next day produced as a legitimate Monday's salmon, and the whole business might have remained unknown except to his own wicked heart if the fox hunter of the district—a man used to keeping his eyes open—had not spied the whole performance from the hillside.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Twins Come in Pairs.

"Twins?" said the doctor; "not many of them nowadays; but stop! There is one curious thing about twins. There is never one family in my list of patients made doubly happy but there is soon another equally blessed. Blessings, like misfortunes, come in pairs, and two pairs of twins are a squad, are they not? It is equally true that we almost never get one fracture without we get another within a few days, and as for broken arms they always come together. It seems in our business that there is the predestined concatenation of accidents, especially fatalities."—Lewiston Journal.
