AN ERIE GUIDE TO THE FISH

The fishing fever will soon be upon us, and the veterans in the game will be seeking their old haunts, or, if their luck was not the best last year, turn their attention toward spots which are new to them and offer a more abundant return. Every year there are thousands more who are touched with the fever and join the throng of followers of the rod and reel.

But the question of where to go and how confronts many. The Erie Railroad Company has issued a guide which will relieve the minds of those who have had a longing for game fresh water fishing, but have been puzzled as to just where to go. The upper Delaware river offers one of the best locations in the country for black bass. The number taken from its waters each year is immense, and there is no body of water in the world inhabited by this splendid fish so replete with nature's rarest works; none that can be compared to this romantic and beautiful home of the courageous micropterus. Pickerel and wall-eyed pike are also plentifully taken in the upper reaches of the Delaware. The black bass and the muskallonge—"tiger of fresh water fish"—are taken in abundance from Chautauqua Lake. Muskallonge weighing as high as forty-six pounds have been caught, the average size being about fifteen pounds. According to the Erie's guide the trout streams emptying into the upper Delaware are unsurpassed.

Memorial Day Observed in Andover.

Audience Attend Both Day Evening and Memorial Services. Att'y. W. N. Rerick Gives Speech.

Sunday evening memorial was delivered Sunday by Pastor H. B. Wilson of the Presbyterian church. Largest audience that has met in that church in many years. Mr Williams' sermon was appropriate to the occasion, emphasizing strongly the duty of American people to do all honor to the old veterans who by heroism saved to us our land. He was given many words of praise by the members of the G. A. R., Ladies of the Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans and patriotic citizens at-large.

Memorial Day in Andover last year passed off very nicely and quietly. The program as published in the News last week was carried out in full.

Services at The Auditorium were a house full, and all pleased.

The reading "Star Spangled Banner" by Miss Grace Randall one of the finest recitals ever heard to in Andover, and its patriotic spirit permeated the entire program.

Atty. W. N. Renwick's address was enthusiastically received and was highly complimented by all who heard it. Mr. Renwick began by telling his hearers that he was no longer young, but had reached the time when it pleased him women to be called by aged or young man. Yet he was of the time that the veterans who before him were mustered in, only fifty-one years ago, had been more than fifty-one years since the surrender of the State of Virginia at appomatox. More than fifty-five years since the leaden hail first fell at Fort Sumpter.

Seven years have not elapsed since the commencement of hostilities in the Spanish-American war, but today there are many veterans of the Civil War and than there are of the Spanish.

The speaker made this comparison to show what an immense army of young men marched from northern homes. There was not excitement at the time of the Spanish War, but it was nothing compared with that of at the time of the Civil War.

He said that after a call for troops by President Lincoln in little hamlet of Blackville in this county, a whole company was enlisted in two days.

Those who lived in those times can fully realize the excitement that prevailed. The question had been the same for years. The dissolution of the Union had been threatened by Southern states. The North educated to appreciate the value of our Republic institutions, and the danger that slavery prevailed, and was broken. Only those who were students of history can realize anything about the feeling and love of country that was in almost every heart.

Mr. Renwick then told of his experiences reviewing a sham battle on Manhattan Beach, and confessed that even the sham had given him fright, even though every cartridge shot he knew was blank.

He had had studied to know more of the courage the old men before him had shown, and concluded that it was because of their ancestry. At the time of the discovery of the world Europe was overrun with kings, princes and aristocratic spirit. The right of kings to rule their people for their own pleasure, not only taught but actual belief.

Liberty-loving young men and women of Europe soon discovered that America was so far away from these kings that freedom could be gained by going to America, thus placing an ocean which then took some months to cross, between themselves and their old homes.

New England was settled by the Puritans. Their terrible hardships and suffering experienced by them showing great courage and self-sacrifice, was vividly depicted by the speaker. He illustrated their conscientiousness by telling how the first party of Puritans, arriving on Sunday would not build fire and prepare food for themselves because of the day when they were famishing with hunger.—What material for the corner stone of a nation!

South of the Puritans was the Dutch Settlement at New Amsterdam, N. Y. They came from Holland and had for many years fought for their freedom against the tyranny of Spain. They had contended for their rights and freedom of conscience until Spain had executed over 18,000 of these brave Dutch men and women, finally prevailing against the power of Spain.

South of the Dutch was the Swedish Settlements, in New Jersey. They too had thrown off the yoke of bondage in their own county. South of them the Quakers of Pennsylvania, men who were always willing to die for freedom of conscience, and south of the Quakers was the Catholics of Baltimore who came from England and who wrote in their charter that "all men must be permitted to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience," and offered an asylum for any persecuted ones who might wish to make a home among them.

Throughout the coast line finally came sprinkling of French Huguenots, men compelled to leave home after the fearful massacre of St. Bartholomew, or an pure their religion. They were the flower of France.

Last, but not least, throughout the entire North came the Irish emigrants willing to make a home in a new world if they might gain the freedom and liberty that they were denied at home.

These people came from Europe to build homes, not to seek them in the cities, they were pioneers.

When I think of these pioneers I begin to comprehend how it was that you heroes of the Civil War dared to do what you have done. You were the offspring of these noble men and women who left their homes in the old world that they might build homes in the new founded upon the bullworks of freedom and christianity.

When slavery reared its hateful crest, attempted to gain dominion and destroy this liberty-loving nation, then it was that you, the children of these old pioneers, with the love of liberty inborn, went to the front to die that the union might be preserved, and all that your fathers had accomplished before you might not be lost.

If the South had been successful they would have forced slavery upon us by their Dred Scott decisions and others that would have followed. The North to-day would have been a lot of petty worrying states and the government by the people would have been a failure.

For the preservation of our liberties, for the saving of our nation it is to the Union Soldiers of the Civil War to whom we must do homage.

Mr. Renwick then gave in a very clear and comprehensive way his idea of preparedness, showing that we should be ready at any time to defend our loved country, but that it was inconceivable that the United States would ever go into a war with any country for conquest. But we should know how to defend

AUDITORIUM, SATURDAY EVENING

Pauline Frederick Unsurpassable as Zaza in the Dramatic Sensation.

The picturization of "Zaza" which will appear at the Auditorium, Saturday evening with Pauline Frederick in the celebrated title role, recalls to mind that at the time that Mrs. Leslie Carter made her appearance in the role several years ago, the New York dramatic critics declared that she was the one woman on the American stage who could have successfully played the part.

But those who have seen the great screen artist in her wonderful emotional interpretations of the leading roles in "Sold," in which she has already starred will be the first to declare that Miss Frederick is the one woman who can approach the stupendous task with a justifiable expectation of success.

TO ASSIGN FARMERS' INSTITUTES

Friday, June 9, at 10 A. M., at the Farm Bureau Office, Belmont

Director of Farmers' Institutes Edward van Alstyne, of the State Department of Agriculture, Albany, and Prof. D. J. Crosby, of the State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, will meet in conference all persons interested in the assignment of Farmers' Institutes and Extension Schools to be held the coming winter in Allegany County.

The number of institutes and schools which can be allotted to each county is limited, and all communities desiring this work should send a representative to this conference. It is desirable that as many interested in the work as possible be present in order that the best interests of the county may be served by placing the meetings where they will be of the greatest value.

WE THANK YOU

The members of Edward Seaman Post, G. A. R., appreciating the service of all those who contributed in making Memorial Day a success, wish to thank one and all. Especially to the members of the Andover Automobile Association who furnished automobiles gratuitously and those who took part on the program at the hall.

By Order of the Commander.

THE AUTOMOBILE ADVERTISING TRIP

All Andover to Close up Shop Next Tuesday for an Automobile Advertising Trip to Keuka Lake and Day's Outing

The automobile advertising trip planned by the Community Co-operative Club for next Tuesday, is meeting with enthusiasm by all, and it is now sure to be as successful as have been all of the other undertakings of the club.

Let it be here distinctly understood that any one who wishes to go so and will boost for Old Andover, is not only invited but sincerely urged to join with the club on the Lake Keuka trip for a day's outing together.

It does not matter what your color, creed or occupation, if you will do so come along. But don't say after it is all over "I would have been glad to have gone but I did not know I would be welcome."

All business places will be closed next Tuesday, June 6th, for the day. So any of our farmer friends, who cannot go with us, had better plan to come to Andover to trade on some other day, as the following paper signed by the business places will explain:

"We the undersigned, hereby agree to close our respective places of business on Tuesday, June 6, 1916, on account of the Community Co-operative Club advertising automobile trip.

Dated, Andover, N. Y., May 16, 1916."

STATE DIRECTOR VISITS FARM BUREAU

State Director, M. C. Burritt, from Cornell visited the local Farm Bureau Wednesday and Thursday of last week. The Bureau, however, is in fairly good condition compared with other Bureaus in the state.

Ask Delegates To Aid Colonel.

Republican Committee Appeals For Convention Support—Call Him Man of the Hour — National Honor at Stake.

Pointing out that Theodore Roosevelt is by common consent the spokesman of the kind of Americanism that makes one's blood tingle, the Roosevelt Republican committee sent a letter to each delegate and alternate to the Republican convention yesterday urging votes for the colonel's nomination at Chicago.

Colonel Roosevelt, the letter declares, first had the courage to lay bare the evils of divided allegiance among our citizens of foreign origin, and, almost unaided, above the stress and the confusion of the last two years, he has upheld and kept untarnished the standard of our highest patriotism.

The letter, which is signed by George von L. Meyer, chairman of the Roosevelt Republican committee, is as follows:

Dear Sir: The Republican national convention meets at a time of grave national concern.

For three years weakness and irresolution have characterized our government. The Democratic administration has failed to protect the lives of our citizens on the high seas or to hold accountable their destroyers. Disorder and rapine on the Mexican border were ignored until they culminated in actual invasion of our country, then met with an insufficient and ill equipped though gallant military force, so inadequate and ill supplied as to risk humiliation and disaster. Belligerent nations, convinced of the administration's timidity and heedless of its verbal protests, have openly disregarded international law and our rights as neutrals.

Democratic Irresolution.

No adequate measures are being taken to end this national humiliation or to insure the country's safety. The Democratic president began by opposing preparation for defense, suddenly urged it with perfervid exhortation; then, dismissing a cabinet officer who took him at his word, sanctioned an inadequate and vicious measure calculated only to give this country a false sense of security.

Thus irresolute in its foreign policy and irresolute at home, the administration has permitted our citizens to become confused, uncertain, disunited. Leadership due them from their constituted authorities has been altogether lacking. They have consequently divided into groups, some conditioned on allegiance to countries from which they or their ancestors came. Fostered by such circumstances, false leaders have arisen with vague assurances of security and evil counsels of inaction, adding to the confusion and exposing us to increasing dangers.

In its emergency our country turns to the Republican party for restoration and guidance. It will accept Republican leadership if real leadership is offered, but will turn away again from mere opportunism. It is for us as Republicans patriotically and loyally disregarding all other motives to perform the required service in the spirit the occasion and our fellow countrymen demand.

We urge a course for our party which we believe will instantly (even before the election and inauguration of the new president) unite our citizens in a common purpose. The convention can meet the emergency with a single name. Its nomination for president will be the measure of Republican capacity.

Speaks For Americanism.

Theodore Roosevelt, without official title, without a vestige of official power, is by common consent in this supreme hour the spokesman of our Americanism. He first discerned the weakness of our foreign policy, now so humiliatingly and alarmingly apparent. While others were faltering, he first began to arouse our national conscience to realize it is time to act
