The Printer's Art.

Twenty years is but a short interval in the chronology of an art that is more than four hundred years old, but a good deal has been done for the improvement of printing between the years 1870 and 1890. Cylinder presses have supplanted hand and platen presses in printing wood cuts and large editions of fine books. Dry paper has taken the place of damp paper. In many large printing houses the appliances for dampening have been abolished, or set aside to be used only for rough and hand made papers.

Smooth surface papers of moderate price have been introduced that take a sharper impression and show clearer grays and more vigorous blacks than can be had from impressions on the luxurious India and Japan papers. Easy working and durable black inks are as common now as they were scarce twenty years ago. Electrotype plates are made of smooth surface, and are curved with unharmed lines to fit the cylinders of rotary printing machines on which they produce presswork that fully meets the most exacting requirements.

Last, but not least, the final pressing of the printed work, which makes a solid and shapely magazine, is done more quickly and more thoroughly by pressing in the fold than was ever done when the work was pressed in sheets.—Theodore L. De Vinne in Century.

Dr. Hall is encouraging travel to Spain by his lecture on Spain. He says one can live comfortably in a palace in Seville for $3 a week.

IN GLAD WEATHER.

I do not know what skies there were,
Nor if the wind was high or low;
I think I heard the branches stir
A little, when we turned to go.
I think I saw the grasses sway
As if they tried to kiss your feet—
And yet, it seems like yesterday,
That day together, sweet.

I think it must have been in May;
I think the sunlight must have shone;
I know a scent of springtime lay
Across the fields; we were alone
We went together, you and I;
How could I look beyond your eyes?
If you were only standing by
I did not miss the skies!

I could not tell if evening glowed,
Or noonday heat lay white and still
Beyond the shadows of the road;
I only watched your face, until
I knew it was the gladdest day,
The sweetest day that summer knew—
The time when we two strolled away
And I saw only you!

—Charles E. Going in Scribner's

THE FIRST STEP.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your own satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into nervous prostration. You need a nerve tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the liver and kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. ### How to Tell a Black Hen's Egg.

A man who was fond of a joke went to the market, where he stopped at a poulterer's stall.

"Two dozen black hen eggs, if you please."

The woman in charge opened her eyes wide with astonishment.

"How can any one tell the eggs of a black hen?"

"[illegible]"

"Well, Gran, choose for yourself."

The customer picked out the twenty-four largest eyes he could find, paid, and walked off.—New York Telegram.

What a Shanghai Rats.

J. S. Rickey walked into our office the other morning and gently deposited on our table a bright, shiny, big rat, a log chain link, a bar of steel ten inches long and a large file, all of which he said he took out of the crew of a Shanghai rooster, which he had killed Sunday morning for dinner, because he expected his pastor to dine with him on that occasion. The gamey chicken stated that it was supposed the said rooster had devoured an Italian grass wagon some time in his life, and digested all of it but the samples shown, which, being steel, were too hard for him. This seems a pretty hard story, and if Mr. Richey was not a very truthful gentleman we wouldn't believe it.—Exchange.

He Was Out.

"This pitcher is over a hundred years old, and belonged to my grandmother's days," said Miss Antique.

"Ah," responded Sportbee, with the first interest he had shown in the bric-a-brac room, "I didn't know they played baseball then. Were you fond of the game?"—Detroit Free Press.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that most terrible disease, consumption. Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of 50c to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's porous plaster. Sold by D. B. Spaulding.

THE NEW DISCOVERY.

You have heard your neighbors and friends talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, chest or lung trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at N. P. Brainard's drugstore. 6

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

A Week's Record of Events at the National Capital.

(From the News' Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1891.

It requires no extraordinary perceptive powers to see that the present is a period of great uncertainty with the politicians. When they drop into Washington they are as eager as newspaper men to gather each other's views. They will talk to you for half an hour and tell you things that would make a stir if printed in connection with their names, but they never fail to conclude with something like this: "Now, my boy, this is strictly confidential; everything is too mixed for me to father this sort of thing at this time." All of which is conclusive to my mind that the politician is carefully feeling the public pulse, and when he learns what the public wishes he will not be backward in adopting that as his views. The average politician follows, but never leads public opinion, unless he happens to make a mistake, as he sometimes does.

* * *

The Postoffice Department is a very busy place these days. The needs of the service are, owing to its extremely rapid growth, always a long distance ahead of the appropriations made by Congress. Here is an instance: Boston, Chicago and other cities are asking for more letter carriers which in the aggregate amount to more than 1,000. Now Congress has only appropriated for the employment of 450 additional letter carriers, and at least 300 of them will go to small places shown by the census to be entitled to the free delivery service, leaving only 150 to be divided among the big cities which ask for 1,000. The Postmaster General hopes by the adoption of a letter box for every household, if a suitable one can be found among the eight hundred samples submitted to the department, to greatly increase the efficiency of the present force of letter carriers in the large cities.

* * *

Another problem, in connection with the lottery business, is being worked up by the Postoffice department. Shortly after the law shutting lottery matter out of the mails went into effect, the Presidents of the two largest express companies issued an order instructing their agents to refuse all lottery business tendered them. Now the agents of the department have secured proof that the agents of the express companies are ignoring these orders, presumably with the knowledge and consent of the men who issued them, and are doing a heavy lottery business. How to stop this is the question that the legal advisers of the Postmaster General are now studying, and it is probable that if they can see any reasonable prospect of success that an attempt will be made through the courts to compel the express companies to refuse lottery business.

* * *

The secretary of the National Association of Democratic Clubs denies that his organization is engaged in booming Senator Gorman or any other man for the Democratic Presidential nomination. The secretary is an honorable business man of this town, and, in this community, his word will go a good deal farther than any statement made by the sensational paper which originated the charge.

* * *

Mr. Columbus Delano, who was some years ago a member of President Grant's cabinet, is here. He is responsible for the statement that the Republican farmers of Ohio will unanimously support McKinley. Other Ohio Republicans are far from being as confident as Mr. Delano is, and apparently their sources of knowledge of the situation are quite as good as his.

* * *

It is said that Hon. John W. Foster, who in Secretary Blaine's absence is in charge of the reciprocity program, has almost completed the negotiations for reciprocity with another nation, but he declines to make the name of the country public yet. Some think that it is Mexico.

* * *

In spite of the fact that it is thought to be too late to acomplish the desired purpose the administration is pleased that England agreed to its proposition for a closed season in Behring Sea. The publication of the correspondence reflects credit upon Mr. Blaine and shows the falsity of the charge that he was acting in the interest of the lessees of the American sealing privilege. When the arbitration which was months ago agreed upon is to take place will not be determined until the details of the arbitration are settled.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

Mr. Jacob A. Riis, the author of "How the Other Half Lives," spoke May 7, at Huntingdon Hall, New York. He said that he did not like to call his subject "The Sweating System," system being too good a name for it. It might be out of order to call it the sweating swindle. It is a system of cantracts and sub-contracts, so that wages are reduced to the lowest possible point under our present industrial system.

It is not long ago that London was shaken with a tremendous agitation over the condition of the East End, but then there were only 175-000 population to the square mile. That was indeed a horrible state of things, but in New York there are now in certain quarters of the East Side, 330,000 souls to the square mile. The condition of those people is the very worst that can be found in the world, and where there is the greatest opportunity for contagion. The law in New York says no child under sixteen shall work in a shop unless he can read English, and no child under fourteen at all. Yet, in these tenement sweating shops children work from the time they can pull thread.

It is said that New York can beat the world on cheap clothing. This means selling a whole suit of children's clothes for seventy-five cents. Is it a credit to that city that it can beat the world on cheap clothing? A wrong done by this system is that it deprives the honest tailoring men and women from getting a decent living. And if an honest workman has to compete with such low "sweaters," what is his citizenship in this free republic worth?

Unexecuted law is an education in lawlessness. First of all, as an educator, I place the saloon. We are maintaining in our very midst a score of institutions, which, every day in the week and every week in the year, are teaching our growing boys that laws are made only to be broken. If in the future these boys of ours show small regard for their duties as citizens, their duties as men; if they break our hearts by their lawlessness and unrestraint, let us not lament hard fate, or attribute it to the mysterious ways of inscrutable providence; let us lay the blame where the blame belongs, at the door of those who did not rise in indignation and sweep these seminaries of hell from our fair land.—Rev. P. W. Crannell.

Miss Mary A. Ripley of Kearney, Nebraska, in a recent lecture at Buffalo, N. Y., said: "I will venture to say that previous to the year 1900 this doctrine will be greatly broadened so that it shall be stated somewhat like this: In whatever place the interests of women are in consideration there shall women be to watch and protect, to guard and guide, to elect and legislate, to interpret and execute."

In Mississippi one of our teachers taught her class the golden text, "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." The next Sunday only one girl could remember it, and she recited it thus: "Moses, Moses, take off them shoes."

John Baker, one of Phil. Corwin's hired men, went to his home on Pixley Hill last week, sick with the measles.

A. Porter was in this place on business Monday of this week.
