More Dresses for Less Money.

Dressmaking at home is one of the "social nuisances," but a stylish wardrobe at half the cost is one of its compensations. Besides, you have an opportunity of working out your own ideas, which the modiste either can't or won't do. The great fatigue has deterred many ladies from making their own dresses, but with Hall's Bazar Form this objection is entirely removed. It is adjustable, and can be made to fit NEARLY EVERY size. When covered with a waist and arranged to fit your own proportions, the Form becomes an exact model of yourself.

Price of Complete Form, $6.50; Price of Skirt Form, $3.50; Price of Skirt Form, Wood Standard, $3.00. Sent to any address on receipt of price.

All the fashion publishers—Butterick, McCall, Taylor, Demarest, Harper's Bazar, and others—unite in saying that Hall's Bazar Form is the only perfect dress-form made. When not in use can be folded and put away like an umbrella.

Write for our illustrated brochure, "More Dresses for Less Money," giving full particulars.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

The late annual dinner of the Alumnæ Association of the New York medical college for women, with nearly 100 women physicians present, Dr. Phœbe Waite, Dr. Julia E. Bradner and Dr. L. H. Munsie were appointed to prepare petitions asking for the extension of suffrage, so that women who now vote for school commissioners, may also vote for excise commissioners. Dr. Bradner in the principal address of the day said: "We women physicians demand of the state of New York that it grant its women the same voice in regulating the health and morals of its children that it already has granted them in regulating their education."

The Arab Anti-Rum Congress in Khartoum was the most striking temperance feature of 1890. While Christian nations were holding their Anti-Slavery Congress at the capitol of Belgium and resolving to "search all vessels suspected of having slaves on board, confiscating the vessel and returning the slaves," the Arabs passed the following:

Resolved, To surround the entire coast of Africa with a cordon of armed ships, to confiscate every European vessel containing liquors, and sell the crews into slavery.

Would that some of the Boston ships that carry rum might fall into the hands of these righteously indignant Arab heathen!

At the competitive examination just held in New York for the position of police matron, twenty-eight women were examined. The women members of the examining board were Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lowell and Miss Ellen Collins both of whom questioned the candidates closely. The salary of matron cannot be more than the lowest salary given to a policeman, $1,000 per annum.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts, in the case of an agent of the New England Dispatch Company, indicted for carrying intoxicating liquors from Boston to Lowell, a no-license city, has decided that the defendant is liable, even if he had no knowledge that the package contained intoxicants.

Mrs. H. M. May has originated a plan for connecting the North and South Side boulevards, Chicago, by an underground tunnel, which is considered so practical by the Marquette Club, that a committee was appointed to go to Springfield to secure the necessary legislation to carry it into operation.

Mrs. J. S. Murrow, of Atoka, Indian Territory, organized a Band of Hope of twenty-three members, at Lehigh, I. T., the 26th of April. The meeting was a very interesting one, and the work taken up in the right spirit. Mrs. Murrow has bright hopes for Lehigh's Band of Hope; those who have this work in charge are true, noble workers.

Two institutions, managed by women, are doing good work in Atlanta, Georgia. The Woman's Industrial Union and the home of the Friendless have united, and will hereafter conduct their work with greatly increased facilities for doing good.

New Jersey is the first state to make an appropriation for the "Immigrant and Sailors' fund," towards the support of the missionary at Castle Garden. At the last Executive Committee meeting, $50 was appropriated for this worthy purpose.

Foreign Dolls at the Capital.

Very near some cradle cases in the National museum are hundreds of dolls, and I see that the children of all the world are alike in their love for toys. Some of the finest dolls come from Alaska, and nearly every tribe has its different kind of doll. Many of them are carved from ivory, and they are made to represent the people who make them.

The doll of the flat headed Indian has a flat head, and one from southern Alaska will have a hole through its lower lip with an ivory pin in it to represent the custom of the ladies of Alaska who pierce their lip in this way. The dolls of the Indians are of both sexes, and not a few of them are tatooed.

One of the Alaskan dolls has a ring in his nose on which are strung red, white and blue beads, and other dolls are made of straw or grasses. The prettiest doll in the world, perhaps, is the Japanese doll, and from the doll you can study the customs of the country. The little bunches of hair on the different parts of a Japanese doll's head enable us to tell just how old it is, and you can tell a Japanese child's age by its hair.

Some of the babies have their heads entirely shaved with the exception of two little wisps of hair under the ears. These are very young babies. After they grow a few months old a ring of hair is allowed to remain about the crown and so they keep on adding until the whole of the head is covered. It is the same in Siam.—Washington Letter.

The Deadly Aqua Tufana.

Secret and deadly poisons for the taking of human life have been manufactured from time to time, and criminal annals show that they have also been put to use. History records that on July 29, 1717, Addison, as secretary of state, addressed a letter to the commissioners of customs in England to rigidly search to prevent the importation and sale of a certain poisonous liquid of which the British envoys at Genoa and Naples had sent large quantities. It appears from their letters that this liquid, called "aqua tufana," from the Greek word which invented it, was introduced in large quantities into Italy, and also in part distilled there, and that it was extensively used for poison.

It was reported that 600 persons had been destroyed by it in Naples alone, and that many persons had been punished capitally for selling or administering it. The culprits engaged in making and disposing of the poison made the singular plea that their object was a good one—namely, that they desired to establish peace and good will in the world by removing all obnoxious persons, such as unruly sons, troublesome wives and so on. The authorities could not see the case exactly in that light, and they used every effort to prevent further traffic in the poison, but it seems met with only partial success.—Chicago News.

Taming Animals with Electricity.

In the future, it seems, wild beast tamers, lion kings, serpent queens and the like, instead of having to assert their authority by means of the whip of pliant steel, will carry a light wand with an insulating grip for the hand, connected by a flexible wire with a battery of which the power can be varied according to the necessities of the case. If the lion or tiger becomes surly and refuses to go through his tricks, or threatens to bite a sample out of his "tamer," a touch of the magic wand will give him a shock that will rouse him up or scare him into submission as the performer wishes. An experiment in this new department of applied science is said to have been successfully made in this instance.—New York Telegram.

Chumpleigh (wearily)—And I come here (yawn) to help Dumleigh do it, you know. (Snores.)—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Mortar Balls.

There is no hod carrying in Japan. The natives have a method of transporting mortar which makes it seem more like play than work—to an onlooker.

Three men were repairing the roof of a one-story building the other day by resetting the heavy black tiles in mortar.

The mortar was mixed in a pile on the street. One man made this up into balls of about six pounds' weight, which he tossed up to a man who stood on a ladder midway between the roof and the ground. This man deftly caught the ball and tossed it up to the man who stood on the roof. This was playing ball to good purpose.—Tokio Letter.

The Difference.

Mrs. C.—You forget that a woman's work is never finished.

Mr. C.—Dog's at me. Mine is always done.—Pittsburg Bulletin.
