Home Pride Comes First

"YOU live in the same place you always did?" we asked a man the other day as we walked up the street with him.

"Yes, in the same old hole," he replied.

The answer was typical of the man. He called home a "hole" and it was a "hole" because he could see nothing else in it.

It has always been a "hole" to him and probably always will be because he hasn't vision enough to see its possibilities.

There are not many people like this in Andover, but there are far more than there should be, simply because they have taken the wrong view of life and their job.

They represent a type who doubtless have suffered some disappointment, some fancied wrong, and they have brooded over it until everything looks dark. They fail to see a bright spot any place in the future.

Home and all that it means depends upon the viewpoint. If we get the proper perspective, home is something more than a "hole" and we take a just pride in making it respectable.

A humble home may be made just as attractive as a home on which money is lavished. It may be beautiful in the exact degree to which we give time and thought to it.

Pride in our community, our county, state and nation begins with home pride and those who take a justifiable pride in the place they live can be put down as good citizens.

As Old As the Ages

BACK near the beginning of things, our prehistoric forbears would have perished from the earth if they had not understood the science of reading advertising.

The cavemen didn't know much about underwear, soap or automobiles, but they did have to eat. The one who could follow the tracks of the game he hunted, or read the meaning of a twisted leaf or broken twig, was best off in life.

Then as now, the most consistent reader of advertising was best dressed, best fed and most contented.

There has been somewhat of an evolution in advertising in the last few thousand years, but the principle is just the same.

The consistent reader of advertisements is invariably best informed on what to eat and where to get it; what to wear and how much to pay for it; what to do and how to do it. He's up on the most important things of life. Consequently he gets the most from life.

Thruout the ages, advertising has done much to make life livable and pleasant. We owe it much.

Once upon a time there was a sad movie in which the mother didn't wave good-bye at a distance of ten feet.

The Indianapolis man who sat his house on fire with his cigaret lighter, at least had the satisfaction of having the thing work.

Living To Be 150 Years Old

AN ENGLISH scientist a short time ago made the statement that in his belief, it would not be long until people would be living to attain the age of 150 years.

Probably no one is more eligible to comment on hopes of living longer, than are those who have already become advanced in years. Acting on this plan, a survey was made in England of persons classed as centenarians, and of many interviewed by a press association, recently, most of those agreed that they had no anxiety to live another 50 years.

Every day there are those who are taken that love life and would desire a few more years on this earth. To those the lengthening of life's span would be a most welcome piece of news.

There are few people, if any, who are enjoying good health and are happy, who would not welcome a continuance of life, even if it would be extended beyond the one hundred year period.

Probably those interviewed had become broken in health and spirit, and were willing to call their life's work at an end, but on the other hand the great majority of us will bend every effort to maintain our hold on life until the powers above interfere.

The following are just a few comments contained in the interview of those who had reached the one hundred mark or more, and judging from their answers they have had enough of the worry and troubles of this earth:

Mrs. Sarah Kirby, 101, of Clapham, London—"I have been journeying for a long time in the world. I want to go home. It is dusk, and I am glad of it. I have no wish for renewed strength and life. I have often wondered why I have been allowed to live long—and to live longer still—no."

Mrs. Olivia Davies, 100, of Charlton, London, aunt of Sir Walford Davies, the composer: "The idea of this doctor is absolutely senseless. I never heard of anything more ridiculous in all my life. When a woman gets to my age she is only too glad to leave the world."

James Moore, 100, of East Dulwich, London: "No, I have not the slightest wish to be made young again and to live on. To experience again the inevitable sadness of bereavement—no."

Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, 104, of East Putney, London: "Life is worth while all the time you have love in it. I have my strength more than most women of 80. But at 104 to take a fresh lease of life—no! The responsibility is too great. Let Mother Nature have her own way—Let there be no interfering."

Service Above Self

FUNERAL services were held lately in a remote section of Colorado for a Rotarian—a Rotarian in spirit and living at least—and for a man who probably never attended such a meeting.

A press dispatch from Craig, Colorado, brought the message of the death of Dr. B. A. Abrogast, an eccentric, old fashioned physician, who had lived among the natives of that section of the country for a quarter of a century, ministering to their lives without charge.

Thruout his living, he had placed service above self. Today the great organization of Rotarians are doing much to encourage the same practice, and Dr. Abrogast unknowingly for the past 25 years had been a true Rotarian in spirit.

This doctor selected the lonely backwoods in which to practice, and showed a studied disregard for things modern. He was buried near his cabin, high on a hillside, in a sparsely settled community.

No call of his ailing fellowman went unanswered. Just three weeks before his death, he put his horse thru a three-foot snow to give a remote rancher's twins their start in life. Altho ministering freely at all times to the cowboys and homesteaders, he never charged for his services. He lived from the free-will offerings of his patients, which usually consisted of food, grain or flour. He spurned telephones and automobiles, and answered calls on horseback. His cabin could not be reached with machines.

This man placed service above self. He could have made a fortune in any large community, but he preferred to serve in his own chosen way. He was a graduate from the Ohio medical college, and spent several years abroad in Berlin and Paris, taking postgraduate courses. The West called him, and his service to humanity ended with his 84 years of life well spent.

Overheard at a Dinner Party

Bill: "Julia, this certainly is the best coffee I've had in a dog's age. What kind is it?"

Julia: "It's Heart's Delight. We use it exclusively now."

Bill: "Ka e, what kind of coffee do we use?"

Kate: "Well, you know those beautifully colored coffee ads in the magazines are simply irresistible. I ode: — — and then — — but neither equals this."

Bill: "I was in Grocer White's at noon yesterday just as Scoville, Brown & Co.'s truck was unloading. I asked him if he bought much from them. He said his business with them was increasing right along because of the high quality of the Heart's Delight line and their splendid service. He said he was waiting on a customer last Wednesday who wanted a pound of Heart's Delight, and he needed to open the case when it came off the truck. The coffee was still warm from the roaster. White says a number of his most particular coffee customers have changed over to Heart's Delight, largely because it reaches them so very much fresher."—advertisement.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for January 27

The Holy Spirit

John 16:7-14; Romans 8:12-17, 26, 27
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

This lesson study is the introduction to a Person. It is an amplification of the confession in our Apostles Creed, "I believe in the Holy Ghost." While multitudes make that creedal statement they do not have an intimate knowledge of this third Person in the Triune God. The Holy Spirit is as distinct a Person as is God the Father, and Christ the Son.

All Three are equally, externally existent. Revelation, however, of the personality and activity came in time. From the first Jehovah God was known as the Father. Far back in history there were evidences of the Second Person and there were repeated promises of the Advent of the Son, which were fulfilled in the coming of the Messiah. There are also many prophecies concerning the Holy Spirit in the old Testament, one of the most distinctive being that in Joel 2:28-29, which was specifically fulfilled in the Day of Pentecost, after the Ascension of Jesus Christ. Jesus spoke clearly, tho He did not explain the extent of the meaning when He told of the eagerness of the Father to bestow the Holy Spirit on His beloved. Much more than earthly parents delight in giving good things to their children does Jehovah have joy in making the Holy Spirit available to those who are willing to meet the conditions.

Among the many references in the Bible the following are selected for specific study today by the Lessons Committee: Joel 2:28-29; Luke 11:9-13; John 3:5-8; 14:16, 17, 26, 15:26-27; 16:7-15; Acts 2:1-21, 32, 33; Romans 8:1-17; 26,-27. I. Corinthians 12:1-13; Ephesians 1:13-14; 3:14-21; 4:1-6, 30. Turn to your concordance and the Bible Dictionary for many other portions. A very helpful book for collateral reading is "A help to the study of the Holy Spirit," W. E. Biederwolf, D.D.

Obediently the disciples waited in prayer for ten days after the Ascension. Then came the advent of the Holy Spirit to them in Jerusalem as miraculous signs were wrought. The abiding personal evidence was their new possession of spiritual power for service, as witnessed in the conversions which followed Peter's sermon on that day, when 3,000 believed. Such evidences were repeated in the abiding Presence with them both for companionship and power in service.

The Holy Spirit is graciously helpful in prayer, Paul states. The Holy Spirit takes our "unuttered groanings" and makes right and specific petitions to the Father on our behalf. He is always convicting us of sin and making the work of Jesus effective as our Saviour. The life of the Christian is not meterially lived. It is lived resultfully only thru spiritual possessions.

How are your house-plants? Do they need help? About this time of the year they may begin to look spindly and weak. This is due to the injuries caused by small green insects, known as plant lice, or aphids, which suck the life juices of the leaves and stems. Cornell has a bulletin which tells how to control aphids on house plants. If you wish it, write to the office of publication, state college of agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., and ask for bulletin E162.

A farm inventory and a credit statement will tell where you stand in the farming business, and may help you get the loan you need to expand that business.

Guess in haste and repent in leasure. Plan in time and all is fine.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture. A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

A further improvement in braking performance is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in steady, uniform contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent in operation.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.
