THE ANDOVER NEWS.

HAMILTON O. NORRIS, - EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., Nov. 18, 1891.

A strong effort is being made to have New York City designated as the place for holding the National Republican Convention in 1892.

The first week in October, 1892, is the time set for the National Encampment of the G. A. R. in Washington. Nearly forty Posts have already engaged quarters for the encampment.

November 30th has been set by the Supreme Court as the day to argue the case involving the constitutionality of the McKinley Tariff Act, and the case involving the right of the Speaker of the House of Representatives to count a quorum. These cases, although brought in the name of business firms, are regarded as political; but that does not lessen the importance of the decisions—in fact it rather adds to it. If the Supreme Court shall hold that Speaker Reed had authority to count a quorum whenever enough members were in the House, whether they answered to their names or not, it will be a death-blow to that style of fillibustering.

Senator Saxton, author of the Saxton ballot reform law, said Saturday that on the first day the Legislature meets in January he shall introduce an amendment to that law, providing for a blanket ballot; another bill amending the Corrupt Practices Act, with a provision compelling political committees to state specifically in what manner they used the campaign funds intrusted to them; and for a second time his proposed amendment to the Constitution, transferring to the courts the decision upon contested election cases, such as contested seats in the Legislature. The amendment to the Constitution providing that the courts shall decide contested election cases was approved by the Legislature of 1891, and only needs to be approved by the Legislature of 1892 to come before the the people for their action.

During a campaign many persons wonder why so much pains is taken by those interested in the success of any ticket to bring every possible vote to its aid; that on election day so much time will be spent and expense incurred to bring the last voter to the polls. People wonder because they do not realize the fact that a majority of one is just as valuable and powerful as a majority of one thousand. At every election there are several cases to prove the importance of a single vote. In the recent election a specially notable case occurred. It has just been decided in Sullivan County, that the Republican candidate for Member of Assembly, Mr. Kenrick, who was at first supposed to have a safe majority, really wins by a majority of one. The canvass was exactly in accordance with the returns. There was no attempt made by the Republicans to force their man in nor by the Democrats to force him out. But the importance of that one vote in Kenrick's case reaches farther than the decision whether he or somebody else shall represent the District in the Assembly. It may decide whether the Assembly itself shall be Republican or Democratic!

OUTSIDE TESTIMONY.

The Advantages of Having a School Under the Regents.

The article in the NEWS last week written by Prof. Armstrong, relative to placing the Andover School under the charge of the Regents, received a wide reading, and the matter has been freely discussed during the past week. Prof. Armstrong has received letters from the Principals of the Belmont and Cuba Schools, both of which have taken the step which Mr. Armstrong advises the Andover School to take. These letters are interesting as showing the benefits to be derived by putting a School in shape to receive its share of the moneys appropriated for educational purposes, and at the same time open a wider field for the growth of the school.

They are as follows:

BELMONT N. Y., Nov. 14th, 1891.

Principal T. H. Armstrong, Andover, N. Y.

DEAR MR. ARMSTRONG: I notice in the Andover NEWS an article from your pen regarding Regents' work and the desirability of establishing an academic department in your school. I want to heartily endorse the statements made in that article. Belmont Academy has had an academic department for two years. The school district bonded itself, in the fall of 1889, for $800, in order to purchase the needed books and apparatus. Please note that this is considerably more money than your school will need to raise. You state that the Regents' income will pay the interest on the money required. Our income from the Regents has not only done this, but is rapidly paying the principal. You claim that the academic department will build up the school. Ours has done so. The tuition money three years ago had never exceeded $80 per year. Last year it was about $300, and this year we expect $400. Our public money has increased nearly as rapidly. Three years ago the average registration in the school was 154; this fall we have registered 235. Of course the expenses have increased somewhat, but not as rapidly as the income. The amount raised by taxation for maintenance of the school is, I believe, exactly the same as before the introduction of the academic department. There is some prospect that it will be decreased next year.

To sum up the whole matter, we are well satisfied with our experiment. We have better school advantages without increased expense. The young people of Belmont went to Alfred University and to other schools for educational advantages; now they stay at home, and the young people from other towns come here. We have made outgo an income, and ANDOVER CAN DO THE SAME. Few schools in Western New York are better situated for attracting foreign attendance, and the only wonder is that this was not realized long ago.

Yours very truly,

JAY CTISSEY.

CUBA, N. Y., Nov. 10th, 1891.

FRIEND ARMSTRONG: Your letter of yesterday reached me today. I must ask to be pardoned for not sending on the statement in relation to the amount of money we receive from the Regents. The rate per pupil is not the same every year, as you doubtless know. Two years ago last June I reported 41 pupils that met the Regents' requirements, to be counted in the distribution of the Regents' money. The 41 drew about $170 for their attendance. A year ago last June I reported 46 pupils and they drew $180. Last June I reported 49 pupils; if they draw $180 we expect to receive over $300, for diplomas and certificates will make nearly as much as attendance. The amount we are to receive on credentials for last year's work is as follows:

2 Classical Diplomas at $15	$30
2 Academic " at 10	20
24 Certificates at $5	120
	$170

Making a total, with amount received for attendance, of $350.

A school under charge of the Regents will, in a few years, draw from the Regents more money than it cost to put the school in this charge; besides, the school has all the use of the library and apparatus for which the expense was incurred. Better work can be done, as the interest can more easily be kept up. The school that is under the Regents has, as a rule, a better name and higher standing, especially in the estimation of educated men.

Yours respectfully,

J. E. DEWEY.
