THE ANDOVER NEWS.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, - EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., MAY 13, 1891.

Senator Fassett has declared that he cannot under any circumstances consent to again be a candidate for the office of Senator.

Secretary Blaine may have a chance now to demand indemnity from Italy. An American citizen and his daughter have been stoned by a mob at Florence.

It is possible because the following two sentences appear together in a dispatch from Rome that they are so significant: "The Papala Ramana says that it will be impossible hereafter for any civilized country to make a treaty with the United States based upon reciprocal protection of the lives of citizens of either country. About 1,200 emigrants left Naples for New York to-day on the steamer Victoria, and 200 others by Italian vessels."

It is announced from Albany that this year's state tax-rate will be 1.38 mills on the dollar, a reduction of one mill from last year. The aggregate assessed valuation on which the State tax was levied last year was $3,683,654,062, and the tax raised amounted to $8,619,748. This year's aggregate valuation will no doubt be greater than last year's, but to be on the safe side, call it only $3,500,000,000. Then the saving to the tax-payers by a reduction of one mill in the tax-rate will be $500,000.

A daily paper should give all the news, as much gossip as is interesting and clean, be bright without being frivolous, be independent in politics without being neutral. The Buffalo Express comes as near to realizing this ideal as any sheet in our exchange pile. We cordially commend it to such of our readers as want a well-edited, complete city newspaper. It can be had at $8 a year daily; or $10, daily and Sunday.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

You'll Have to Avoid the Saloon.

You stand on the threshold of youth, boys,
Your future lies out in the years;
You're learning your parts for life's work, boys,
You're planning your future career.
You'll have to fill places of trust, boys,
Your fathers will pass away soon;
And if you'd be trustworthy men, boys,
You'll have to avoid the saloon.

If you would be honored in life, boys,
If joy and contentment you'd know;
If you would have plenty of cash, boys,
And bask in prosperity's glow;
If you would enjoy robust health, boys,
That priceless, but much abused boon;
If God's benediction you'd have, boys,
You'll have to avoid the saloon.

You'll have to avoid the saloon, boys,
Or sorrow and shame you'll share.
And poverty's crust you will eat, boys,
And poverty's rags you will wear.
Your future will end in disgrace, Boys,
Your life will be cut off at its noon,
Both body and soul will be lost, boys,
Unless you avoid the saloon.

—LAURA C. GIBBONS.

No diploma is required to nurse a resentment.

The goal of yesterday will be the starting point of to-day.—Carlyle.

The immediate need of the world at this moment is not more of us, but, if I may use the expression, a better brand of us.

Miss Annie M. Barr is a working engineer in Chicago, running a stationery engine and taking charge of all the machinery in her department.

A young man in a London omnibus noticed the blue-ribbon total abstinence badge on a fellow-passenger's coat, and asked him in a bantering tone how much he got for wearing it.

"That I can't exactly say," replied the other, "but I can tell you what it costs me to wear it—just about twenty thousand pounds a year."

The wearer of the badge was Frederick Charrington, son of a rich brewer and intended successor in his father's business. He had been convinced of the evil of the ale and beer trade, and refused to continue in it, though it would have brought him an income of twenty thousand pounds a year. He preferred a life of Christian philanthropy to a career of money making, and his activity soon made him known through the land as a most successful temperance evangelist. His work, organized in the tent meetings on Mile End Road, has steadily increased for nearly twenty years, and now fills the largest mission hall in the world.

Woman has not suffered alone from the denial to her of her political equality. The human race is like a man who through infancy, youth and manhood has compelled his right leg to bear the burden of his body, regarding the left merely as an ornamental appendage, to be swung up by supports, and tricked out with ribbons, lace and jewelry. The one would be nerveless and feeble, the other lame and overworked, and the progress of the whole body would be halting, uneven and slow. So with the body politic. All who are interested in public affairs feel how lame, unequal and imperfect is the advance of society, and how heavily drag the mighty interests of the great Republic. It will be no better until complete justice is done the women. With her enfranchisement there will come a nobler era. Then, with interests that are identical, with a humanity common to both; the masculine head married to the feminine heart, wisdom supplemented with love, men and women shall together work out the great problems of life, and a nobler and better civilization shall come to the waiting future.—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore.

"Uncle Rube," which gave such unbounded satisfaction here a few months ago, will give even better this time, as the cast will be more at home and the new scenery will enable the play to be staged as it should be. Mr. Sidman promises to give us the prettiest stage settings ever seen here.

The Arbor Day exercises at the school were carried out as announced in last week's NEWS, the only disappointment being in the small number of spectators present. In the afternoon a fine pole sixty feet high was raised, and the school's flag now has an appropriate abiding place. The band was out and discoursed excellent music. The vote on the State flower was as follows: Rose, 145; golden rod 37.

The magnitude of the cheese interests of this section calls for the establishment of a cheese exchange, which has been determined on at Jamestown. It is thus proposed to centralize the cheese trade of Western New York after the manner of the exchanges at Utica, Little Falls, and elsewhere.—Cherry Creek News.

The dwelling house owned by the Levi F. Rogers estate, and occupied by S. Murray, in the south-west part of Greenwood, was burned about five o'clock yesterday morning. The house and the greater part of Mr. Murray's goods were entirely destroyed, Mr. Murray and family having only time to get out of the house with a few articles. Mr. Murray's insurance on goods is $300. Insurance on house $800.

"If," says the Insurance World, "The lives insured in a single year could be made to pass in military order a fixed point of view, some idea might be gathered as to the vastness of the work accomplished by the agents. Take the Equitable, for instance, with 54,576 lives secured last year, or enough to make 54 regiments of a thousand men each and 576 over." Mr. Will H. Crandall of Alfred Centre, N. Y., represents the Equitable in this vicinity.

Miss Mary W. Niles, M. D., medical missionary from China, gave a very interesting talk before the Woman's Presbyterian Missionary Society, at the residence of Jas. Owen last week on Wednesday. She also exhibited many curiosities, among which was a most exquisitely embroidered robe which was presented her by the wife of one of the officials. Altogether the ladies were greatly pleased and only regretted that there were not more to hear her.

Assemblyman Thompson has received a letter from Col. Curtis stating that the first State dairy school has been located at Cuba, to be open on Tuesday May 19. Col. Curtis will have charge of the school himself, which statement is of itself a guarantee that it will be an occasion which no dairyman in this vicinity can afford to miss. Now, dairymen, and farmers generally, take hold and make the opportunity one of profit to yourselves. The privilege of attending such a school of instruction is worth many dollars to you, and costs you nothing but your interested attention. Mr. Thompson has been to no little trouble in securing the school here, and his efforts are appreciated by all. The school will last four days.—Cuba Patriot.

The Circus.

E. O. Rogers' Great Pacific shows exhibited in Andover last Thursday, and was the best show that ever visited Andover. The gorgeous street parade occurred at noon, and was well worth coming twenty miles to see. The procession was over a quarter of a mile in length, and was headed by the golden band chariot, followed by elephants, camels, lions, tigers, and more different kinds of wild animals than ever saw the inside of Noah's ark, also cages containing all the monsters of the deep. These were followed by fine horses, dogs, &c., altogether making a grand spectacle to look upon. After the parade the grand balloon ascension and parachute decent took place. Mmle. Neville made a successful ascent to the clouds, and when almost out of sight she jumped from the balloon and descended in the parachute while the thousands of spectators held their breath and gazed with awful wonder at the thrilling sight. The performance inside the tent was a continual round of the most daring and artistic bareback riding, tumbling, and acrobatic performances, intersperced with new and original jokes and songs. The tent was crowded to its utmost capacity both afternoon and evening, and probably the best satisfied people that ever entered a circus tent were those who were fortunate enough to witness this, the greatest triumph of the century in the line of circus and menagerie. Since the show left town the people of this community feel that life would henceforth not be worth living were it not that they could recall the pleasures and scenes of the "only great" Pacific Shows.

P. S.—The above is an unmitigated lie from beginning to end, and don't you forget it.

NOTES.

The man that went up in the balloon wasn't in it.

The most successful features of the day were the "shell game" and the soap racket. They worked to perfection, as many are aware, but it cost them from $10 to $30 to find out.

If it is true that people like to be humbugged, Rogers ought to get rich in about two weeks, for it would be difficult to imagine a bigger humbug than his circus.

And we don't believe a man could gather together a tougher looking lot of people if he were to rake the earth, Gehenna and the infernal regions with a garden rake.

If this "send off" isn't sufficient to pay for half a dozen complimentary tickets, we'll try again.

WISPS FROM WELLSVILLE.

DEAR NEWS:—The past week has not been one of unalloyed brightness to Wellsville. The sable wings of death have fluttered over the town, and on Saturday four women lay dead within its limits. Mrs. Robert Palmer, an honored wife and mother, at the age of 63, folder her hands, her life work done, and without fear passed over the river. Mrs. Francisco, also past middle age, a loving mother, Christian woman and a faithful friend, closed her eyes on earthly things, to open them in the great beyond. Also Clara, the blind daughter of Christopher Grastorf, who recently returned from an institute for the blind, died at her home Friday, aged 29 years. No more groping in the dark or straining those sightless eyes, for who shall doubt that they shall be opened in the Beautiful City of Eternal Rest? The fourth, a woman noted in the town for many years, a woman over whose head sixty odd years have passed, once young, innocent and comely. But these later years—what have they not contained? Filled to the very brim her cup has been, and many have drank thereof, even to the bitter dregs. Women, her victims; men her tools; knowing how dark this blot has been, I have listened with ears alert, curious to know the comments made upon this piece of clay by those of her own sex, and let me say the sex has taken a sudden rise in our esteem since then. One white-souled woman said, "Poor thing, who knows how—she was tempted?" From another came the solemn answer, "None but God." From another came the remark, "Those who helped her to sin will have to stand their full share before the great white throne." There will be no shirking there. So while the solemn words, "Dust to Dust," were being said over the senseless clay, the white-souled women of Wellsville hold wide the mantle of charity, even though it covers a multitude of sin.

Again Monday, at one o'clock, the dread messenger entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Richards and bore away their youngest son, Charles, aged about 15. Twice within the past year have they been called to give up a loved one; first an only daughter; now the youngest son. Mr. and Mrs. Richards have the sympathy of all.

Forest fires are burning all around us and the dense smoke and fog that has settled over Wellsville makes the town look——well perhaps a little Erie, and the only really bright thing on our streets, are a score, more or less, of new delivery wagons, and they are grand. Our grocerymen have, as one little chap said, laid themselves out to do a nice thing, and have succeeded so well that a stranger would go away with the impression that the Wellsville delivery boys were really the aristocrats of the town. And indeed there is not one among them but deserves the fine turn-out he drives, for be it known, they are a jolly, patient, long-suffering set of chaps, that fortune, the fickle dame, cannot be too kind too. Some time we may tell you something more about them. G.
