NEEDED—MORE CO-OPERATION

Co-operation, to most of us students, is only a word used by our teachers and various executives. It seems to have no meaning for us!

Actually, a great deal depends upon co-operation when it comes to the successfulness of an undertaking. One-half the battle is won before it is begun if all those concerned work together with sincere and earnest good will and enthusiasm. To "make a go of a thing" we need more than the support of one or two—or five or six—individuals. Everyone must be in there "pulling for each other."

We may use, as an example, a basketball team—our own, if you wish. Certainly lack of co-operation would show up in such a group as quickly perhaps, as in any group one can name. Even the non-cooperation of one man is a serious detriment to the strength of the team.

The success of our organizations here in school, such as the chorus, the band, the orchestra, the newspaper and the new clubs which have been organized can be achieved only thru 100 per cent co-operation on the part of the students. Moreover only in this way can we obtain the satisfaction which we desire from them. ALH

Mumps Visit ACS Faculty

One of the faculty seems to be entertaining the mumps. Miss Gottleib, of the fourth grade, is being a perfect hostess. Miss Anderson is a very worried (future) hostess. She even visited the school nurse to learn what a hostess should look like.

Our future host is Mr. Maloy. He walks around near the windows and projects his jaws into the glass. He is worrying for fear that he may have to hold his cheeks out involuntarily.

Miss Hanneman liked the mumps so well she has already entertained them four times. Here are some comments made by the faculty:

Miss Daly says she is not worried but "just waiting."

Mr. Ingerson says "If you are going to have the mumps you are going to have them and there is nothing you can do about it."

Miss Mahl says: "All the teachers are going to have them."

Mr. McGee has had the mumps.

Miss Linehan and Miss Jaekle are "scared to death of them."

When Mr. Fribolin was asked if he had had the mumps Pat Lynch answered and said, "No, but if he did have them we could have a few weeks' vacation."

We wish the teachers much luck with this new venture. CH

Pupils Take Regents This Week

A total of approximately 140 pupils are trying Regents examinations this week, according to information secured at the school office. This examination week marks the close of the first semester.

The largest group trying Regents examinations is the eighth grade consisting of about 50 members, all of whom will take the Regents in spelling and geometry. Other elementary Regents examinations will be held in English, history and arithmetic.

In the high school group, economics and trigonometry head the list with all pupils in both classes totaling 14 taking the examinations. Chemistry, biology, history A, B and C, and typing will each have a few pupils trying the Regents. SM

Home Economics Class Serves Breakfast

Last week the Home Economics class made its first attempt at serving itself a meal, that of breakfast. Previously the girls have made such things as salads and soups.

Altho they burned the toast while keeping it warm in the oven, the breakfast was a success. The menu was as follows:

Fruit Cup
Oatmeal and Raisins
Cinnamon Toast
Cocoa.

CHIT-CHAT

What's this we hear about Miss Anderson losing a book in her own desk?

There is nothing quite like slim necks. They say massaging is excellent for it. Or was it mumps the faculty was seeking?

It's nice to be small sometimes. Especially in time of an emergency. Patrick Lynch occupied the loft near the window on the bus Thursday night. He could get a nice view of the outside (?).

What certain Senior girl is getting egotistical?

It's rumored that the music organizations are going to hold a skating party in the near future. Let's hope so!

Did you finally get your seat on the bus, Anna?

The majority of the Senior Class "tuned in" on the "Tale of Two Cities" on the Lux Hour Monday night. It was interesting and was a good review for their test on this Dicken's novel the next morning.

Why is Marian studying hard lately?

Marilyn ought to be an actress. Have her do her impersonations for you some time.

Why didn't Ruth cheer at the game Thursday? It couldn't be—?

Pat said she had a "wonderful time" at the Richburg game. I wonder why?

A. C. S. was well represented at the Red Cross benefit dance.

It is understood that a certain few had a swell time at a party at Barb's house after the dance Friday night.

Lights on, lights off. Bus one should think of defense and save the battery (electricity). Successive lighting effects could be eliminated if there were less oratory (?) from the feminine sector, eh, Rose?

Jane and Miss Hanneman ran into a little competition in the English room this week when Jane tried to push the door wide open, and Miss Hanneman tried to force the door back to keep from being squashed against the wall.

So many of us were disappointed by the decision to take two buses. Inconvenient for some, isn't it Ruth?

A tip to the girls—keep toast hot in the oven—but not at 550 degrees—it smokes!

If the typewriters were out, don't be surprised. Some economics students were really "going to town" down there. Definition after definition was typed out.

Four Seniors rang the bell at 90 or above in English IV. Nice going Jean, John, Vic and Wendell! JR-PEL

Creative Arts In Agriculture

The Ag. boys are working on various projects including electric lamps, both wall and table, a gun rack of deer horns, potato crate, waste baskets, bobs, a wood box, tool box, note box, and skate walkers.

The boys work on these projects during class time. Some have original plans and others secure information either from Mr. Fribolin or books. These projects will be displayed in the showcase when they are finished. PEP

The Electron Theory – Oh, Sure!

"If an eon has a volume of —2, class, what does that mean?"

"It means that the eon is a nonmetal, that it has two electrons to give away, and that there is one more electron than plus charges in the nucleus."

"That's all wrong. Look, can't you see that it's logical to lend electrons if you have a negative charge?

"No."

Both students and Mr. Maloy were deeply involved in a subject on which no two minds thought alike. Mr. Maloy wiped his forehead with a familiar gesture and let out a sigh that nearly blew the hair from the heads of the class. Explanation was wavered until the next day, when the electron theory was successfully embedded in the minds of the chemistry class (they hope)!

General Science Project Completed

The Freshman general science class, conducted by Mr. Maloy, has been working on projects on the subject of "Water and Sewage Disposal Systems." These projects were begun January 5 and were completed January 16. Students worked on them outside of class.

Each project included a general plan of supplying fresh water to houses and removing waste material from the buildings. Several projects were planned for an entire community with streets and buildings as parts of the plans. CH

Grade News

Miss Sally Jones, a kindergarten pupil, has been ill for a long time.

Some things do get around. It happens that the lower grades have a bad epidemic of mumps. In Miss Gottlieb's room the pupils, plus Miss Gottlieb have the mumps.

Exciting comics, more commonly known as "funny books," are getting to be a veritable fad among our "lower classmen."

A new pupil, Jeanne Jaekle from Silver Creek, has entered the eighth grade room of her sister, Miss Ethel Jaekle.

With Needle and Spoon

The homemaking department is doing its patriotic duty by mending the school flag which was torn by the wind.

Even tho the eighth graders say they don't like oatmeal, especially with raisins, they seemed to eat it—or did they throw it away when Miss Mahl wasn't looking?

The eighth graders wanted to be sure they had marshmallows in their cocoa, so they bought a couple of extra packages. Now the homemaking room boasts two quarts of marshmallows.

Trying to keep the cinnamon toast "warm" while they ate their breakfast, the Homemaking A girls put the toast in a 550 degree oven. — When they got there . . . the toast was burned to a crisp. Better luck next time, girls!

Among some of the new books purchased for the Homemaking Department are:

Personality and Etiquette, by Lillian N. Reid.

Housing and the Home, by Shultz.

The American Woman's Cook Book," Ruth Berolzheimer.

The Language of Fashion, Mary Brooks Pickens. PEP

LOCALS EDGE OUT RICHBURG AND WIN 22-21

The Purple Panthers moved one step further toward the top in league participation by outscoring a fast moving Richburg Club 22-21 on the opponents court last Thursday evening. In doing so they also moved into sole possession of second place behind Whitesville and dropped Richburg back to third in the league.

The boys all played good ball in making up their third league win, with Ruger, Karcanes and Dolan outstanding on the scoring side.

The locals came from behind a 6-4 first quarter score to even things up 8-8 at halftime and go on from there by a third quarter rally to win by a narrow one point margin. During the middle of the third quarter the Panthers had a seven point lead over the Richburg five, but a couple of baskets by Monahan evened things up a little and Richburg got back in the game.

"Slip" Karcanes played one of his best games of the year in this win and dropped in the points when they were really needed. "Naze" Dolan and Stan Ruger also played an important part in this game. "Slip" held scoring honors for the evening with eight points. Stan and "Naze" each made six. Wightman and Monahan each made seven for Richburg. Summary:

Where?

Old Colored Lady: "Gib me a ticket foh Belinda."

The ticket agent looked thru his stubs carefully. He scratched his head and went thru them once more with no success. "Where is Belinda?"

Colored Lady: "Where is she? Why she's sittin' over dar on a seat."

Everywhere

Louise: "The screen shows bathing girls on the beaches, in swings, on porches, in restaurants, and on the streets."

Josephine: "Yes, they show them everywhere except in bathing."

Hard work, mixed with some intelligence, usually reaps a reward.

"BEAT WHITESVILLE"

The locals will face their toughest test in league participation Friday evening, when they journey to Whitesville to battle for high place in C-2 League. Whitesville is at present leading the league with no losses while Andover stays close behind with only a loss to Whitesville, marring a perfect league record.

Andover's 22-21 win over Richburg put them in sole possession of second place in league standings, while Whitesville also beat Richburg by the same score the previous week. The locals now must win over Whitesville to bring about a first place tie between Whitesville and Andover.

Whitesville's band-box gym is probably the greatest hindrance to a good game of basketball possible, there is hardly room on the court for the ten players let alone the referee.

The locals will take two bus loads to this game, so let's take a good crowd. Remember tomorrow night at Whitesville. MG

RESERVES LOSE IN OVERTIME PERIOD BY 12 TO 9 SCORE

The Junior Varsity dropped a low scoring ball game to the Richburg Jayvees in an overtime period and slipped into second place in the league.

In the last part of the fourth quarter Richburg held a 9-7 lead over the locals. With seconds to play, Jim Driscoll dropped one in from the center of the court to even Richburg up and require an overtime period, during this time Richburg dropped in a foul and a basket to finally win 12-9.

Jim Driscoll played an outstanding game for the locals and also made four points. Dick Ludden was high scorer for Andover with five points. Cornelius was also high for Richburg with five. MG

ASK The Scientist

If you have a question to ask the scientists, mail it to the New York Press Association ,The Castle, Syracuse, N. Y. The Science Board of the Radio Workshop at Syracuse University will answer each week in the Andover News those questions considered most interesting and timely.

Question — Since the United States has taken over Dutch Guinea our attention has been called to bauxite mines which American soldiers are now protecting. Why do we have to get this ore of aluminum from foreign sources?

Answer — When you consider that aluminum makes up 8 per cent of the substances of the earth's crust, it does seem strange that we have to go as far away as Dutch Guinea or anywhere beyond our own backyard to get the ore from which aluminum is extracted. But we have to do it because we depend upon nature to make the first separation, the breaking down of the rock so that the aluminum is accessible to us. We could get aluminum out of clay of which aluminum is a significant constituent, but that would cost more than we could afford. As long as we can get the bauxite in this country, and most of it, about 65 per cent, came from Dutch Guinea.—Dr. Apfel, geologist.

Question 2.—What is the difference between a Florida Gallinule or water chicken and the North American grebe, commonly known as the hell diver?

Answer— Although both frequent the marshy shores of lakes and ponds and are about the same size, the gallinule as its name indicates is a hen-like bird with an olive-brown back, slate colored sides streaked with white, and a red crown plate at the base of its upper bill, and long, slender toes with no webs.

Grebes, on the other hand, have completely webbed feet, are diving birds living exclusively on fish, and like all fish-eating birds have flesh which is rank and inedible to civilized palates. Gallinules are very palatable.—Prof. Henry N. Jones.

Question 3.—Can you mix radiator or anti-freeze?

Answer.—The four common substances used to keep radiators from freezing are wood alcohol, grain alcohol, glycol, and glycerin. Any of these will mix in any ratio with each other. However, if different brands are mixed, than it is impossible to obtain an accurate reading with the hydrometer of the temperature at which such a mixture will freeze so that from then on you will just have to guess at the exact freezing point. In general, it is better to use only one brand of anti-freeze in a car. However, due to priority demands of the war we may be forced to use mixtures before the war is over, and some brands probably will become exhaused. Hence, mixing brands will become a more common practice.—Dr. Albert L. Elder, chemist.

Louisa's Letter

Dear Louisa:

I wish you would write something in your column about visitors who come when you are not expecting them, but fail to arrive when one is looking for them.

This Christmas I invited two of my nieces to visit me and they accepted the invitation. In the meantime, my husband and I received two invitations to spend the holidays with people we like very much but had to decline because we were expecting these girls.

This was bad enough, but what capped the climax was receiving a telegram on Christmas Eve, after supper, saying that they could not come. We found out later that they did not come because of a dance in a distant city to which they had received belated bids. I had prepared a delicious dinner and had plans for their entertainment. At that late hour we could not go to our friends and it was useless to invite anyone in to share our meal as everyone had already planned for Christmas Day.

I never expect to invite those girls to visit me again. Mrs. C.S.J.

I do think your nieces' conduct was inexcusable, and I blame their mother, too. If they had been sick, or had some good reason for not coming it would have been unfortunate but not provoking. All boys and girls should be taught responsibility and dependability in the carrying out of promises.

If these girls had any idea of going to the dance, they should never have accepted your invitation, or they should at least have let you know in time to alter your plans. LOUISA.

Dear Louisa:

I am engaged to a man who has one fault. He drinks, and at times drinks too much. I am only 17 years old and my parents are bitterly opposed to our marriage. I am thinking of eloping because of this.

He loves me dearly and I am sure he will stop drinking after we are married. In fact, he says he will. I don't know why I hesitate, but I would like to know what you think of my problem. Jewel S.

Your problem today is very slight in comparison to the ones you will have to solve if you marry a drunkard.

Look about you and see what the wives and children of drunkards go thru. You see weary, despairing women, and nervous, worried little children who are denied not only luxuries but the very necessities of life. If you want to live a life waiting up at night for a sodden tramp to come home to you, if you want to nurse your children thru illness alone while the man who is supposed to care for and protect you, lies helpless or rends the air with delirium, if you want to drink the dregs of degradation, then my advice to you is to marry a man who drinks too much.

But, Jewel, you are too young to marry anyone for several years yet. At 17 your ideas are unformed and the man you admire now will probably seem unattractive to you when you grow older. And remember this—your mother and father know more about life than you do, and while I do not approve of parents choosing their daughters' husbands, girls will do well to listen to their advice about the men with whom they associate. LOUISA.
