A Note of Warning.

Women, as a rule, are averse, apparently, to beginning at the first page of a sheet of writing paper and following the pages in their sequence. Sometimes, says Vogue, a woman's paper, the fashion is to begin at page two, making that the first page of writing, and the one opposite to it the second. Again, the first page of the sheet is used as first, but the third is made the second, and the real second is made the third. Beyond distracting men recipients of notes, and provoking them to the use of expletives, no one dreamed that any harm would result from such eccentric practice. A recent legal decision affecting an inheritance shows clearly that, however free women may be to skip about in correspondence, their pens must go conventionally from first to second page, and so on to third and fourth, when it comes to will making, else they are in danger of having their wills set aside. This unfortunate happening has overtaken the will of an Isabella Andrews, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The testator made her will on a printed formula, the attestation being on the reverse of the first page of the folded sheet of the document. The provisions of the will were carried over from the first to the third page, but the third page was marked second page. The will concluded and was subscribed and attested on what really was the second page of the sheet, but which was marked page three. The supreme court's decision in the case upheld the rejection of the will on the ground "that for purposes of making impossible spurious interpolations, the courts of the states have made it a rule that the will must be subscribed at its physical end."

It is not much over 20 years since a retired San Francisco teacher named Miss Austin conceived the idea that she could make the then barren plains of Fresno blossom like a rose and bear fruit abundantly. Under the inspiration of that belief, says the Chronicle of that city, she began the cultivation and curing of the raisin grape. As a direct result of the efforts of that one woman Fresno county this year has profited in one industry alone to the extent of $1,000,000, which is reported to be the value of the season's raisin-curing there. Almost all of the other industries which have since been developed in Fresno county have been the indirect outgrowth of the successful experiments made by Miss Austin in raisin-making. One of the latest developments in the proposed construction there of a fruit cannery to be the largest in the state and to serve as a substitute for the one now existing

Death of Mrs. Mary R. Andrews.

Mrs. Mary R. Andrews died Dec. 14th, 1899, at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. C. Cole, at Stanards, after a brief illness.

Mary R. Diffin was born in Ithaca, Aug. 23, 1846. Most of her early life was spent in Andover. She received her education at Alfred University. In 1874 she was married to R. G. Andrews whose death occurred about six years ago. She leaves two sons to mourn the loss of mother, James A., who was graduated from Cornell University in '99, and William H., who has lived the past few years in Wichert, Ill. Her brothers and sisters are: Charles A. and John M. Diffin of Stanards, Wm. H. Diffin of Andover, Mrs. M. A. Corwin of Austin and Mrs. B. C. Cole of Stanards.

Mrs. Andrews was an earnest, faithful Christian. She was from her 18th year a consistent member of the Baptist church. Her kind thoughtfulness of others endeared her to all who knew her.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the residence of B. C. Cole. The floral tributes were beautiful. Roses and carnations, emblems of hope and life, had been strewn about her by loving hands. Rev. Mr. Perkins, pastor of the Baptist church of Wellsville, spoke words of consolation and comfort from the text: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

One Hundredth Anniversary of the Death of Gen. Washington.

Memorial services were held in honor of the memory of Gen. George Washington by most every village of importance in this state, by the Masonic fraternity, last Sunday evening. Andover Masons attended in a body the Union services held at the M. E. church. Rev. W. B. Wagoner delivered a very able and touching eulogy upon the life of the "Father of our Country." Among other good things he said, "George Washington, initiated Nov. 4, 1752; passed March 3, 1753; raised Aug. 4, 1753, in Fredricksburg Lodge, No. 4, Fredricksburg, Virginia. Became a charter member of Alexandria Washington Lodge, No. 22, of Alexandria, Virginia, April 28, 1789, of which he was elected Master. He came before the world as a Mason and laid the corner stone of the Nation's Capitol at Washington, Sept. 18, 1793. At his death when the last eulogium had been pronounced his brethren of Alexandria Washington Lodge, No. 22, with the funeral rites of the fraternity placed his lifeless remains in the silent tomb of Mount Vernon. He is gone forever . . . yet yet his spirit liveth. Hail, happy shade! The broad shield of Death is thrown before thy fame . . . He liveth. He shall live forever, and when the latest of your children's children shall pronounce his dear, his sacred name, their eyes shall be suffused with the tear of gratitude and love. Dec. 27, 1797, in an address, he made the statement that the great object of Freemasonry was to 'promote the happiness of the human race.' Then there were only 8000 Masons in the United States. To-day there are over 800,000."

The discourse was given in a masterly manner, and was well received by all who had the privilege of attending the service.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs. Walter Lanphear of this village was seriously burned on Friday morning, while using gasolene. She was cleaning a dress, and after thoroughly washing her hands and taking every supposed precaution, placed a stick of wood in the stove. While attempting to put the second stick on the fire, an explosion occurred, her clothing readily catching fire. She immediately rushed outdoors, threw herself into the snowbank, extinguishing the flames, and returning into the house. Both arms, face, and neck were badly burned. She is at present confined to her bed, naturally suffering with considerable pain, but with the good nursing and care, which she is receiving, hopes are entertained of her speedy recovery.

Sudden Death at Alfred.

Mrs. Palmiter, wife of Geo. Palmiter, who resides on a farm north of the village of Alfred, died suddenly last Thursday evening, while driving through the village. She and her husband and granddaughter had been spending the day with Charles Tracy and family in this village, in company with several others. On their return home, on reaching the road leading to their farm, Mr. Palmiter got out of the cutter and walked home, while Mrs. Palmiter and the granddaughter went on to Alfred, where the granddaughter, who is the wife of Will Niles, resides. After leaving Mrs. Niles at her home, Mrs. Palmiter started for home, and while driving down North Main street, was seen to fall from the sleigh. She was picked up and carried into Babcock's barber shop near by. The doctors worked over her for three-quarters of an hour, but she was evidently dead when she fell from the sleigh. Heart disease was probably the cause of her death.
