Property in a Face.

Recently a manufacturing concern in New York city secured the photograph of a beautiful young woman reproduced it in a striking advertisement of its wares, and circulated it broadcast. The young woman, says a New York paper, was of a modest and retiring disposition, and had never sought publicity of any kind. Her sensibilities were wounded by the use made of her picture, and she brought suit for damages against the manufacturers who had appropriated it. The New York supreme court has ruled that she has just cause of action. The decision is based on two grounds: First, that any person has a right to a life of privacy, and that to print and post in public places the likeness of a person who wishes to avoid notoriety may injure the reputation as well as the feelings of the person concerned; second, that if a likeness, because of its beauty, has a value as a trade-mark or an advertisement, the value is the property of the person whose features are represented, and not of anyone who chooses to appropriate them. Lovers of social decency will hope that this decision may be sustained by all the courts, and become an established principle of law. Legal decisions have put it in doubt whether the relatives of a deceased person can claim damages for representations to which that person might have objected if living; and the limits, if there are any, to the uses which may be made of the likeness of public celebrities have not been authoritatively defined. But that a living person who desires privacy is entitled to it, an ought to be protected against the invasion of it by the unauthorized publication of his portrait, is a principle which it is desirable to have established in these days of intrusive cameras and multitudinous half-tones.

Over in Boston and thereabout they are telling amusing stories about the Cuban English. Cuban teachers who were recently receiving instruction there. One day the teachers were invited to some sort of an evening function. It happened that shortly before the hour for the assembly some ladies who were in front of that house were politely approached by a group of male Cuban teachers, who with hats in their hands stood bowing. "If you please, dear madames," said their spokesman, "we are invited at this house to-night. We wish to attend. We were been on an excursion, to the distance, and have not the time to go to our house. So that we wear, as you see, our day dress. Perhaps you can tell us if it would be permitted to us to go to the reception in our day dress? If it would not, then certainly shall we take the time to go to our house and put on our night dress!" The ladies assured them that they would do much better to go as they were than to put on their night dress, and they bowed gravely and gratefully and withdrew.

During a thunderstorm in Philadelphia a few evenings ago lightning struck a marble statue of Diana at an entrance to Fairmount park. Immediately afterward the left leg of the statue turned brown. Next morning all the coloring had disappeared except one large spot, which so far has resisted persistent scrubbing and the application of powerful acids. The marble statue when struck was illuminated as though hundreds of electric lights had been arranged about it.

The religious sect known as "Holiness People" have been painting Scripture texts and other warnings on barns and other places near Nortonville, Kan. On a bridge they painted the words: "Heaven or hell—which do you choose?". An irreverent sign painter came along and added: "See Brown & Co., at Hiawatha, for coffins and caskets."

The women of Chicago all took off their hats in church last Sunday so the Lord could rain down blessings upon their case heads without danger spoiling their millinery.

At a gathering of old folk in the town of Charlemont, Mass., the other day, the chairman called for all present over 70 years of age to rise, and 72 responded. He then asked all those over 80 to rise, and there were 12 who had passed that limit. A similar call for all over 90 brought four members of the gathering to their feet.

A Missouri editor last week said: "We expected to have a death and marriage to publish this week, but a violent storm prevented the wedding and the doctor, being sick himself, the patient recovered, and we are accordingly cheated out of both."

The supreme court of North Carolina has sustained a decision rendered in Burke county imposing a fine of $1,000 on a railway company for having given an annual pass to a doorkeeper of the legislature in 1897.

These are the days when docile husbands remain at home and with soap and wash rag purify the children while their mammas are out in the highways and byways purifying politics.

Kansans are so busy that it is mentioned as a sacrifice that a Dickinson county farmer stopped harvesting long enough to attend the weddings of his three daughters.

James Oberlander, a farmer living near Enid, Okla., has a fast mare which he is fond of driving. The other day the mare ran away with him, and by way of punishment he hitched the animal up wrong end to and drove her backward half a mile. "Besides," says a local paper in relating the incident, "the mare could hear much better while he cussed her."

A Chicago man is said to have invented a musical device, after the form of a music box, which is attached to a bicycle and operated when the wheel is in motion. One writer, commenting upon it, says that perhaps the most important part of the invention is a device by which the music can be shut off if desired.

Some years ago one of the biggest railroad corporations of this country employed a confidential peacemaker, with the idea of preventing suits, as far as possible, for personal damages. It has proved a profitable innovation and is being taken up by other railroads.

Workmen the other day clearing up a plot of land in Bethel, Conn., formerly owned by P. T. Barnum, found a turtle with the initials "P. T. B., 1830," on its back. Barnum was 20 years old at that date.

The breed of life is a necessity rather than a luxury.

Some of us must have much care or we shall cease from prayer.

Victories must be won in the mill before they are won in the world.

He who would be delivered from evil must not lead himself into temptation.

From the army recruiting stations in Chicago there has been gathered a formidable addition to the slang of the day. Strictly speaking "shavetail" is a "griffin" or "coyote" or "rooster," but frequently is called a "plebiter," and perhaps is known even more widely as a "ringtailed snorter." All these are terms of reproach addressed to the "rookie," or military recruit, in the United States.

In the "silly season" every possible diversion is hailed with delight. The "dollar tea" is a five o'clock function where the guests amuse themselves by trying who can spin a dollar the longest on a polished table, the successful one receiving a prize. The "baby tea" is another novelty. Men and women bring photographs of themselves as babies, and the person who identifies the greater number wins. The "baby tea" is rather amusing.

The pupil of a public school who had been absent from school for two weeks brought this written excuse from her mother: "Louisa was absent monday, please excuse her. Louisa was absent toosday, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent wensay, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent thursday, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent friday, she had a sore throte. Read this over again for the next week."

An Enid (O. T.) man tried to whip another for saying he had been in the penitentiary. While he was telling his rounds to the judge a German bystander said: "The odder fellow is no better as you, he voe in de pen, too, py golly." "How do you know so much about the people who have been in the pen?" he was asked. "Py golly, I was in der pen myself and I saw you fellows dere—dot's how I know."

SNAKES ON PICNIC GROUND.

Pleasure Resort Was Laid Out at Great Expense Over a Den of Reptiles.

"A few years ago," said Mr. Kepp, of Punxsutawney, Pa., to a Chicago Inter-Ocean reporter, "a friend of mine, Maj. Powell, who was superintendent of a little railroad, built at considerable expense a fine picnic ground out among the rocks and trees of Bradford county. He thought it would help the road to have a fine rustic and romantic resort, where people could go to hold picnics, and anticipated that there would be one or two excursions every week to this cool sylvan retreat. And it was a mighty pretty place. When it was all fixed up and about 500 people, the majority of them children, went there to have their first picnic, Maj. Powell was there in all his glory to witness the opening of what was to be the most popular resort in Bradford county. Presently somebody saw a big rattlesnake, which was duly dispatched. Mr. Powell looked at it, and not wishing to injure the reputation of his sylvan paradise, said: 'Yes, that is a pretty fair sized milk snake,' and ordered it buried.

"But that snake had scarcely been buried when a man came in with six more big rattlers that had just been killed. And that was only the beginning. In a few moments it was discovered that the place was literally alive with rattlesnakes. Most everywhere you turned there was a big rattler, and you can guess that the women and children weren't long in getting out of that. The fact was that the picnic grounds were constructed right over a den of rattlesnakes. The major had spent nearly $300 in fixing up the grounds, and had named the place 'Paradise Glen,' but the people shunned it as a pestilence after that and changed the name to 'Rattlesnake Gulch.'"

The Fight on Bogus Butter.

It should be clearly understood by all that what the dairymen want is that oleomargarine be honestly sold. There is no thought of suppressing it. Prevent it from taking a name not true to it, and the dairyman will be satisfied. People seem to persistently misunderstand the object of the anti-oleomargarine agitation. It is equally to the interest of oleo users that it be sold for what it is, as the buyers would thus save several cents on each pound bought.—Farmers' Review.

Riis has an article on Theodore Roosevelt's father, with a portrait. Other interesting articles follow, with poems, stories, besides the usual full history of the week, etc. $3 a year. The Outlook Company, New York.

Editor Fries, of the Friendship Register, in the last issue under his editorial management, took occasion to give those who differ with him politically a parting stab. That may be a good way to do such things, looking from his standpoint, but most people had rather see a man stand up and fight from the shoulder than to give his enemy a backhanded slap in the face and then run.

The third annual basket meeting of the Allegany Baptist Association was held in the Baptist church Wednesday. A large delegation was present, representing several churches in the county. Two sessions were held, forenoon and afternoon. The time was taken up with papers, discussions, recitations, songs, question box, etc., which were very interesting and instructive. Dinner and supper were served at the church.

Dr. Common's dental office will be closed from Tuesday, Oct. 9th until Oct. 20th. Those who have not their entire set of molars yet out of the foolish habit of growling will be wise to have the doctor fix them up for a ten days vacation before that date, for it is presumable he will have troubles of his own enough to look after on his return without meeting with a crowd of angry toothachers with extorted checks and furrowed brows.

Some years ago, at the Genesee Conference of the Methodists, the ministers of that Conference who served in the army during the civil war formed themselves into what is known as the Veteran Association, meeting annually in connection with the conference, electing officers and transacting such business as would naturally come before such an organization. The Association met last Friday evening at North Tonawanda, elected its officers, among whom Rev. W. B. Wagoner was re-elected Adjutant, and attended a banquet tendered them by the local G. A. R. Post.

Acting under orders received from the Post Office Department in Washington, postmasters refuse to accept circulars for the transmission thru the mails which promote lottery schemes known as "endless chains." The Attorney General has held that at least two classes of these schemes are lotteries, and that their promoters cannot use the mails. The senders of such circulars will have them returned, and postmasters are instructed to call the attention of all persons known to be conducting such schemes to the order that the use of the mails must be discontinued.

A large leak in the water main on Church street was discovered Monday, when enough water was wasted to supply a great many people. The leak was around the hydrant on the corner of Center and Church streets. The water consumers were immediately notified and the water supply shut off. Many express their opinion that there are other leaks not yet found. The water commissioners were at the springs only a day or so ago and measured the amount of water running into the line. They state that there is now running into the water main enough water to furnish every man, woman and child in our city, 50 gallons of water per day. This being the case, Andover people must be great water consumers, for nearly every day we hear complaints from those who use reservoir water, or there must be more water being lost in the main lines.
