Again has the world been treated with the brutal details of a pugilistic encounter for championship in the prize ring, and again have the journals of the world given their best space for the sickening and degrading minutia of the disgraceful affair. The newspapers, in self defense for so doing, say the public demands require it of them, but it is an open question whether the demand itself does not originate with the papers, whether the people do not demand what the newspapers make the most of. If the details of a prize fight were known only to those who are in attendance, the business would die a speedy and natural death, but people are interested in whatever newspapers make prominent. If prize fighting were ignored, rather than given prominence as news matter, the public morals would be subserved.

It is claimed upon what appears to be competent authority that cancer, that dread disease, is susceptible of cure. The new treatment is by hypodermic injections, the remedy reaching the blood and thus destroying the germs of the disease in the system. Consumption is also being cured by applying remedies by electricity, and by this agent forcing the medicines to the parts affected. The system is the invention or discovery of a Frenchman, and has wrought some wonderful cures. It would be a great relief to those affected to know that they are not necessarily incurables. Science is making great strides in every direction.

Among the Innocent Victims of a War.

It is Hard on British Babies. Are the children born during its progress who are condemned to carry through life names commemorating the commanders and their battles. The American children were rather lucky as Dewey, Manila and Havana, the favorite names, are euphonious. But what of the luck of the babies born in Britain? The London Graphic investigated the parish registers and found some horrible names fastened upon infants. Two named Majuba had about the prettiest of all, and the prophet who anticipated history by calling his little girl Pretoria gave her a name that does not grate harshly upon the ear. There were babies named Bloemfontein, Jacobsdaal, Paardeberg and Elandslaagte, who will probably be nicknamed "Bloem," "Jake," "Parry," and "Ely," and who will have much trouble spelling their name whenever they want to have goods sent home. The favorite names of generals were Powell and White, which are not so bad. Roberts is reported a popular name for girls, and one young woman a few months old is known as Robertsa Ladysmith Masterson, which is a good deal of name for a child of her size. The registrar told the reporter that no parents with pro-Boer tendencies have ventured to call their babies after Kruger. "I have sat in this chair for 25 years," he said, "but I think I would resign rather than enter a British baby by such a title."

The state of health of one of our two surviving ex-presidents was the subject of numerous newspaper paragraphs a few weeks ago. Neither of the two has yet reached the average number of years attained by ex-presidents from Washington to Arthur. Washington's brief life after he left the presidency was longer than that of Polk or of Arthur, for in the June following the close of his chief magistracy Polk was dead, and Arthur survived his retirement less than two years. John Adams lived 25 years as ex-president, and his son, John Quincy Adams, showed for nearly 19 years how importantly a former chief magistrate may serve his country. Van Buren and Fillmore survived the presidency 21 years; Madison, 19 years; Jefferson and Tyler 17 years; Pierce, 12 years, and Hayes nearly as long.

A Chicago tailoring firm which ordered 5,000 medals bearing on one side a likeness of Admiral Dewey and on the other an advertisement of the firm, rejected the medals because the likeness of Dewey was disfigured by what seemed to be a wart on the nose. The manufacturers asserted that the wart was a faithful reproduction; the admiral's son, who lives in Chicago, affirmed that "pa never had a wart" and the matter of the acceptance of the medals is to be carried to the courts. It may be found, on close examination, that the supposed wart is a presidential bee.

Once upon a time when Judge Gary of Chicago, was trying a case he was disturbed by a young man who kept moving about in the rear of the room, lifting chairs and looking under things. "Young man," Judge Gary called out, "you are making a great deal of unnecessary noise. What are you about?" "Your honor," replied the young man, "I have lost my overcoat, and am trying to find it." "Well," said the venerable jurist, "people often lose whole suits in here without making all that disturbance."

More than 2,000,000 golf balls are used in the United States annually, and it is sad to reflect that something wicked is said or thought every time one of them is lost.

A full-sized grain of corn bearing on it a sprout half an inch long was a few days ago removed from the ear of 12-year-old Kenneth Stubbins, of Uhrichsville, O., after having remained in the lad's ear seven years. On the day mentioned the boy was seized with a violent earache, and it became so painful that a physician was called. Upon examination, the doctor discovered some foreign substance in the ear, which when removed, proved to be a sprouting grain of corn. On Halloween seven years ago, when young Stubbins was a mere baby, it is said, he was standing in the door of his home, and some merrymakers, in passing, threw at him a handful of corn. One of the grains was thought to have gone into his ear at the time, but after an ineffectual effort to remove it, it was believed it had come out of its own accord.

The war department has lately published a list of the officers and men of the United States army who have received medals or been especially commended for gallantly during the last two and a half years. Two of the 50 officers whose names are mentioned, and 23 of the enlisted men, are colored. In view of the relatively small number of negro troops in the army, this is a record of which our dark-skinned brother may well be proud. Evidently the color-line is not drawn at the firing-line.

The famous Bonaparte trees on Washington Heights, New York, are dying. There are only about 50 remaining out of the original 400. The trees, which are known as African cypress, supposed to be identical with the gopher trees of Scripture, were intended for the garden of the Tuileries, but when Napoleon was sent to St. Helena the trees were brought to New York by Stephen Jumel, a merchant prince of that city.

A young woman lately had the color of the pupil of her eye restored by tattooing with India ink at the Miami (O.) medical college. Years ago an ulcer involving the cornea, and encroaching upon the pupil, left an unsightly white scar. The patient suffered a three days' ordeal during the process of tattooing.

A lady in Boston hired a public automobile to do some shopping, and after getting well under way was informed by the operator that he couldn't stop the machine, but it would be all right as long as he kept going. The power gave out after a spin of 15 miles, the lady returning home on an electric car.

The supervisors of Butte county, Cal., provide by statute that anyone riding a wheel on a sidewalk in any unincorporated town in Butte, or meeting a pedestrian must "dismount and remain at rest while such pedestrian passes." Bicyclists will be apt to steer clear of that vicinity.

There is no native of the state of Nebraska among its representatives in either branch of congress, notwithstanding the fact that Nebraska became a state 33 years ago and was the twenty-fourth admitted into the union.

This must be the gullible age. Bogus concerns of countless sorts flourish.

Age of the Gullible. The most barefaced promises are eagerly accepted. If it wasn't for Uncle Sam and his post office there is no telling where the craze for being bunkoed would end. Think of it! exclaims the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Twenty thousand letters were received in Boston in two days addressed to the maker of the notorious three-star ring good luck boxes! Each of these communications is supposed to have been accompanied by 99 cents, the price of the precious humbug. Hundreds of thousands of these boxes were sold in the past three or four months, and, as the cost of manufacture is figured at from three to four cents, the profit may be imagined. The box was a circular bit of poplar wood, hollowed on one side to contain the three-star ring of annealed wire. A circular accompanied this magic possession, which the accomplished maker claimed to be of Hindoo origin, wherein was set forth certain rules for bringing out its full powers of luck insurance. That is all there was to it. And yet the brief advertisement of this dupe's toy brought hundreds of thousands of dollars to its shrewd purveyor. Perhaps the strangest thing about the humbug it the fact that many people actually seemed to think that the gimcrack brought them luck. Letters from these happy individuals have been published, and there is no doubt that they actually did a great deal to arouse a 99-cent amount of interest in other gulls. And now the post office authorities have stepped in and killed the goose that laid the golden eggs by charging the seller with using the mails to defraud, thus effectually smashing the business. But some fresh scheme along these lines may be expected to crop up at any moment.

Some months ago there appeared at the Standard Oil refineries at Bayonne, N. J., a quiet, decent young fellow who minded his own business, worked hard, fed himself sparingly and spent his nights in a mean lodging house with books. The men did not know at first what to make of him, but after awhile they learned what he was up to and they took up a collection of five dollars. When they offered this money to him he was moved, but he absolutely refused to accept it, for he knew that they had families, and as he was a mechanic's helper he was making nine dollars a week, so that he would not starve. The horny-handed company reluctantly but admiringly put their pelf back into their pockets. This day laborer in greasy overalls was a Harvard student, who was earning enough to carry him through another term, and if you go to Cambridge, writes Charles M. Skinner in the Boston Transcript, you shall find him there, grinding away at his studies and making a specialty of political economy. And can anyone doubt that he will make a success in life?

The Kind That Wins.

A wealthy citizen of California has obtained, after some years of effort, the consent of the wardens of a church in Wiltshire, England, to the removal to America of the monumental tablet to Lawrence and Elizabeth Washington. They are supposed to have been the great-great-grandparents of George Washington. The slab is to be taken to Washington—the assistant secretary of the treasury having in charge the matter of its transportation—and set up in the Smithsonian institution.

That's a rather interesting table that shows the proportion of lawyers to the other inhabitants of the big cities, though it seems to offer some discouraging features to the youth who looks forward to a career at the bar. Denver and San Francisco are credited with the most attorneys, the former with one to every 321 inhabitants, the latter with one to 361. The smallest proportionate number is shown by St. Louis, with one lawyer to every 770 inhabitants.

It is said there are 40 George Washingtons in Baltimore, of whom 39 are colored and one is white. This recalls the story of the aged colored man who remarked, on hearing his son read from ancient history of Pompey and Caesar, that all the great men of antiquity must have been negroes, as those names were not commonly borne by white people.

When the prince of Wales ate a tenent dinner the other day, the fact was considered to be of sufficient importance to be cabled across the Atlantic at 20 cents a word. Yet some people claim it is the thing that is done which counts, and not the person who does it.

It is reported that within a few days the Erie Railway will introduce a new system for operating block signals on its lines, by which telephones will supersede the telegraph tickers now in use. The telephones will be operated by men who will replace the telegraphers.

B. S. Brundage has moved his family from the corner of South Main and Dyke streets to Mrs. Brundage's house on Third street. P. C. Lynch, who purchased the property vacated by Mr. Brundage, is making improvements in the house preparatory to its occupancy by his family.

It is rumored that a new steel arch bridge is to be built this season at Portage for the Erie railroad. It is said that the company that is now working on Kinzua bridge has the contract. It will be situated up the river from the present structure and be ten feet higher. The present bridge was opened for use in 1875.

A telegraph dispatch from Elmira says that S. T. Van Gorder dropped dead last night. Mr. Van Gorder is a brother-in-law of Jason Hunt, Mrs. Dickenson and Mrs. Metzger of this village. His remains will be brought to Andover, and funeral services be held at the residence of Mrs. Metzger on Church street, at 2 o'clock to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon.

The first mail route in Allegany county, under the rural free mail delivery system, was established May 1st. The route starts from Fillmore and extends east to the village of Short Tract, a distance of seven miles, returning by another road and furnishing service to nearly one hundred and fifty families. The post-office at Short Tract was abandoned.

It is currently reported that a young Andover man agreed to milk his brother's cows one evening. After milking eleven his poor hands refused to close, and a happy idea entered his mind. He turned the calves in and they helped him out on the last ones. Of course we wouldn't mention any names, but we will say he is an aspirant to the bar and is studying with Attorney Earley.

At the annual meeting of the Lucy Stone Club, held Tuesday evening, at the residence of Mrs. E. S. Bradley, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. A. M. Mosher; Treasurer, Mrs. Byron Clair.

Olean people are alarmed over the passing of the W. N. Y. & P. railroad into the hands of the Pennsylvania system, fearing that it may mean the removal of the big car shops, so long a source of much revenue to the business men of the city, to some other point. It would be a bad blow to Olean to lose the shops, and her citizens will make a good fight to retain the present shops which employ some 250 men.

The Coudersport Roller Manufacturing Company, operating a mill in this village, has a large stock for mangle rollers, and have placed a 20-horse gas engine to operate the factory, which is a complete engine for any manufacturer to use. The company expect to ship from six to eight cars a week from now on. This mill is no doubt a good place to dispose of maple lumber, as the company is in a position to receive it.

PECULIAR CASE.

Musical Director Palmer Sued by the Festival Manager.

CORTLAND, May 12.—The case of A. Mahan against H. R. Palmer, which occupied the attention of the Supreme Court yesterday, and is on trial today, is an action to recover $1,000 for alleged breach of contract on the part of the defendant in his failing to come to Cortland last fall as a conductor of Mahan's musical festival. It appears that Doctor Palmer of New York wanted Miss Bates as an accompanist and would not come if Mr. Mahan held to his agreement with another accompanist whom he had engaged, and whom Doctor Palmer declared was incompetent and not capable of assisting in making the choir work of the festival a success. Mr. Mahan, however, declined to make the change, and Doctor Palmer refused to come, and Mr. Mahan, on a few days' notice, was obliged to secure another conductor and new music. The attendance was smaller than usual. Mr. Mahan lost $446, a thing which had never occurred before, and as he attributes it to the absence of Doctor Palmer, he brought the suit. Dougherty & Miller of this city represent the plaintiff and Van Fleet & Phillips of Andover the defendant.

At the close of the evidence to-day the Court granted a non-suit on the ground that the letters introduced did not constitute a contract and that the defendant had the right as a matter of law to refuse to conduct a festival without an accompanist of his choice. The attorneys for the plaintiff say that an appeal will be taken.

A Dustless Track.

Travelers on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway have often remarked that a journey on this road is not made unpleasant by clouds of dust and dirt, which are a source of so much annoyance on many roads. The reason for this is that at regular intervals the tracks of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway are sprinkled their entire length with oil, which effectually allays the dust. This is but one of many ways in which the management of the Lake Shore looks after the comfort of its patrons. When you buy your ticket via the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway you get the best in travel that can be bought.

Men's Suits...

There is nothing that can compare with a fancy worsted fabric for serviceableness for a suit. Fancy worsteds are the vogue this spring, but good taste say that the patterns should be quiet in tone. We would like to have the gentlemen who wish to be well clad at small cost see some of the newest arrivals, comprising some twenty-five different patterns in neat plain and broken stripes, and over check plaids in various tones of Grays, Browns and Blues, slightly livened up, here and there by pickings of red, blue and green. The shapes of the garments are faultless and the clothes are sure to fit.
