CLOTHING

That reputation pronounces best is the kind. It isn't for to day, to morrow or next week that you buy a suit of clothes or overcoat. Clothes are bought to serve—the longer the better. The better the clothes the better they look even to the last day.

You can't get service or appearance out of poor workmanship. A thrown-together, pressed-up suit may look all right for a week—then comes the time of kinks and dissatisfaction.

SCHAUL & ROOSA Clothing is made to serve long and well—to keep its shape—to look dressy as long as you want to wear it. That is the kind of clothing it pays to buy.

Men's Suits, - $8 to $25.

Ten Growing In Texas.

In view of the large measure of success attained in the experiments in tea grown in South Carolina the agricultural department will broaden the scope of its operations in this direction. It is now proposed to establish a tea farm in Texas to see if that hopeful and expansive common wealth cannot raise better tea than the Palmetto State. There is very little that Texas cannot raise, from disturbances and long horned steers to oil gushers and statesmen. Within the area of that state, which, with felicity and originality, is called by its inhabitants "an empire in itself," all soils and climates are found. Between the humid meadows of the Sabine, where the moss drips dew perennially; the rainless heights of El Paso and the superheated lowlands of Hidalgo there is a place for every product on earth. If Texas could not somewhere produce a passable tea, it would be a proof that her loyal sons have altogether misjudged her resources.

Reviewing the matter seriously, it may be said that, while it is probably possible to cultivate tea over at least one-third of the area of the United States, it is hardly practicable to hope to bring within the space of a generation an American tea to the point where it will be liked by tea drinking people, though ultimately this country ought to be independent of China, Japan, Ceylon or India in producing the material for "the cup which cheers, but does not inebriate."

Her Latest Break.

"My six-year-old girl is an awful chatterbox," said a broker, "and the worst of it is that when we have guests at the house she is continually making breaks of the worst sort—breaks that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the closet. Recently when we had company at dinner she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests, I am free to say, seemed delighted. I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word. She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears. 'Why, what's the matter, darling?' her mother asked. 'I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret!' she wailed between sobs."—Philadelphia Record.

Rain in Manila.

"When it rains in Manila," says a man who has been there, "you think the first time you see the spectacle that the end of the world has come. Why, one day in September that I was there it rained thirteen inches. Think of that, will you, more than a foot of water! You would think that would exhaust the elements for some time, but it didn't. The next day it rained half a foot, the day after that seven inches. That month we had fifty-seven inches of rain."

"Where does all the water go to?"

"Right back where it came from," was the prompt reply. "After a downpour the sun will come out hotter than ever, and you can fairly see everything steam. And yet there are a great many people that wouldn't live anywhere else except in Manila."

The Milk Was Too Blue.

A certain wise youngster of my acquaintance was presented on his seventh birthday with a beautiful blue glass goblet, whereupon said goblet straightway became the indispensable meal companion of said youngster. One evening when George had received his usual allowance of milk in the blue goblet his mother became aware that he was gazing in deeply contemplative fashion at the contents of the glass. What he saw can best be imagined, for he raised his eyes suddenly and said wonderingly:

"Why, mother, this cow couldn't have been ripe!"—Current Literature.

Crude Logic.

It is told of an East Indian law student that he once threw his examiners into confusion by declaring matrimony to be an illegal state. "How so? How so?" he was asked by the perturbed examiners, many of them married men. The student smiled beatifically. "Marriage," quoth he, "is a lottery, and lotteries are forbidden by law."

Her Recommendation.

"I don't think very much of your reference."

"I don't wonder, ma'am. My mistress was too busy to write it, ma'am, an' so I got her maid to write it for me, ma'am, an' she's only been to night school one winter, ma'am, an' the pen was a bad one."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Well Answered.

A youthful member of parliament was once advised by a bibulous member of one of his audiences to "go home to his mother." "I think," the young candidate said, "my friend might follow his own advice with advantage, for he does not seem to have outgrown his affection for the bottle."

Life.

It has been said that life is made up of three things—heredity, environment and the will. If the heredity and environment of the child are what they should be, the will will choose the right and do it.

Up All Night.

This getting up every night with the baby, or some of the older children, is all wrong.

Not that the children are to blame. If he's the baby, probably his food is wrong. Vinol will help his mother stand the strain of nursing.

We have often seen whole families of older children who keep the parents awake o' nights. First one, then the other is ailing.

These children seem well enough at times; but they are white, hollow-eyed, often listless, with irregular appetites, peevish and fretful, wakeful at night and constantly taking cold.

The use of Vinol, in conjunction with Vinlax to regulate the bowels, will benefit these children almost in a day.

There is nothing in Vinol that can hurt them. It is pleasant to take. If it doesn't do the work, we will give you the money back.

Relief

From Headache and Neuralgia

In a Few Minutes After Taking

Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. Chronic Case Cured.

"I cannot speak to highly of your remedies and I will always tell my friends how much they have done for my husband and myself for sudden attacks of headaches, neuralgia and rheumatic pains. There is nothing equal to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are simply splendid and give relief in fifteen or twenty minutes. I used to be subject to attacks of headache, which had become chronic, and I took a course of Nervine and Glass goblet. Nerve and Liver Pills in connection with the Anti-Pain Pills. The result is I now have very little trouble in that way. My husband has also taken these remedies and praises them very highly. We always have some of both kinds of pills in the house, and do not feel that we could get along without them.—Mrs. Kate K. Johnson, McClellandville, Delaware.

There are many reasons why you should take Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, but the best reason is that they will give you almost instant relief from headache or other pain. In cases of chronic headache, when the sufferer knows an attack is coming on, Anti-Pain Pill will usually prevent it entirely. In cases of extreme nervous exhaustion, when the brain is too tired and the body too nervous to rest, an Anti-Pain Pill will soothe the nerves so that sleep may come. They never fail, yet contain no opiates and are non-laxative.

All druggists sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are non-laxative; contain no opiates, never sold in bulk, 25 doses, 25 cents. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

ATTEMPT TO CORRUPT

Bribery Investigators Blame Philip Doblin.

ACTED ON HIS OWN INITIATIVE.

Say That There Is No Evidence of Attempt by Lemuel E. Quigg or the Holland Company to Corruptly Influence a Member of the Naval Committee.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The house committee on naval affairs has reported to the house its finding in the matter of the investigation of the Lessler bribery charges. A minority report signed by Representatives Kitchin, Vandiver and Roberts also was submitted.

On the final vote on the adoption of the majority report as a whole, Representatives Kitchin, Mudd and Roberts voted to present the report. Representative Vandiver voted in the negative.

There was a desire on the part of some of the members to make the findings more sweeping in some respects. The majority report, after reciting the resolution directing the naval affairs committee to investigate the charges of bribery, says:

"At a meeting of the committee on naval affairs held January 20, 1903, during the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, Mr. Lessler, a member of the committee, charged that he had been corruptly approached for the purpose of influencing his action respecting proposed legislation providing for the purchase of Holland submarine torpedo boats.

"The committee immediately appointed a sub-committee to make a preliminary investigation of Mr. Lessler's charge. The following day Philip Doblin of New York appeared before the sub-committee and confessed that he had so approached Mr. Lessler.

"The substance of this statement having been reported the following day to the full committee, the chairman was directed to present to the house and procure the adoption of the resolution above set out. In compliance with the direction and authority of said resolution your committee proceeded at once to take testimony and examine such witnesses as were believed to have knowledge of the subject of inquiry. That testimony is set out in full in the appendix to this report and in view of the fact that your committee in this report makes an explicit finding of its conclusions it becomes unnecessary to quote or to comment upon the evidence.

Said He Was Approached.

"Mr. Lessler in his testimony before the committee stated that Philip Doblin had come to him some weeks ago and had said that Mr. Lemuel E. Quigg had said to him (Doblin) that there was $5,000 in it if Lessler could be brought to support the proposition to buy more Holland boats.

"This statement, in substance, Doblin corroborated when he first testified before the full committee, stating that Mr. Quigg had said to him that if Lessler could be brought to vote for more Holland boats 'there would be $5,000 in it' and that he (Quigg) added 'I think I can make it a thousand for you.'

"Subsequently Doblin again went on the stand and retracted this statement, declaring that Mr. Quigg had never suggested money to him and that he (Doblin) had not told Lessler that Quigg had made such a proposeal to him and that he had made his first statement at the request of Lessler and for his protection."

The report then cites section 5480 of the revised statutes which makes it an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment for any person to make any corrupt proposal to any member of either house of congress; also section 5392 of the revised statutes relating to the giving of false testimony. The report continues:

"A witness sworn by the chairman, as in this case, who states any material matter which he does not believe to be true before a committee of the house conducting an investigation under authority of the house commits perjury and is liable to punishment therefor under section 5392."

In conclusion the report says:

"Your committee has most carefully heard and considered the testimony taken before it and upon the same has come to the following conclusions:

Finding of the Committee.

"1. That the charge made by Mr. Lessler that an attempt had been made to corruptly influence his action in the opinion of the committee, having been made by one Philip Doblin on his own initiative and responsibility, with the idea of making money for himself if he should find Mr. Lessler corruptly approachable.

"2. That there is no evidence to sustain the charge of an attempt by Lemuel E. Quigg to corruptly influence a member of the committee on naval affairs respecting proposed legislation pending before said committee and the house.

"3. That there is no evidence to sustain the charge of an attempt by the Holland Submarine Boat company or any of its agents to corruptly influence a member of the committee on naval affairs respecting proposed legislation before said committee and the house.

"In view of the foregoing, we recommend that the clerk of the committee be directed to certify to the attorney general of the United States a copy of the testimony taken at the hearing, with a request that he take such action as the law and the facts warrant."

The minority report, after reciting that those signing it are unable to agree to all the conclusions of the majority, says:

"On the 28th day of January, 1903 Hon. Montagu Lessler stated to the committee on naval affairs while that committee was considering a proposition to secure more Holland submarine boats for the navy that these people (meaning the Holland Submarine Boat company) had through an ex-congressman, who used an intermediary, offered him, the said Lessler, $5,000 for his support of such a proposition. Thereafter to a sub-committee he gave the name of Lemuel E. Quigg as the ex-congressman and Philip Doblin as the intermediary referred to by him."

The minority report then states the circumstances of the resulting investigation and submits the conclusions of the minority the first of which is as follows:

"1. That the charge that an attempt was made to corruptly influence a member of the committee on naval affairs respecting proposed legislation pending before the house is not sustained."

The minority differs with the majority only in its first conclusion. In other respects the conclusions are identical.

The committee having concluded its report then resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill. A vote was taken on the proposition to authorize the purchase of five submarine boats, six voting in the affirmative and nine in the negative. Another motion to authorize the secretary of the navy, in his discretion, to purchase submarine boats was lost by a vote of 8 to 7.

NEVER CATCH UP

The business men who fail to appreciate advertising are likely to find themselves so far behind the times that they will never catch up.

Is is always better to advertise a little too much than not quite enough.

It is better to use a little more time than is necessary in the consideration of advertising and the preparation of advertisements than it is to be ever so little careless about it.—Saginaw (Mich.) Evening News.

Much Interest in Rural Free Mail Delivery and Fire Insurance.

We glean the following facts from the annual address before the New Hampshire state grange of Governor N. J. Bachelder, late master:

The grange has experienced a prosperous year in New Hampshire, and the present membership of 25,105 shows a net gain over all losses of 992. The 9,000 meetings held have been well attended. For fourteen years the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company has been maintained. The business has annually increased, and the property upon which policies are now in force amounts to about $6,000,000. All losses and expenses have been promptly paid, making a saving of over $100,000 over the cost of insurance upon the same property in stock companies. The establishment of rural free mail delivery is one of the grandest achievements of the Order. In New Hampshire ninety-five routes have been established, exceeding only by 113 in Maine and 124 in Connecticut. New Hampshire stands second in the number of pieces of mail handled on its rural routes during the year, reaching 4,017,612. The life insurance branch of the order is reported as successful, the present number of members being about 600.

The Grange as an Educator.

Worthy Master W. F. Hill of the Pennsylvania state grange, referring to the educational work of the grange in his annual address, said it affords the very best opportunity for the farmer to develop into a man of culture and of broad mind. The exchange of ideas, the social intercourse it provides for the farmer and his family, the valuable discipline of this well established, conservative organization, are all strong factors in building a better, stronger rural citizenship. Who is it that has membership in the grange that is not conscious of its having made him a stronger man, with more love for our beloved country and all her grand and noble institutions? Who is there among the intelligent citizens of our commonwealth who loves the state and glories in her development but honors and respects the grange for achievements and possibilities in the education and elevation of our rural population?

Unbiased Testimony.

Mr. E. P. Powell, the well known agricultural writer, has this to say of the grange in the Tribune Farmer: "I am not a member of a grange, but I believe in them with all my heart. They are doing an immense amount of work, and it is of a very wholesome sort. The social influence is as good as the educative. It has the advantage of bringing together husbands and wives, as all clubs should. The grange work, so far as I have watched it, has been invariably for sound legislation, for honest elections, for progressive farm work, for improved institutes and for the general social welfare of farm neighborhoods."

The Future of Agriculture.

As I view the future of agriculture in America the organization of farmers is a necessity for their success. Study, investigation, the taking, reading, writing for the agricultural press become a matter of necessity and duty which we cannot ignore or escape if the American farmer hopes to hold his rightful position in the industrial interests of our matchless country.—Aaron Jones, Maine National Grange.

Under Grange Auspices.

The Connecticut Dairymen's association, by invitation of Lyme grange, held an institute at Hamburg with large attendance. Vice President Birge gave an address on "The Future of Cattle Feeding In New England," Secretary Noble on "Dairying," Professor L. A. Clinton, "How to Increase Profits of the Dairy," Cattle Commissioner Averill, "Foot and Mouth Disease."

Our Responsibility.

R. R. Gahush, lecturer of the Vermont state grange, says, "The object of our association primarily is greater development socially and educationally, but it follows as naturally as the seasons that with increased knowledge there is an increased responsibility along all lines related to human welfare."

The Soil of the Mind.

The laws of growth and development require the constant stirring of the soil of the mind, and today there is no organization capable of doing so much for the future of the state through its members as the grange.—Maine Farmer.

In Maine the state grange pays the traveling expenses of one delegate to the state grange meeting from each subordinate or Pomona grange. Its other expenses are defrayed by the grange making him a good host.

More institutes and training grange organization have come to us in the last month than in any three preceding ones. The necessity and advantage of organization can no longer be ignored, says Farm and Fireside.

National Master Jones in his annual address took a strong stand for weekly meetings of the grange on the ground that we need all the chance for education we can have. The literary work should be strengthened.

Hon. N. J. Bachelder, lecturer of the national grange, is now governor of the state of New Hampshire. May he make as good a governor as he has lecturer.

Make your grange meetings interesting, helpful and profitable and the question of attendance will take care of itself.
