INDEPENDENCE.

Died, in West Union, May 17, 1900, Darwin E. Barney, son of Anthony and Roxy Chapin Barney. He was born in the town of Independence Dec. 9, 1828. Forty-eight years ago the 8th day of last December he was married to Maria A. Horton. Eighteen days afterward they went on the farm on which he has lived since that time, being one of the first settlers of that section, clearing the place and establishing a home for himself and family. He leaves a wife, four sons—Adelwin of Whitesville, Hiram, George and Omer of West Union—five brothers, two sisters and a large circle of relatives and friends. The funeral was held at the Seventh-day Baptist church at Independence May 18th, Rev. W. L. Burdick officiating, assisted by Rev. J. Kenyon.

Died, at Independence, May 16, 1900, Charles Stout. He was born in Northampton county, Pa., Nov. 3, 1817, moved to the town of Lansing, Tompkins Co., N. Y., in 1819, and to Independence the 1st day of May, 1822, with his parents, Gordon and Margaret Nye Stout, with two brothers and three sisters, settling on the farm on which he died. On the 8th day of November, 1845, he was married to Miss Sally A. Spicer, who died eleven years ago, since which time he has been living with his son-in-law, Wm. Densmore, and wife, who live on his farm. He leaves four children, Gordon and Mrs. Wm. Densmore of Independence, Charles Stout of Shongo and Mrs. Lesker Patterson of Sacramento county, Cal., also two brothers and one sister, Dr. Andrew Stout of Ulysses, Pa., Wm. Stout of Independence and Mrs. S. A. Dyer of Andover. The funeral was held at his late residence on Thursday, May 18th, Rev. G. M. Janes of Andover officiating.

Wm. Clarke and wife, from Little Genesee, visited friends in this place and Andover the latter part of last week and the first of this.

J. P. Remington and wife attended the State G. A. R. Encampment at Utica last week, returning Friday.

G. M. Barney and daughter and W. B. Bundy and wife, from Andover, attended the funeral of D. E. Barney Friday.

George Alford and wife and Herbert Warfield and wife visited at Oscar Potter's Sunday.

Lewis Burry and wife returned from their visit at Whitesville Thursday.

Rev. D. C. Irwin of Whitesville is to preach the Memorial Sermon in the church at this place next Saturday.

Rev. W. L. Burdick delivers the address on Decoration Day at Whitesville.

Married, by Rev. J. Kenyon, May 22, 1900, Mr. Ward Wilson and Miss Mary Hill, both of Whitesville. The happy couple take up the art of homemaking immediately at the home formerly occupied by Chas. Hill.

CULTIVATOR SHIELD.

It Prevents the Covering Up or the Rolling of Hard Lumps of Dirt on Tender Sprouts.

In cultivating corn when it is small, it requires the greatest care not to cover up or roll hard lumps of dirt on the tender sprouts. The shields that come with cultivators are very uncertain and unsatisfactory in their work. For several years we have tried this trough and find it a most satisfactory device. Take two hard-wood inch boards, eight inches wide and about five feet long, and fashion the forward end of each in the shape of a sleigh runner. Then take a 2x4 the same length as the boards, and bevel the edges in such a way that when the boards are nailed on they will spread out at the bottom until they are about eight inches apart. This trough is to pass, inverted, over the corn row, between the shovels of the cultivator; its sloping sides catching the loose soil and leaving it lying loosely next the corn, but never on it. To fasten this trough to the cultivator, bore an inch hole through the sides near the front end and just beneath the top 2x4. Through these run a small, strong rope and the each end to the cultivator in such a way that the trough will be kept a little in advance of the shovels. It is best to leave this rope to play loosely through the trough, as it would otherwise upset in turning at the end of the rows. The illustration shows the construction exactly. Make your handy devices now, before the busy time comes.—Jim L. Irwin, in Ohio Farmer.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Clover is the ideal pasturage; winter rye is also a good and early pasture, but should have been provided for in the fall; and rape is also good; oats and peas to come on later.

Rape for hogs can be sown as early as the ground can be worked well in the spring, and can be sown in succession until August, if desired. The last sowing making excellent and late fall feed.

Gasoline for worms in sheep has proven to be very effective. We do not know that it has been tried on hogs, but it would probably be as effective with them. It will do no harm, anyway.

Hogs with scabby and sore backs are probably very lousy. Wash with kerosene emulsion. It is supposed that everybody knows how to make it by this time, directions have been given so often.

Give brood sows an opportunity to exercise. They will take it if given an opportunity to go in and out of their shelter at will. This is important. Exercise and fresh air, and the first implies the latter, are very necessary.—Farm and Home.

TROUBLES IN THE DAIRY.

How to Overcome or Avoid Some of the Most Vexing Annoyances in Butter Making.

A very annoying experience on the farm dairy is to have the butter refuse to come. A very fertile cause of this annoyance, especially on the average farm where only a few cows are kept and there is only sufficient cream for a churning once or at most twice a week, is the mixing of sweet and sour cream. It is not an uncommon practice to skim each day's cream into a crock, and then some morning when it is convenient, the housewife concludes to churn. She warms the cream to the proper churning point and then proceeds with the churning and finds that it takes an unreasonable length of time for the butter "to come," she wonders what the trouble is. Investigation has shown that ripened cream, that is, sour cream, churns easier than sweet cream, therefore, when the churning contains a mixture of cream that is three, four or more days old, together with that which is still sweet, we have a condition which makes not only slow churning but wasteful churning, the sweet cream being much slower to churn, keeps the other butter from coming. In addition to this trouble, we find that when the mixed cream is churned, the particles of butter in the ripened cream finally gather first. The butter-maker discovers that the butter has come and stops her churning. Were she to test the buttermilk with the Babcock tester, she would find that a goodly portion of the butter was still in the buttermilk, this being from the sweet cream which was added the same morning and if the churning had continued long enough it might have been gotten out. Most everyone has seen a pail of buttermilk, which has been left standing for some time, and which shows a layer of cream on the surface. When this condition exists the loss of fat in the buttermilk is considerable, as the tester will show. To secure thoroughness of churning in a reasonable length of time, the cream should be kept as sweet as possible, by keeping it cold until 18 to 24 hours before the time to churn it. It should be stirred thoroughly as each new lot is added. Having decided when you are to churn, the cream, if still sweet or nearly so, should be warmed up to a temperature of 65 or 70 degrees to ripen. The temperature at which it is set to ripen depends on the length of time it must stand before you are able to churn, also on the condition of the cream, whether it is sweet or beginning to sour. The higher the temperature at which the cream is set, the more rapidly it will ripen. When ready to churn, the cream should be thick and have a smooth, velvety appearance, that is, free from lumps, and have a pleasant sour taste. This is a condition which is difficult to describe on paper, but will come from experience.—Prairie Farmer.

"West Virginia was never in better condition," said Gov. Atkinson. "Twenty-five million dollars of new capital has been put into the state the last six months."

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale in my store, came said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by Benedict & Van Noy, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.

MEMORIAL-DAY

Fitting Memorial Services at the Baptist Church Last Sunday Evening.

EDWARD SEAMAN POST, G.A.R.

Escorted by the Citizens' Hose Company and Accompanied by Civic Societies, School Children and Citizens March Thru the Mud to Hillside Cemetery and Decorate the Graves of Departed Comrades.

HON. E. B. VREELAND OF SALAMANCA

Delivers a Ringing Patriotic Address to the Grand Army Post Boys and Citizens of Andover, at Prest Opera House.

Blossom above them, O beautiful flowers!
Lovingly crown the green sod!
Still are the hearts that responded to ours
'Ere they pulsed out to their God;
Quiet the hands that struck nobly for freedom
'Ere the great battle was done;
Gory is the waiting in wearisome Edom,
They have the Promised Land won!

Bloom on above them, O beautiful flowers.
Fragrant with memories fond!
Tell of our love, thru the sunshine and showers,
Breath of glad meetings beyond!
Dying, the sadness of funeral dirges,
Fading the musketry's roar;
Conflicts' deep ocean in murmurous surges,
Kisses the Present's still shore.

Bloom on, O beautiful blossoms, forever!
Hallow the rest of our dead!
Breath of their patience, their daring endeavor,
Cover the blood that they shed!
Northward and southward breathe soft benediction,
Tenderly filling the air,
So shall the rights regive all dereliction,
Union their glory shall wear!

The blessings and privileges we now enjoy were earned for us by these grand old heroes represented by the Grand Army, and now that their declining years, and the effects of their sufferings and hardships in the times of war, have hastened upon them the infirmities of old age, let us all endeavor to show our appreciation to them by kindness and reverence. This we can do the most acceptably, we believe, by helping them year by year, in fittingly observing the National Memorial Day.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

As a most fitting prelude to the Memorial Day exercises were the memorial services at the Baptist church last Sunday evening. The church, orchestra and pulpit were beautifully decorated with blooming flowers, plants and bunting, arranged in such harmonious combinations as to give the room an attractive appearance, while "Old Glory" hung pendant from the walls back of the rostrum.

The members of Edward Seaman Post, No. 481, and the ladies of the Relief Corps marched in a body from their halls to the church, and at promptly 7:30 o'clock entered the building and were ushered to the front seats in the center of the audience room, while the organist rendered the Voluntary. The house was filled beyond its seating capacity, and chairs were placed in the aisles long before the choir arose to open the services with the beautiful and touching anthem, "Rest, Soldier, Rest." After the reading of the 46th and 47th Psalm by Rev. G. M. Janes, a male quartet, composed of Messrs. Bundy, Wood, Burrows and Benedict, sang "Tenting in the Silent Vale." Rev. Stephen Burdick then offered prayer, which was followed by the rendering of "Sleeping 'Neath the Flag," by lady voices. The pathos of the songs and the sweetness of their delivery impressed the audience very forcibly. Pastor V. L. Eggleston delivered the memorial sermon. It is needless for us to say that the discourse was good, for his are always that, but the many truths expressed in his terse style, and lessons drawn from them, showed great study and deep thought in his careful preparation. And it was accepted not only with satisfaction but also commendation by the large audience in attendance. In Mr. Eggleston's remarks he compared the foundations of other nations with that of this country, and showed the stability of a country founded on the principles of right and justice, a country founded by the people, for the people and of the people. He spoke of the Union to-day as being one and undivided, no North, no South, no East and no West; one people, one country, one flag, brought about by the result of the late Spanish-American war. In short the sermon was full of food for the thoughtful, and was well received.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICES.

Notwithstanding the rain that fell in the morning, and the dubious outlook for a bright, pleasant day, at about 11 o'clock the town began to put on its holiday attire. Groups of people were congregated here and there visiting and discussing the various subjects of interest to them in little squads of half a dozen or more. Memorial-day to the old veteran is looked forward to for months previous to it, and anxiously waited for. On that day he not only expects to help in decorating the graves of his departed comrades but to mingle again with the boys. Our Grand Army boys were all here Wednesday that could possibly get here, and the entire town was theirs, to do what they wished. Every one did everything possible to help in the appropriate exercises. Decorations were promiscuous on the streets, the dwellings and business places being handsomely trimmed with bunting and flags.

Promptly at 1:30 o'clock the line of march to the cemetery was formed at the corner of Main and Greenwood streets, in the following order: Carriages with the City Fathers and the Orator of the day, followed by the the W. R. C. and the floral committee; Baker Band; Citizens' Hose Co.; Seaman Post, G. A. R.; civic societies; High School; citizens.

The services at the cemetery were as follows: Selection by the choir; prayer by Chaplain Newell Baker; decoration of graves by a committee of Seaman Post, W. R. C., and the High School; selection by the choir; closing with volleys by Seaman Post.

The line was re-formed and marched to the Opera House, which had been tastefully decorated by members of the Post and of the Relief Corps, where the following program was carried out: Prayer by Rev. W. B. Wagoner; selection by the choir, "They'll never march again;" reading of the Roll of Honor by Adjutant E. R. Carpenter; soldiers salute the dead; a short address by Commander Thos. N. Boyd; choir, "Sleep, Oh, Sleep;" reading of Lincoln's Memorial Address, J. M. Mosher. After another song by the Baptist choir which furnished the music both at the cemetery and at the Opera House Commander Boyd introduced the speaker of the day, Hon. E. B. Vreeland of Salamanca, our present member of Congress, who addressed the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and citizens of Andover for about forty-five minutes. His speech was one of eloquence and patriotism, and was listened to by a large gathering. Among other things he said: The last gun of the Rebellion was fired thirty-five years ago. Since that time our nation has been blessed with peace and prosperity far greater than the most sanguine could have imagined, until the countries of the the Old World thought that all we were good for, all our boasted freedom amounted to was to become the possessors of great wealth. But where bravery and chivalry of our soldiers and sailors in the late Spanish war has learned them that America to-day is just as patriotic, just as liberty-loving as it ever was. It has also learned them that America can fight, and that our young men are worthy sons of the old veterans of 61. Yet no event which has ever taken place or can ever take place, should or will dim the luster of the heroic deeds and sacrifices of the old veterans of the Rebellion. Upon the results of that war depended the welfare and destiny of the human race for centuries to come. In that conflict over 600,000 men were enlisted, and 350,000 of that number never came home. It is fortunate that God in his Infinite Wisdom concealed from us the future, for had we known what was before us we would have shrunk from it. In conclusion he said that there should be but two things considered when an old veteran applies for pension, his actual service and his present needs.

Different Methods of Destroying the Caterpillar.

Commissioner Smith saturated a swab made of cloth with kerosene and climbed into his trees and gave the vermin a dose of the next thing to brimstone. It was very effective.

Others who have hose connections with the city water, turn Methodists and sprinkle them rather inconveniently with the full force of the water pressure. This, when done while they are young, will knock them from the trees, and they are unable to again climb up, but those large enough will scramble up the trunk of the tree again.

The Canisteo Times tells of a man who loaded up his old shot gun and shot the nests of the maple caterpillars out of his shade trees, and claims it was very successful in ridding his trees of the pests.

BLACK BASS FISHING.

Open Season Begins on June 16 and Ends December 31.

Speaking of the open and closed season for black bass, Chief Game Protector J. W. Pond said to a press correspondent:

"As communications are being received daily relative to the open and closed season for black bass, and as it is nearing the time when the season will open, I deem it proper that the public should know the law that no one whose intentions are good should unknowingly violate it. The general provision reads as follows:

"'The close season for black bass shall be from January 1 to June 15, both inclusive.' This must necessarily make January 1st and all time from then up to and including June 15th the close season. Therefore bass fishing under the general provision will not open until June 16th instead of the 15th as heretofore."

Samuel Randolph Dead.

Samuel S. Randolph, an old veteran, died at his home on Elm street, this afternoon, while the Grand Army were holding their memorial services. He has been sick a number of years, gradually failing. He was in his 82d year. A fuller account of his life will appear later.
