The outlook from the Celestial Empire is shadowed in deep gloom. The allied forces have been worsted in an engagement, and that means encouragement to the revolutionary forces in China. The government there seems to be trying to put down the insurrection, and to protect the foreign element thruout the empire, but the success of the Boxers will have the effect of rallying the wavering thousands to their standard. It now looks as tho the European drilled Chinese soldiers are to test the efficiency of their military schooling upon Europeans themselves, and as they are apt pupils and have unlimited numbers to draw upon to fill their ranks, great trouble may be apprehended, but western civilization will in the end triumph over barbaric fanaticism. Thus far the attempts to Christianize China have been costly and of meager results.

America's Gifts to France.

A few days ago Paris witnessed the unveiling of two fine equestrian statues presented to the French people by the American people. The statue of Washington, given by an association of American women, was unveiled in Jena square on July 3. That of Lafayette, presented by the children of the United States, was dedicated amid the most extensive Fourth of July celebration Paris has ever seen. The two events together are a gratifying proof of the continued existence of the warm cordiality which has never ceased to bind the two nations in friendship since the days when Washington and Lafayette fought side by side for the freedom of the American colonies. These two handsome monuments, says the Chicago Tribune, are an appropriate return for the great Bartholdi statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World," which was presented to this country by France 15 years ago, and which to-day dominates New York harbor with its impressive and graceful figure. This reciprocal and spontaneous exchange of gifts shows that the two nations are still bound by the old ties of a common love for liberty. The intertwining of the American and French flags at the unveiling of the Washington statue was peculiarly appropriate, and it is pleasing to see that both nations are still fully alive to the fine sentimental significance of such a scene. The praises of Washington, as uttered by Ambassador Porter, Minister Delcasse and others, seem to have aroused genuine enthusiasm among the Parisians. The dedicating of the two monuments seems to have constituted quite a cordial international episode. It is pleasing to mark the popularity of all things American at Paris during the exposition. The large American exhibit, the numerous visitors from this country, the success of Sousa's band in capturing the Parisian ear, and the dedication of the statues of Washington and Lafayette have all united to make the Americans quite the lions of the hour in the gay capital. May the cordial relations long continue.

It's the proper thing now for the amorous swain to send a pair of love birds to his inamorata, says a Philadelphia dealer, who has them for sale at $10 a pair, including the cage. Love birds are charming little things. They come from China and Java, where they are as plentiful as the English sparrow is here. In fact, they resemble the sparrow in build, although they are pure white and have quite large beaks of a delicate pink. They are very affectionate, and will sit for hours pressed closely against each other on their perch, billing and cooing in fine style. The dealer, who is a florist, says in confidence that he has them on sale because flowers are too common in summer for the young men to send the girls, and he thought the love birds would just about fill the bill.

A beginning has been made with forestry in the United States. Though only a start can be claimed, the outlook is hopeful. New York has adopted measures to protect the headwaters of the Hudson. In the Adirondack park 3,506,000 acres are reserved, of which 1,000,000 is owned by the state, as much more is in private game preserves and the remainder in the hands of those who will sell to the state when they can get their price. Cornell and Yale conduct practical schools of forestry. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says the cotton crop of 1899 and the wheat crop of the present year were damaged by droughts that would not have occurred if the forests had not been wastefully slashed away.

Recent arrivals from the Hawaiian islands predict a great business boom in the new territory this fall. All the sugar plantations have the largest crop on record, and with new methods of working dividends should be better than ever before. Several millions will be paid this month and next in dividends, the greater part of which will go directly into circulation in Hawaii. All business was flat during the plague, but now, with the black death thoroughly stamped out, Honolulu is entering upon a period of prosperity that will be unparalleled.

The word "compound," which is frequently used in the dispatches from China, means an inclosure. In that country and in Japan it is customary to build high brick walls around factories, business houses, banks and residences for protection, and these are known as "compounds."

In Newton, Kan., a man publishes a card of thanks to the woman who sat with the children while he followed his wife to the grave. Some people are unkind enough to insinuate that he will not long remain a widower.

Gout is a disease of middle and advanced life, and affects men more often than women. It is believed that heredity plays an important part in its production, but the main cause is undoubtedly an unhygienic mode of living, especially errors in diet.

Since 1868, according to authentic report, the corn production of this country has increased more than 122 per cent., while the production of wheat has increased nearly 350 per cent.

Answer Census Questions.

It is said that many persons have refused to give the census enumerators the information which they have asked in compliance with their instructions. Probably there are a number of people who believe that in this way they are showing their independence, says the Chicago Tribune. Their course is both unpatriotic and foolish. In the first place it is of interest to the whole country that an accurate census should be obtained, inasmuch as the statistics now secured will stand for the next ten years. The school census may be "more complete and more accurate," as the takers of it assert, but nevertheless the people of the world at large will be more disposed to credit the federal authority with accuracy than the municipal government. The former has a higher reputation, for some reason or other which is not difficult to appreciate, for faithful performance of its duties. The refusal to give information is foolish, because the law provides strict penalties for refusal, and the federal courts are sure if not swift to punish violations of the law. Those who refuse to give information are law breakers and will be punished as such. The questions may seem prying, but they are of vital importance to the obtaining of accurate data.

Jurors Must Not Read.

Because jurors trying the case read newspaper articles commenting on a former trial of the same suit the Chicago appellate court the other day reversed the judgment of the $10,000 damages awarded to little Emma Grenell and returned the case to the circuit court for a new trial. Emma Grenell, relates the Chicago Chronicle, then six years old, was run over by a trolley car in front of her home at 430 Western avenue on the evening of October 31, 1895. Two and a half years later the suit brought in her behalf against the West Chicago Street Railroad company came on for trial before Judge Haney. Two of the jurymen in that trial declared that they had been approached by Bailiff Lynch with a proposition to hang the jury. The next trial of the suit was in March, 1899, before Judge Smith. The daily papers in reporting the case referred to the jury-bribing scandal of the previous trial and also commented on the nature of the evidence given by the several witnesses who testified. When the motion for a new trial was argued counsel for the defendant sought to have the verdict set aside and a rehearing ordered on the grounds finally passed upon.

What a woman can do in the way of business is shown by Mrs. Elliott, of Camden, N. J., who in two weeks sold over 30,000 campaign canes. There are at least three varieties of canes used in parades. All are hollow. Each has a wrapped flag inside, the silver cap of which must be put in the vest pocket while the flag is carried over the shoulder. The reversible knob cane is more convenient for marching when the flag is not out. Another cane used in political demonstrations is a brass rod covered with disks of leather, which are pressed together and glazed over to look like tortoise shell. This cane is elastic and makes a formidable weapon.

"Graft" is the proper name for all senate pages, especially if their real name is not known, or does not come to the mind instantly. It came about in this way: One of the first pages ever appointed by the senate was Grafton D. Hanson. For awhile Grafton was the only page in the senate chamber, and the calls for "Graft," as he was called, were very numerous and at times urgent. As new pages came into the senate from time to time the name of Graft was given them and used until their names were so well known that they could be remembered.

"The man I want to nominate is five feet ten inches tall, 30 years old, and never et a biscuit!" yelled a delegate to the recent convention of the fusionists of Nodaway county, Mo., while pressing upon his hearers the claims of his favorite candidate for the nomination for representative in the state legislature, says a Kansas City paper. The orator then resumed his seat, amid "wild applause," and on the first ballot taken his able friend who "never et a biscuit" was nominated.

A little tiff between engaged lovers, Henry B. Reeves and Miss Sarah M. Riley, of Trenton, N. J., caused them to part. This was 40 years ago. He went to Topeka, became a wealthy broker, and lately began to long for his old sweetheart. He wrote to her, and they have just been married at Bridgton, N. J.

Health specialists say a pound of lean beef and a quart of whole milk contain about the same amount of nourishment, but the meat, although it costs more, is more valuable for food, as it contains the nutrients in more suitable proportion.

Gray county, Kan., has 137 voters when they are all at home, but, according to the Cimarron Jacksonian, "if all the inhabitants who lied to the county assessor were arrested there would not be enough of them out of jail to make a six-handed game of poker."

WORK OF BOER HUNTERS.

Some of Their Efforts Have Been Creditable, Some the Reverse.

When the Boers migrated from Cape Colony to the Transvaal they were forced to clear the way by killing 6,000 lions. For years the South African Boers have been hunters, and their skill with the knife is due to this daily practice in the fields and woods. But with them the killing of game has been either a matter of dollars and cents or self-protection. Their creditable work of freeing South Africa of the dreaded lions, which roamed in such numbers that life was rendered unsafe anywhere in the country, is offset by their ruthless destruction of the giraffe from Cape Colony to the Botletli river. They may have killed 60,000 of the innocent, graceful giraffes, says an exchange.

In the early days of South African history the giraffe was the most abundant game in the Transvaal, Matabeleland and the Orange Free State, but the creature has been killed off like our American buffalo, and the few remaining representatives of a noble race gradually driven north. For years past the giraffe has been a profitable quarry for the Boer hunters, and the animal was valued by them only because the hides were articles of commercial use. They were not hunted, shot down in droves, and destroyed in the greatest number possible in every direction. A good giraffe skin is worth from $10 to $20 in South Africa to-day, and much more in Europe.

"Because she loved him so," was the plea made by a New York nurse girl when arrested for having bitten her two-year-old charge so badly that the marks of her teeth showed on the child's arm.

There are 98 steam fire engines in the city of Chicago. The frequency of fires in the Windy city seems to demand at least that number to fight the flames that so often become nearly uncontrollable.

J. P. Herrick, of the Bolivar Breeze, one of the Vice Presidents of the State Press Association, elected at its recent meetiug at Brighton Beach.

Lost, between Dyke street and A. Burrows & Son's store, a sum of money. The finder will be rewarded for returning the same to this office.

The question of the organization of a village improvement society, its object being similar to that of a board of trade, is being agitated at Alfred.

Tracy & Co. have tapped a splendid vein of gas on the Stearns farm. Eighteen feet of sand was found, and everything indicates a tip top gas well.

The quarantine was raised from the home of F. C. Lynch Friday. They have had rather a hard pull of scarlet fever, being some six weeks in quarantine.

C. C. Burdick shipped to Buffalo, Monday, as fine a car load of calves as ever left this station. Mr. Burdick went on another train in advance, to look after them.

The Canisteo Times issued last week a fine supplement printed on heavy enamel book paper and a half-tone insert in memory of Lorenzo Davison, formerly of that place.

The more illustrated newspapers there are, the better the public appreciates the Illustrated Buffalo Express. It was first in its especial field, and is still easily first in value and interest.

The 202d Infantry, New York Volunteers, will hold their first annual reunion in Buffalo July 19th, and a big gathering of Spanish-American war soldiers from all parts of the state is looked for.

W. C. Cannon, a recent graduate of Harvard Law School, commenced his duties with a prominent law firm in Buffalo Monday. Will is destined to reach the top rung in his chosen profession, and we wish him unstinted success.

Arbuckle Bros. and the Sugar Trust have come to an agreement, and the prices of coffee and sugar have taken a sudden rise in consequence. Several points higher are predicted, and with the present outlook 20 cents for Arbuckle coffee and 8 cents for granulated sugar are not far distant.

Watkins Glen is conveyed by a debt on record in the county clerk's office to Lyman S. Andrews, a wealthy resident of New York, for $80,000, which includes the two mortgages on the property, one for $24,500 and one for $22,500.

It is believed that Riley Allen of Allentown is the wealthiest postmaster in Western New York. He is reported to have an income of $20,000 a month from his various oil property. His salary as postmaster does not exceed $150 a year.

About 40 couple enjoyed the excellent music of Merriman's orchestra at the summer reception at the Opera House last Thursday night, given by the young people of Andover. A large number were present from Alfred and Wellsville.

The Buffalo Morning Express is easily the leading paper in Western New York. Its editorial comment is independent, thoughtful and honest, a fact that is of especial significance in view of the approaching Presidential and Gubernatorial campaigns.

While an employee in a Rochester optical factory was testing a telescope recently he saw a boy several blocks away stealing a crock of butter from a farmer's wagon. The police were notified and the boy was arrested before the farmer missed the butter.

When you listen to the telephone and find two men talking you may be sure the conversation will be short and confined to business. If it is a man and a woman, you will probably get a chance to use the line inside of five or ten minutes, but if it is two women you might as well "hang up" and wait half an hour.

At Syracuse, the other day, the constitutionality of the cycle path law was tested in the courts, and a wheelman arrested for riding without a tag on a side path and fined $20. On the 1st of July, when the new side path law took effect, all judges were compelled to fine offenders not less than $5 and not more than $25.

On account of the shelving of the project of making a new road around Cemetery Hill by the Hornellsville authorities, the people of Almond and Alfred threaten to do their trading at Andover and Wellsville instead of Hornellsville, and they will attend the Wellsville fair this fall, giving the Hornellsville fair the go-by.

The many friends of Mrs. Nancy Lever in Andover will regret to learn that she is at present and has been for two weeks, confined to her bed in St. Joseph's Hospital, Philadelphia, where she was obliged to be removed from Atlantic City. She is under the care of her daughter Inez, who is a graduate from that institution.

A recent canvass of one of our large eastern cities showed that ninety-four per cent. of its leading citizens were brought up on the farm. An examination of one hundred commercial and professional representative men of Chicago showed that eighty-five per cent. were reared in the country or in rural villages.

The new chime whistles on the express trains on this division of the Erie are a very great improvement over the shrill sounding ones formerly used. Altho they are distinctly heard for a longer distance the sound is more pleasing to the ear. We understand these whistles will be placed upon all the passenger engines.

The Junior Endeavor Society of the Baptist Church have elected the following officers: President, Alta Baker; Vice President, Grace Cheesman; Secretary, Lizzie Brown; Assistant Secretary, Edna Van Noy; Treasurer, Mabel Emery; Roll Call, Helen Rogers; Assistant Roll Call, Nina Baker; Organist, Roxy Hann; Collector, Clarence Baker; Assistant Collector, Iona Burdick.

In addition to the regular exhibits at the State Fair this year there will be many special and interesting exhibits, chief among which will be the fish exhibit by the state "Fish and Game" commission and the exhibit by the American Museum of Natural History of New York city. Tuesday, Aug. 28th, will be known as Grange day. It is expected that on that day at least 50,000 farmers will be present, making it the largest gathering of farmers ever held in the state. See ad. in another column.

Mrs. Dr. Loughlen gave an informal reception last Saturday evening at her home on Greenwood street, in honor of her cousin, Miss Knight, of St. Louis, Mo., who was her guest a few days this week.

Mrs. Dr. Loughlen was coming from Wellsville last night when the tornado broke on this locality. She drove home right in the heaviest of the storm, when the wind almost lifted her carriage from the road. Her courage is commendable.

Orson Carnaham of Cuba rode to Buffalo on his bicycle. Upon reaching that city he was pulled and made to pay a fine of $1.50 because he had no bell on his wheel. Those who intend visiting a city in the same manner should always remember city laws require a bell on every wheel whether it is large enough to be heard or not.

Miss Clara M. Daily of Fredonia is an uncompromising temperance advocate and not long since read a paper before the Epworth League at Waterford and took occasion to score a certain Milwaukee brewery which sends out the amber fluid in great quantities. The article was published in a local paper and some one sent a marked copy to the brewing company. The company sent a case of beer, prepaid, to Miss Daily, urging her to try one of them.

At the County Prohibition Convention at Wellsville last Thursday, the following ticket was put into the field: For Member of Assembly, H. W. McDowell of Houghton; for Sheriff, H. H. Marsh of Belfast; for County Clerk, A. C. Fisher of Cuba; for Superintendent of the Poor, A. M. Taylor of Rushford; for Coroners, Dr. H. Hulett of Allentown and Dr. O. E. Burdick of Little Genesee. Among the delegates to the State Convention, the name of V. L. Eggleston of Andover is mentioned.

Most business establishments are conducted on honest principles. Most business men have a legitimate reason for offering goods at a stated price. In most cases there is reason why goods are sold for less than they ought to be, or why the goods offered present an attractive feature to the buying public. Having this attractive feature the man in business needs to tell his story in order to sell his goods. The man who can go around and tell his friends about his goods can convince most of them. His announcement in the papers can convince more. There is a reasonable reason why the wise business man gets the attention of the people. He knows how to tell of what he has to sell and knows how his statements get business, because they awaken interest.

Andover takes particular pride in entertaining well its guests. For that reason when she issues invitations to people to attend a social gathering of any kind, the recipients feel confident of meeting with a fine line of young ladies and gentlemen, good music, and a fine program. Last Thursday evening one of these social events transpired at Prest's Opera House. About 40 couples were in attendance, and everybody had a gilt edge time. We don't care to blow our own horn too much, so here is looking at us "as others see us" from the Belmont Dispatch: "Andover young people gave one of their delightful dancing parties Thursday evening. As usual Andover did herself proud in way of entertainment, and held up her well deserved reputation, as one of the best hosts in this section of the state."

Alfred has a personal interest in the news now being received from the uprising in China, as three Alfred people are located at Shanghai, where they are missionaries, namely, Miss Susie M. Burdick, who has been there about eight or nine years, and Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Crofoot, who went there last fall. Shanghai is about 700 miles by land from Pekin, the scene of the disturbance, and nearly 900 by water. It is now the port from which all the Chinese news is sent and to which refugees are flocking from the disturbed sections of the Mongolian empire. For the time being it is safe, but fears are expressed that the Boxer rising may eventually assail it. The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society, under whose direction they with three others are working, has cabled them to use their discretion about leaving the country.—Sun.

Considerable interest is felt in Warsaw as to the fate of Rev. Dr. Gilbert Reid, a noted missionary to China, who, together with his wife, returned to his labors about two years ago. Information received from United States Consul S. L. Gracey at Foo Chow, says: "Dr. Gilbert Reid and wife, formerly of Warsaw, are at Pekin, and whether dead or alive at this writing is a matter of conjecture by their many friends." He is not connected with any missionary society, altho he has been doing practical missionary work for many years and mainly at his own expense. He is engaged in a special work of organizing an institute for the better class of the Chinese, especially those in authority.
