SCHAUL & ROOSA.

TWO GREAT NAMES

Were linked together when the Stein-Bloch Co. linked theirs to that of Priestley's Cravenette Rain-proof fabrics. The

is undoubtedly the mort perfect rain proof garment that has ever been produced. They have taken a fabric of merit and have put it thru a treatment that it is impossible for any other tailors to do. You must not forget that tho the "Cravenette" fabric is rain-proof that the moment it is cut up and sewn together in a garment, unless the Sewing and General Tailoring is properly Done it will leak at the seams. And, another thing, if Cravenette cloth isn't properly tailored, it will never do the double service of a top coat as well as a rain coat that the makers of the fabric intended it for. Therefore we recommend to men who wish to have the best and most reliable rain-proof overcoat that we know of.

"Stein Bloch Cravenette" coats $15 to $25. Crevenette Hats cost $3 to $12

BOYS' SCHOOL SUITS.

GREENWOOD.

They were hot days Saturday and Sunday.

There will be damaged oats in market this year.

Dudley Ersley and Mr. Viall of Jasper visited in Greenwood Sunday.

Miss Ruby Tyler is very sick with typhoid at the home of her grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Allie Pease of Hornellsville were guests of their parents Sunday.

Mrs. Samuel Saxton is reported as sick.

Miss Cora Jack, who has been spending a few days with Miss Hester Phillips, returned to her home in Rochester Wednesday.

Miss Lena Shaut came home on a brief visit Saturday.

Mrs. Henry Stephens and children of Rochester are visiting her parents on Christian street.

Miss Maggie Berger of Hornellsville was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Byron Rugar, last week.

Dr. C. F. Smith was in Hornellsville Saturday.

L. G. Burton returned home Saturday evening.

Mrs. Lester Rogers and son Lynn of Elyssus, Pa., are guests of Mrs. H. Freeland.

Merritt Atkins returned Saturday from a two weeks visit at Buffalo and Toronto. Mr. Atkins voted the Toronto fair an immense affair. He reports one pig on exhibition that tipped the beam at 1100. Well we have some pretty large ones in this locality.

Byron Rugar has gone to Grand Rapids as a delegate to the convention of the National Protective Legion.

Mrs. Healy of Millport, Pa., is canvassing our town in the interest of the Protective Legion.

Fred Bess was home from Canisteo Sunday.

Mrs. M. C. Williamson and daughter Maude were in Andover last week visiting former neighbors.

The gigantic canal job scheme only calls for $101,000,000 as a starter. It takes away one's breath to think of so vast a sum and that would be only a beginning.

Nearly forty from Hornellsville picnicked in this place Thursday. They were joined by about an equal number from this place.

Elery Hall and wife, J. S. Webster and wife, Clayton Scribner and wife, Will Stephens and Vern Johnson were among the Greenwood representatives at the Westfield fair.

Those that expect to spend the money for the canal enlargement are, as a matter of course, loud in their talk in its favor. Beware of them.

Editor Mosher of Andover was in town Monday.

G. M. Webster is repainting his store and has trimmed the same in green, which materially improves the appearance of the same.

Pitt Coston went Tuesday to Ithaca to enter Cornell University. The best wishes of the people of Greenwood go with him as he is one of Greenwood's exemplary young men.

Rev. Petty of the Universalist church of Hornellsville gave a short address at the Universalist church in Greenwood Thursday. Mr. Petty is a very interesting speaker and favorably impresses his hearers.

Wm. Banks of Jasper has purchased the Letts house near the cemetery and has the same nearly dismantled. Mr. Banks will remove the same to Jasper.

Avery Cheeseman, who broke his ankle in a ball game at Jasper, is out on crutches.

The school, under the efficient management of Prof. Lansing, bids fair to continue its march to the front.

Miss Cahill of West Hill seriously sprained her ankle Wednesday.

The lorn bridge at Rough and Ready is open for traffic.

A short time ago the canal ring wanted seven and one-half million to complete the canal. After that was expended they wanted sixty-two millions for the same purpose. Now they want one hundred and one millions for the job. That would be a princely sum to handle for the public. What would an enlarged canal do? It would cheapen freight on western farm products that is already running eastern farming. It is a poor time to waste money on canals when the state has lately abandoned several because they were no longer useful.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty four hours. For sale by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.

Seeing the Beautiful.

Franklinzella a story of a man whose two legs were very unlike—one handsomely turned, the other deformed. Whenever any one who visited him looked at the ugly leg and commented on it, he held the man to be looking for the bad side of things and folk. But if the visitor saw his handsome limb and commented on its beauty he held the fellow to be worth esteem, for he looked at the good side of things and probably would see the best in his neighbors and friends. Is it easier to see other people's virtues than their faults? I have at last come to see that folk are far better that they get credit for being.

When Carlyle and Emerson walked London and saw the horror of gin palaces and the miseries of poverty, the former said, "What do you think now of the Saxon stock?" Emerson answered, "The more I see of the English people the more I admire their power and wonder at their progress."

Now that somebody has discovered that the expression "Nothing doing" was in use eighty years ago it is apparent there is nothing new even in slang. Probably the expression "Get a gait on you" was used by Noah when he was driving the animals into the ark.

Those who are condemning the action of the dowager Empress Tsi An for ordering a Chinese editor flayed to death should remember that he wrote much poetry.

Chamberlain's Tariff Plans.

The tariff proposals of Mr. Chamberlain, the British colonial secretary, probably just now form the most widely discussed foreign topic, and they are not without interest and significance to this country. At the outset Mr. Chamberlain was apparently alone in his advocacy of a tariff sufficient to be composed of Great Britain and her colonies, but later in the house of commons Premier Balfour, who had hitherto been ranked among the colonial secretary's opponents on this question, came unreservedly to his support. The premier declared that there was no difference of opinion between Mr. Chamberlain and himself, repeated all the arguments made by the former and added others of his own in favor of a revision of Britain's free trade policy with a view to overcoming the tariff walls erected by other countries and of employing to the best advantage the trade opportunities offered respectively by England and her colonies.

Discussing the probable attitude of other countries toward Mr. Chamberlain's plans, the London Telegraph says: "If we can settle with the United States we may regard the threat of retaliation elsewhere with indifference." The paper then proceeds to argue that if America retaliated she would fly in the face of her own principles as well as of British interests. "How will it affect us?" is a question pertinently asked by American exporters, particularly of food stuffs. It can readily be seen that with a lower range of duties on imports from the British colonies into the United Kingdom American exports of food products would be at a decided disadvantage as compared with those of Canada, for example. However, whatever alarm the situation may cause is tempered by the reflection that, tariff or no tariff, Englishmen must continue to draw their sustenance to a large extent from the products of the United States.

Some of the bituminous operators are said to be very much displeased over the agreement entered into at Indianapolis recently, under the terms of which the miners are to receive an average increase of 12½ per cent in their pay. The operators ought not to find fault. Through their representatives they were parties to the compromise, which evidently averted a long and expensive strike, and, besides, at the prices for which they are now selling soft coal they can well afford to pay the advance.

His Life Saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"B. L. Byer, a well known cooper of this town, says he believes Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy saved his life last summer. Perpetual Motion Achieved Again.

According to information coming from Texas, perpetual motion has been achieved again, and it is announced that the wonderful machine will be exhibited at the world's fair in St. Louis.

It is curious that the solvers of this long puzzling problem—and there are several of them every year—always live in out of the way places far from the usual haunts of applied science. There is always a certain vagueness in the descriptions sent out by local correspondents, owing doubtless to their unfamiliarity with scientific terminology. In this instance, however, the chronicler has explained just why the inventive youth has succeeded where all others failed. The point is that "he has been able to overcome the 'dead level' which has floored all his predecessors in this field of research and experiment."

This "dead center" has skulked like a skeleton in many an inventor's closet. At the door of that dreaded one they laid their failures. It is gratifying, therefore, to learn that the arch enemy of perpetual motion has at last been conquered.

This new Texas wizard has also solved the further problem which science has claimed never would be solved—of drawing force from the machine. He claims that he has produced 100 revolutions a minute from his test machine, which is constructed of wood, and he is now making plans for a new machine to run at 200 revolutions a minute and develop fifty horsepower. When one remembers the Rusty motor, it is not surprising to read that "a gentleman," when he saw the machine running, offered $10,000 for a half interest in it. The Rusty motor ran in the inventor's laboratory, but not by sympathetic vibrations, and it did not furnish perpetual motion. These turning wheels in Texas may not be what they seem.

No. 10.

The truthful advertisement is the one that brings business, and most all advertising is truthful, just as most all men are truthful.

Occasionally one meets a man who lies. That sort of a man writes lying advertisements. They may pay temporarily, but no permanent success was ever built on a foundation of humbug. Most advertisers are honest. At least, they mean to be.

Often each one of half a dozen dealers will insist that he has "the biggest and best stock in the city." Of course, they can't all be right, but that is merely a form of words. Really it doesn't mean much of anything either to the writer or the reader, and so does no harm—except that it wastes valuable space in the papers.

The advertisement that pays best is the plain, honest, forceful talk, written just as if the writer was talking to the reader face to face—a statement of facts.

There is nothing in the world so interesting as facts, especially the facts of business. They should be written about entertainingly. People like to know how and where things are made. Not a technical description, but a hint here and there. For instance: "These goods were designed and woven in France, the cotton came from Alabama, and the silk from China. Twice across the Atlantic, once across Asia and Europe, and here is the finished fabric for seventy-five cents a yard."

It creates an interest that a mere bald statement never would get. Knowledge, thought and truthfulness will generally produce a good advertisement, and a good advertisement in a good paper will always bring good results. The selection of the medium is the first and most important point. The writing comes after. Even a bad ad. in a good paper will bring some business. A good ad. in a poor paper is sheer waste.

"Across the Atlantic and once across Asia and Europe, and here is the finished fabric at seventy-five cents a yard."

"Occasionally one meets a man who lies."

TROUPS ON BORDER.

Three Troups of Bulgarian Reserves Called Out.

BULGARIANS' APPEAL TO POWERS

Severe Fighting Reported in Monastir. Turkish Troops Seeking Revolutionists. Set Fire to a Monistary and Killed the Inmates—Prince Ferdinand's Return to His Capital.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 16.—Twenty thousand Bulgarian reserves, belonging to three divisions on the Turkish frontier, have been called to the colors.

No important step is likely to be taken at the present critical juncture, pending the return to the capital of Prince Ferdinand and a reply from the powers or some intimation from them in response to Bulgaria's note.

The air here is filled with rumors of mobilization. It is alleged that the first three divisions of the army, having their centers at Sofia, Philippopolis and Eskiji Zagra, have been called out.

In official quarters, however, it is declared that the only step actually decided upon is the summoning to the colors of the men of the first three divisions who retired from the army during the last three years. This will give a force of some 10,000 men who will be chiefly employed in strengthening the troops along the frontier.

It is expected that a week will suffice to enable the ministry to judge of the extent to which its final appeal to the powers is likely to prove successful.

More fighting is reported from the vilayet of Monastir. A large body of troops sent to the Pelister mountains to disperse the bands concealed there were attacked by the insurgents and suffered heavy losses from bombs.

The Turks also lost many men in a fight near the monastery of Kamikia at Okrida.

It is announced that a detachment of Turkish troops which went to the Greek monastery of Bareshani, near Monastir, to seek a number of revolutionaries supposed to be hiding in the building, finding none there, set fire to the monastery and killed the servants and the women.

At Kemekiglavi, near Posengrad, a body of Turkish infantry and cavalry, accompanied by a mountain battery, fought a three hours engagement with a number of insurgents. The Turks had 30 killed and many wounded.

Prince Ferdinand returns here tomorrow.

The revolutionary headquarters have received news of a terrible situation at Losengrad. Turkish and Albanian troops and Bashi-Bazouks cover the district. Twelve villages have been burned and over 100 families have been massacred. Many of the women and girls have been sent to various harems.

All the Bulgarian prisoners in the town jail at Losengrad have been killed.

WAR IS IMMINENT.

Ambassador Storer Discussed the Situation With the President.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 16.—Bellamy Storer, ambassador of the United States to Austria-Hungary, accompanied by Mrs. Storer, came to take leave of the president on the eve of his return to Vienna. He will sail on the American liner New York today.

Ambassador Storer said he regarded the danger of war between Bulgaria and Turkey as imminent. The hope of peace, he said, on the second conference between the Czar of Russia and Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary, to be held soon.

Ambassador Storer discussed the situation with President Roosevelt and now is hurrying to Europe in order that he may be in Vienna at the time of the conference.

General Zontchelf In Command.

Salonika, European Turkey, Sept. 16.—A general insurrection in the vilayet of Salonika, east of the Vardar river, is announced to have begun Monday. The region is divided into eight districts, each commanded by a Bulgarian officer. General Zontchelf, president of the Macedonian committee, is the commander-in-chief.

Weather Indications.

Showers and cooler Wednesday and probably Thursday; fresh south winds, shifting to west.

Turkey's Press Agent.

Now we shall know all about what is going on in Macedonia. The sultan of Turkey has hired a press agent; the sublime porte is to have a sublime reporter. "It is learned here," says a Washington dispatch, "that the sultan feels the need of having his government and its difficulties set before the world in a proper light, and for that reason he has hired an American, who is to be the press agent for the Turkish government."

The sultan has long been accused of being an unprogressive tyrant who utterly lacked the up-to-dateness of the infidel occident and who was slower than the proverbial snail in introducing needed reforms. Let slander still her tongue and base calumny hide its hated head. The sultan has hired a hustling American press agent well gifted with imagination, and we shall soon have official notice that every reform has been carried out and that Abdul Hamid II. is the kindest, most considerate, most humane ruler the world has ever known.

It has long been suspected that the Macedonian committee, who are making trouble for the sultan, have in their employ a very talented press agent, and when he and the sublime reporter begin giving out real massacre figures Macedonia, Salonika and other Turkish districts will speedily be depopulated. One day the murderous Turks will kill all the Macedonians and Bulgarians, and the next the same Macedonians and Bulgarians will massacre every Turk within a hundred miles of the seat of war.

The Turk is not so slow, after all. He is well aware of the value of a good press agent, and just now he seems to need one very much, for Chekib Bey, the Turkish minister in Washington, says that there are more liars in Constantinople writing what purports to be the facts with regard to the troubles of Turkey than he imagined could ever be got together in so small a part of the earth's territory.

The Root of All Evil.

Paul the apostle in his charge to Timothy upon the latter's going over into Macedonia said, "For the love of money is the root of all evil, which, while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

According to Colonel Henry Watterson, the religion of Paul receives little support from the Christian civilization of twentieth century America. In an address before the graduates of a business college at Hoboken the other evening the veteran Kentucky editor said:

"Each country has its crowns of glory and crowns of thorns. Find out a nation's sins and you find therein its dangers. What is the matter with America? Is it the race problem of the south? I know so much about that that I can say it is not. I have in my shaken belief in the powers above that make me think that it will furnish its own solution.

"Is it the labor question? That, too, will settle itself. No. The real danger has its roots in human nature, is fostered by our peculiar conditions and lies in the effect of money upon the national moral sense. The brains of the country are all engaged in money making and money making alone.

"It is the money devil we must fear and the money spirit of which we must beware."

"Labor day in America," said a satirical British tourist, "is the day in America when no one labors." Having delivered this facetious utterance, he promptly copied it and mailed it to his beloved Punch. Trivialities do not appeal to John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and he gives a more satisfactory definition of the day in a letter to the New York World. "Labor day in America corresponds to May day in Europe," he says. "On that day the hosts of labor join in parade and assemble in mass meeting for the purpose of reviewing the progress of the past, discussing the problems of the present and preparing to meet the exigencies of the future. The year just closed has been eventful in many respects. Labor has won numerous victories, both by strikes and by negotiations; but, better still, labor and capital learned many lessons, chiefly to respect the rights, the obligations and the duties of each to the other and of both to society. The future holds out bright promise for American labor, whose relations with capital are being reconciled through conciliation, arbitration, joint conferences and trade agreements."

We may have "another Worth" and an "American Worth" at that in the person of young Earl E. Hodge of Chicago, a nineteen-year-old boy, who won the prize for the best dressed hat at the recent milliners' convention in Chicago.

What a jolly Christmas dinner the Boers would have eaten in London had they known just how England was fixed at the beginning of the South African war!

The way in which Jamaica has recovered from the effects of that cyclone shows she still has considerable ginger left.

Forestry and Irrigation.

The question of forest reserves is one of the most important of all the questions which come before the citizens of a large portion of the United States. In portions of the west and northwest, where the very life of agriculture depends upon the possibilities of irrigation, the preservation of the forests is of vital importance. As agriculture extends in those sections the conflict of interests between the farmers upon one hand and the lumbermen and cattle men upon the other hand becomes more and more acute. The recent extension of the Yellowstone forest reserve has occasioned loud protests from the cattle men, who claim that the extension has interfered with the pasturing of cattle and sheep, and thus greatly retarded the live stock interests. The discussion between the opposing interests waxes warm at times.

An editorial in the Sun, published at Saratoga, Wyo., gives in a few words the attitude of those who are opposed to the invasion of the forest lands by the live stock interests. Says the Sun:

"The government is not going to allow the forest reserves to be turned into pasture lands for the benefit of stockmen. The government is setting aside these reserves for the purpose of preserving the timber on them, in order to hold the snow to make water for irrigation purposes, to carry out the great plan inaugurated when the irrigation bill was passed. The government and every sane person recognizes the fact that it is the man who builds ditches and plants alfalfa, grain and vegetables that is the bone and sinew of the country, and it is for the home maker that all of this forest reserve and irrigation work is being done and not for the man who travels in a sheep wagon here and there over the country or roams the land with a round up wagon and a band of cowboys."

James Wilson, the secretary of agriculture, says the forestry conditions are of an alarming nature. In twenty years, he claims, the scarcity of timber will be felt strongly, but in forty years at the most the entire land will be face to face with a wood famine. The lover of trees and all right minded citizens should see that every possible effort is made to improve and increase our woodlands.

"Woodman, spare that tree." Why not keep these words ever before us? Why not teach every child the details of horticulture and the value of every tree? The coming generation will be the sufferer in the event of a wood famine, and forewarned is forearmed.

Growth of Rural Improvement.

Evidences are multiplying that a great intellectual ferment is going on in our rural communities, says A. C. True in the August Chautauquan. Its results are already apparent in important movements affecting the social life and the material prosperity of the country people. Portunately, at the very time when an intellectual awakening of the masses of our farmers is at hand, the means are being afforded for greatly improving the material and social features of their environment.

Hitherto the greatest physical barrier to the material and social advancement of the farmer has been his isolation. Under the best conditions it has been difficult for him to keep in close touch with the great centers of human activity. It is true that the railroads have for many years exerted a tremendous influence in ameliorating rural life by giving the farmer ready access to the world's markets, bringing near to him all the great resources of modern civilization and promoting a mobility of the rural population previously impracticable. And more recently there has been a widespread movement for the improvement of the country roads. But neither the railroads nor good roads could ever have dispelled the gloom of isolation from the farmer's home in any such measure as is being done by other agencies now actively at work in many rural communities.

Wonderful as the change wrought by the rural free delivery of mails, it is surpassed by that accomplished by the widespread introduction of cheap rural telephone service. Now, indeed, is our farmer plunged into the midst of things. In many regions the trolley lines are supplementing steam transportation and bringing hosts of farmers into closer touch with urban life.

The following, from a Missouri paper, should be posted in every fisherman's scrapbook: "Sam Kiplinger caught a forty pound catfish, and he knows who borrowed it without his consent. This friend is requested to settle for the fish and save himself serious trouble." No fisherman need go home empty handed now without a good excuse, and it is also unnecessary to visit the fish market.

Can the statement that there are more men in Chicago than women be true? As the bargain counter flourishes more prominently in Chicago than in almost any other American city, it looks as if there was a mistake somewhere.

If the bicycle, motorcycle and automobile will be utilized in our next war, as General Miles says, it is to be hoped they will be equipped with nonpuncturable tires.

Instead of being put to ordinary jail tasks long sentence prisoners at Robert, Tuemunin, are employed in the local botanical gardens.

Have You Eaten "Fe"?

There are so many "ready to eat" foods on the market now that one hardly knows how to distinguish between them. "Fe" should not be classed with the others. There is no other that compares with "Fe", as one trial will convince you. "Fe" is more healthful, strengthening and tastes better. Made by a new process and ready to eat by adding milk. A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time sixty million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.
