Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly affected with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his peril, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty four hours. For sale by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.

Young Men's Department.

In most stores are a sort of "clothing hash" compounded of some undergrown men's suits and some oversized boys' togs. Such garments are without character—flat and graceless. Small wonder that you smart young fellows have gone to the maker-to-order. He gave you the clothes meant for you, the you did have to pay him half more. College clothes are meant to please young men who have found it impossible to patronize clothing stores. They've swing and dash any style from collar to pants turn. All that custom garments can be and the "extra half" is saved.

Confidence in Senator Green.

Binghamton, Sept. 23.—As a result of the Republican city caucuses held last night, it is certain that Dr. S. L. Smith will be unanimously renominated for mayor and Frank Stewart for corporation counsel. In all the ward caucuses resolutions of confidence in Senator George E. Green, recently indicted in connection with the postal investigation, were largely signed and in the Second ward were adopted unanimously. In the 11th ward caucus a special resolution of confidence in Mr. Green was also adopted. Mr. Green was elected county committeeman from the 11th ward.

Fearful Odds Against Him.

Bedridden, alone and destitute. Such in brief was the condition of an old soldier by name of J. J. Havens, Versailles, O. TURCO-BULGARIAN NEGOTIATION.

Bulgaria Asks That Burned Villages Be Rebuilt and Refugees Repatriated.

Sofia, Sept. 23.—The following is the position of the Turco-Bulgarian negotiations: The porte recently manifested a disposition to consider proposals for a direct understanding and Bulgaria advanced the following conditions:

First, the porte to grant a general amnesty and stop the persecution of the Bulgarians in Macedonia; second, a mixed commission to be formed, the Bulgarian members of which should be nominated by the Bulgarian exarch, and never be a minority on the commission, to elaborate administrative reforms, arrange for an extension of local administrative autonomy, insure the safety of the highways and the equality of Christians and Mussulmans before the courts, reform the taxation and gendarmery and provide for personal security.

After the accomplishment of these tasks, the commission, which would probably sit at Salonica, would become the council of the inspector general and would depute one of its Bulgarian members to report to the sultan on the progress of affairs.

Bulgaria also asked that the burned villages be rebuilt with government assistance, the refugees repatriated, an especial ordinance issued providing for the organization and administration of the Bulgarian schools and churches.

These proposals seem to have been accepted in principle, although nothing definite has yet been decided. Proofs of good faith would be required in case of an agreement.

A list compiled from official sources is published giving the names of and details regarding 23 villages in the district of Malkoternovo, 18 in the district of Kirkklilisse, four in Vasiliko and three in Vezene, which have been the scene of pillage, murder and outrage by Turkish troops.

Within 48 hours the question of peace or war will probably be settled. Premier Petroff had an interview with Alf Perulu Bey at which the whole Macedonian situation was discussed. As a result a much better feeling prevails and confident topes are expressed that a satisfactory adjustment will be reached. This view is strengthened by a report from Constantinople that the council of ministers is within measurable distance of an agreement on the chief points at issue.

Targets That Fire Back.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—An extensive system of targets that fire with blank cartridges upon a firing line using real cartridges was tested here. The targets which are shaped like the bodies and heads of men armed with rifles, machine guns and artillery, appear, and disappear at the will of the commanding officer on touching an electric button. The problem of the firing line is to make as many hits as possible on these targets which at the same time simulate the conditions of actual war by keeping up a hot blank cartridge fire upon the practicers.

Little, merchant, Hancock, Md. For sale by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.

Short Talks on Advertising
By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 11.

Some time ago one of the largest and most liberal advertisers in a leading Eastern city had a successful sale of a stock of goods obtained through the failure of a competitor. The man who failed had a large capital invested in his business. He carried a line of goods above the average for completeness and desirability. There seemed to be no reason for his failure except one. His store was poorly advertised.

In one of the advertisements of the firm which bought the stock, the statement was made: "The store was poorly advertised, so poorly, indeed, that few people knew of the existence of so great a business house anywhere east of Main street."

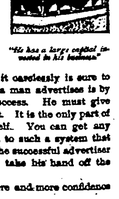
This transaction furnishes an object lesson that is most conclusive.

"He didn't advertise. His stock was sold out to the advertiser who did."

The man who failed advertised, but he did not advertise right, or enough. His stock was sold out by the advertisers who did advertise properly and liberally.

Advertising is the most useful of all the tools of business, but it has a razor edge. The man who handles it carelessly is sure to wish he hadn't. The mere fact that a man advertises is by no means an insurance of business success. He must give constant, careful thought to the subject. It is the only part of his business which will never run itself. You can get any other department in the business down to such a system that it will require very little thought, but the successful advertiser must be always alert and must never take his hand off the advancing rudder for an instant.

Every day, people are gaining more and more confidence in advertising. More and more of them are turning to the advertising columns of the paper for information. There is no doubt about this.



"He has a large capital invested in his business."

The business men who fail to appreciate it are likely to find themselves so far behind the times that they will never catch up. It is always better to advertise a little too much than not quite enough. It is better to use a little more time than is necessary in the consideration of advertising and the preparation of advertisements than it is to be ever so little careless about it.

"Advertising is the most useful of business tools, but it has a razor edge."

CANAL TREATY DEAD.

President Can Now Proceed Under the Spooner Act.

AND TAKE UP NICARAGUA ROUTE

Report that Colombian Congress Has Clothed President Marroquin With Power to Negotiate a New Treaty—Terms of Nine Opponents in Colombian Senate Next Year.

Washington, Sept. 23.—When the state department closed yesterday it was agreed that the Panama canal treaty was dead, although eight hours yet remained within which the Colombian congress might take affirmative action upon it.

Nothing, however, had been received during the day which gave the slightest hope of a favorable issue. A report is current that the Colombian congress in secret session has clothed President Marroquin with full power to negotiate a treaty.

If this report is true President Marroquin, who is a friend of the treaty, could proceed untrammeled by the fear of future reckoning with his congress.

In any event President Roosevelt must now take the next step. He can proceed under the Spooner act and take up the Nicaragua route or he can allow matters to drift for the present in the hope that a way may yet be found to straighten out the difficulties in the path of the Panama route.

It is stated that the confidential advices which Dr. Herran submitted to Secretary Hay a short time ago were to the effect that an effort was on foot at Bogota to harmonize all conflicting interests there and that this undoubtedly would be accomplished through a compromise by which President Marroquin would be authorized to negotiate a treaty directly with the United States. It is believed here that the new proposition will be submitted at an early day.

Contrary to his custom during the summer, Acting Secretary Adee of the state department remained in the city last night in order to be able to act promptly on any information regarding canal matters at Bogota.

Dr. Herran, the Colombian charge, also waited anxiously for news from his government.

Colombia is anxious to keep alive the canal negotiations, but what form her new proposition will take is not known here.

One interesting feature is that the terms of one-third of the members of the Colombian senate, numbering nine, will expire July 20. These nine senators are adverse to the canal treaty. The hope of the advocates of the treaty will be to elect senators in their places who are favorable.

Gilder Will Not Run For Alderman

New York, Sept. 23.—Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century Magazine, has declined a request that he run for alderman of New York as a Citizens' Union candidate. In a letter to the chairman of the Citizen's Union district committee in the Fifth assembly district Mr. Gilder says that while he believes in good government and in hearty sympathy with the work of the Citizens' Union, he nevertheless finds it impossible, for business reasons, to be a candidate. The letter was written from Tyringham, Mass., where Mr. Gilder is spending his vacation.

Secretary Visits Naval Home.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Secretary Moody visited the naval home here. He said he had selected this date for his visit as a tribute to William Macabee, the oldest American naval veteran, who today celebrates the 100th anniversary of his birth. In his address to the inmates of the home Secretary Moody said: "You must not think you are objects of charity by receiving the shelter of this home. You are here in the most honorable sense, and nothing is a gift to you. You earned all you are receiving by your service under the flag."

Weed-Conway Delegates Won.

Plattsburg, Sept. 23.—The Democratic primaries here resulted last night in the overwhelming defeat in every ward in the city of the faction recognized by ex-Senator Hill in the last state convention. This gives the supporters of Smith M. Weed and Thomas F. Conway, whom ex-Senator Hill refused to recognize at the last state convention, complete control of the city. The Weed-Conway faction have also carried every town in the county in which primaries have been held.

Died on Return From Canoe Trip.

Minneapolis, Sept. 23.—Mrs. F. W. Plant, a daughter of Senator J. K. Jones of Arkansas, is dead at Deer River, Minn. She was en route home from a canoe trip with her husband through the Northern woods. The party left Minneapolis two weeks ago and Mrs. Plant apparently in good health.

Steamer Rua Down by Barge.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 23.—The American steamer Georgetown of Buffalo, N. Y., while lying in the stream near Lamberts Point, was run down by a barge and damaged to the extent of $10,000. The Georgetown was berthed and temporary repairs were being made to her damaged bow.

Riffing the Husband's Pockets.

The supreme court of Maine has settled, at least so far as its jurisdiction extends, a much controverted point—to wit, the right of a wife to rifle the pockets of her sleeping husband. From the report of the case at bar it appears that one Godfrey Harrison negotiated a sale of certain garden and farm truck with a gentleman who paid in cash and that there passed from him to Godfrey the neat little sum of $581. In the guilelessness of his heart Godfrey told the wife of his bosom of his transaction and the cash, which he left in the pocket of his trousers, placing the same under his pillow, and slept the sleep of the just and honest farmer of Maine. His awakening was somewhat rude, and the scene that followed is no part of the record. It is sufficient to state that Penelope Harrison, the wife of his bosom, during the still watches of the night had taken the trousers from underneath her husband's pillowed head, abstracting therefrom the sum of $500 and returning to its abiding place the balance.

Then Godfrey hailed Penelope to court in an action to determine whether she was guilty of the trover and conversion of the money of said Godfrey, and the supreme court said she was not. The learned judge laid it down as a fundamental principle of law that husband and wife are one and the same matrimonial entity in the sight of the law and that as a man cannot steal from himself so neither can the wife steal from the husband, being one with him, as he is one with her. So his honor gave verdict in favor of Penelope and indicted Godfrey for the costs of litigation.

If the court is right—and courts, of course, are always right—Godfrey still has the money, since the husband and wife are de jure et de facto one and the same person. Thus it follows that while Penelope, being the wife, cribbed from Godfrey, being the husband Godfrey was really cribbing from himself, and Penelope really paid the costs, for logic is logic as the Maine court has laid it down.

Pleas For a Noiseless Fourth.

As the time approaches for the observance of the nation's natal day we begin to hear pleas from certain quarters for a noiseless Fourth of July. The idea may appeal to conservative grown up patriots, but the rising generation will not take kindly to any such notion.

In Chicago a plan for a noiseless Fourth has been suggested that reads well and would unquestionably suit quiet, nervous and studious people. It is, briefly, to substitute patriotic literature for firecrackers, skyrockets and roman candles. The average boy with 50 cents to spend, instead of buying the familiar "six packs" of firecrackers, a package of torpedoes, a five cent cannon cracker, a couple of two cent cannon crackers, a cent's worth of punk and a roman candle for use in the evening, will purchase a copy of Burke's speech on conciliation with America, a copy of the Declaration of Independence and a pamphlet containing selections from the speeches of Adams, Webster, Pinckney, Patrick Henry and other patriotic documents.

Minneapolis has another plan for accomplishing the same end—namely, the abolition of juvenile noise. Here it is proposed to have all sorts of games, including aquatic sports, and it is announced that "a programme will be carried out in which all children under the age of sixteen years will be interested." Doubtless they would be interesting to any one under or over sixteen if held on May 21, Aug. 7, Sept. 25 or almost any other date, but on July 4 the soul craves something else, particularly the soul of the patriotic spirited and restless youngster. Even bundles of patriotic literature suit the day better. It might help some if the committee included among the aquatic sports a race of gasoline launches, both of which should blow up as they crossed the line.

Solicitude for the nerves of invalids and octogenarians is doubtless a commendable sentiment, but it may well be doubted whether the adoption of either the Chicago or the Minneapolis plan or any other scheme for a noiseless Fourth will lessen as much as one-half of 1 per cent the noise of the coming Independence day.

Young America will celebrate the Fourth of July whether or no, and, according to his notion, it cannot be celebrated without noise and red fire. Persons with sensitive nerves will have to grin and bear it or take to the woods.

A number of young men who secured appointments in the army under the stress of the Spanish war are now discovering that all is not gold that glitters. Influence helped to secure their appointment at a time when men were needed badly, and they were transferred into the enlarged permanent force. But now they have to undergo examinations for promotion. No influences operate in that matter. If they fail they are allowed another trial, and if they fail a second time they are dismissed. Several have recently been dismissed on that account, and others are "hanging in the balance." Army officers who do not keep up with the requirements of the modern service do not have a very happy time of it.

Insurance Against Strike Losses.

There is now talk of the organization of a company to insure employers against losses occasioned by strikes. An insurance company of this sort would naturally have an interest in preventing strikes, the same as the fire insurance companies have in preventing fires. Its purpose would be, in fact, to reduce to the minimum the losses it would have to pay. For that reason the company would do its utmost to bring employers and employees together in a conciliatory way whenever there was a hint or threat of a strike.

The company might be in a position to present the advantages of arbitration and to convince employers and employees that it is better to settle all differences by mediation than to fight it out to the bitter end. Indeed, arbitration might be enforced by putting into each insurance policy a clause relieving the company of liability when there is a refusal to submit to a just demand for arbitration. That might check a disposition on the part of unscrupulous employers to let strikes come and collect the insurance in lieu of the ordinary profits of their business.

Again, inasmuch as the purpose of a strike sometimes is to cause the employer financial loss, there would be less disposition on the part of employees to tie up a factory or workshop when they knew their employer was insured against loss.

Whether or not such a plan of strike insurance will ever be put in operation, the proposition appears to have some merit and may prove one of the means to a very desirable end, that of eliminating from the industrial world the often recurring and always perplexing disputes between capital and labor, which are an element of greatest loss to both.

The Western Floods.

Whether or not the destruction wrought by the floods in Kansas and Missouri has been overstated the facts are sufficiently appalling to touch the heart and purse strings of the nation. It is the characteristic of the virile and enterprising western cities that they never ask for aid or accept it when they can meet from their own resources the conditions brought about by disasters, but in this instance the calamity is so great and widespread that it is quite beyond the power of the local communities to relieve the distress.

Governor Bailey of Kansas has announced in the press that outside aid will be accepted and judiciously used. This should be sufficient to set the agencies of relief throughout the country in motion. Unquestionably the people in the flooded districts are in dire straits. The multitude of homeless families must live for many days where and as they can in camps and improvized lodgings, and without assistance many would perish from hunger, disease and exposure. In many cases their homes have been swept away; in many others they are shifted and displaced and must be practically rebuilt to be habitable; in still others the tenant must shovel out the mud and excavate from the silt deposit the remnants of ruined furniture and utensils. The flood sufferers, many of whom lost all they had on earth, most urgently need clothing, food, medicines, medical assistance and nurses. They will require help until they can help themselves.

The American people have never been indifferent to the calls for aid from either those at home or abroad who have been overtaken by calamities, and the case at hand will prove no exception.

Making "Moonshine" Whisky.

"So this is the only liquor distillery in all these mountains?" remarked the visitor to a little mountain settlement in North Carolina in a tone that was half questioning.

"It do be," said the mountain whisky maker.

"How much do you turn out in a day?" asked the stranger.

"Waal, I reckon we make along about twenty gallons a day."

"And is that all the whisky that's drunk in these parts?"

"Say, you be-ent no revenue sharp, be you?" he demanded suddenly. "'Cause if you be I ain't got nothin' to say. I pays my taxes, as ever one knows, an' that's all there is to it."

After a time the stranger persuaded him that there was no interior motive in his questioning, and the old man explained the whisky situation.

"I tole you this was the only still around here, an' so it is—the only one that pays a tax. But" he continued, "every ole woman in these mountains has a copper kettle in which she boils her washing. Every old woman has a lid—that fits the copper kettle tightly, and that can be fastened down. They boil clothes in them on Monday, and they boil whisky in them the other six days of the week."—New York Tribune.

Have You Eaten "Ie"?

There are so many "ready to eat" foods on the market now that one hardly knows how to distinguish between them. "Ie" should not be classed with the others. There is no other that compares with "Ie", as one trial will convince you. "Ie" is more healthful, strengthening and tastes better. Made by a new process and ready to eat by adding milk. Get a package to-day at your grocers.
