THE SITUATION IN A NUTSHELL.

We clip the following from the Times-Republican of Canisteo:

The Times-Republican has stated repeatedly that the present assembly campaign is one of unusual importance to every citizen, voter and taxpayer in New York state; that the question will be fought out and settled as to whether the Republican policy of no state taxes is to prevail, or whether the Raines law tax on liquor selling is to be repealed and this burden of taxation to be settled down upon the taxpayers of this state.

This question is one of strictly partisan lines. The entire liquor element is arrayed on the side of the democratic party, and all thru the state strenuous efforts are being made to elect democratic assemblymen.

To show how wide and strong a movement is now in progress to accomplish this end we reprint below from the Corning Leader, the report of the liquor dealers state convention on Wednesday. This report is made by the Associated Press, and was published in practically every daily newspaper in New York state. It is as follows:

Schenectady, Sept. 23.—The state convention of the New York wine, liquor and beer dealers' association now in session in this city, last night for the first time in its history became a partisan organization. President Dolan of the association in his annual report advised all members of the organization to array themselves against the administration of Governor Odell, and later on the convention adopted resolutions protesting in the most emphatic manner against the license legislation enacted by the last legislature. The resolutions called for an organization in every city and town in the state which will use every endeavor to elect democratic candidates for the legislature.

"The resolutions further call upon every member to renounce the Republican party at the coming election and to secure from all democratic candidates a promise that if elected they will vote for new tax laws when introduced into the state legislature."

James E. Schwarzenbach, who holds large brewing interests at Hornellsville, is the Democratic-liquor candidate for member of assembly from this district, and is pledged to secure the repeal of the license legislation passed last winter. Hon. J. B. Santee, the Republican candidate, is pledged to the Republican policy of a tax on the liquor business and no state taxes, a policy which is now benefiting every property owner in Steuben county. It is the duty of every Republican voter to cast his ballot for J. E. B. Santee for assemblyman and also to see to it that his neighbor is informed of the critical situation and also casts his ballot for Santee. Vote the straight Republican ticket.

Short Talks On Advertising

By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 12.

Economy often defeats its own ends. Sometimes economy is extravagant. Sometimes not spending is more expensive than spending.

So in advertising. That is an economical expense. I call it an expense to avoid argument. In reality it is an investment.

In a ten-dollar advertisement the last two dollars pay better than the other eight. Maybe an eight-dollar ad. wouldn't pay when a ten-dollar ad. would. Maybe that extra space is just what the ad. needs to lift it out of oblivion—to make it prominent—to make it pay.

Don't buy more space than you need, but don't buy too little, either. Better buy too much than too little. Better put an eight-dollar ad. in a ten-dollar space than to put a ten-dollar ad. in an eight-dollar space. One way you are out only two dollars; the other way you are out eight dollars.

Save money on your advertising if you can, of course, but save it in the right way. Cut off the little leaks—the programs, the bills of fare, the directories, the wall charts, the pages in "souvenirs." Cut them all off, and your trade will never feel the difference.

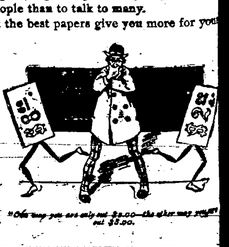
Cut off the inconsequential papers if you have to, but always keep your ad. in your best papers, big enough to do you justice. It is better to convince a few people than to talk to many.

You will always find that the best papers give you more for your money than any other media.

Don't think one paper high-priced because the rate is a dollar an inch, and another one low-priced because it is ten cents an inch.

Usually the more you pay for advertising the cheaper it is.

There are exceptions, of course. They prove the rule.



Copyright, Charles Austin Bates, New York. "One way you are out only $2.00—the other way you get out $8.00."

Popocatepetl to Be Sealed.

The report having been confirmed that an American syndicate has purchased the great Mexican volcano, Popocatepetl, and details given of a plan for building a railway to its summit and opening the sulphur deposits in the bowels of the volcano, we may rest assured that before long any tourist of average means may be able to view one of the grandest prospects on this continent. Popocatepetl has been owned by one individual, General Sanches Ochoa, for more than quarter of a century. He has tried many times to cast off the great burden entailed by the ownership of a volcano likely at any time to blow its head off and devastate the surrounding country, but hitherto has been unsuccessful. At one time it was given out that a company had been formed to tunnel into the crater from Amecameca, through which town a railroad runs; but nothing came of that. Again, the vast sulphur deposits supposed to exist within the crater were to be exploited by another company operating over a tramway to be constructed from the great pine forests below the line of perpetual snow.

It is presumed that the railway people will provide a snow slide attachment to all their trains by means of which the passengers may "streak it" down the cone. Otherwise the climbing of the volcano would be robbed of half its pleasures.

As to getting out the sulphur in the crater, the first time it was tried was when Cortes and the other Spaniards invaded Mexico, about 1520, when a man was let down into the great chasm by a rope and obtained sulphur for making the powder used in the subsequent bombardment of the Aztec capital. Sulphur exists in the crater, but not in great quantities, being constantly sublimated in the orifices opening up from the nether world.

Leprosy In Colombia.

Here is something that may throw light on the recent action, or, rather, inaction, of the Colombians with reference to the canal treaty. Professor Jonathan Hutchinson, the well known surgeon and expert on leprosy, in a letter to the London Times renews his former endeavor to establish the connection between the eating of decayed fish on religious fast days and the spread of that loathsome disease. He says that his attention has been directed recently to its prevalence in the United States of Colombia. It was in that region that the earliest Spanish settlements were made, and where, according to tradition, the first cases of leprosy on the American continent occurred. Mr. Hutchinson has been investigating the case and directs attention to some suggestive facts. He quotes the figures of Dr. Ashmead of New York city to show that, while there are 200,000 lepers in India, 100,000 in China and an equal number in Japan, there are 20,000 in Colombia. This, allowing for the difference in population, shows that there are about twelve cases of leprosy in Colombia to one in India. As a matter of fact, he says, the excess in Colombia is probably much greater. In India, where in vast districts fish is forbidden food, the ratio of leprosy is six per 10,000. In Colombia, where the consumption of fish is stimulated by religious ritual, the leprosy ratio is nearly seventy per 10,000.

It is becoming more and more apparent that English has actually taken the place of French in diplomatic intercourse and is rapidly climbing to supremacy. Without going into an analysis of the two languages or discussing the relative merits of either the diplomats seem to have arrived at the conclusion that for their purposes English is the better of the two. This would imply a radical departure by them from the recognized standards previously set up, for it has long been held by the old types that the language of diplomacy should be used to conceal rather than reveal your purpose. But if one will take the trouble to review some of the notable diplomatic transactions of recent days he will be impressed by the force and directness of the language used as contrasted with the old circumlocutory style when French was in vogue. In short, real "United States" English is being used in international discussions, as emphasized by the proceedings before the last Hague tribunal, when each advocate was allowed to use his own language in pleadings, and still more in the official announcement that English is to be the medium employed in the next. And why shouldn't English assert itself when there are more people speaking it in Europe alone than any other language, not to mention Great Britain and the United States, which together have run a linguistic belt all around the globe?

Queer coincidence. Shortly after Mr. Chamberlain announced his change of heart on the fiscal question it was observed by British scientists that their climate was undergoing a change, getting warmer. Perhaps Joe has done something real fresh. He was lately reported as getting "hot under the collar."

In one train a surpliced choir of 600 members, will travel, while another will be a military one, strong.

Is Uncle Sam too shrewd a business man to go into partnership with anybody in the canal transaction?

More Sessions of Congress.

It is intimated that in his forthcoming annual message President Roosevelt will recommend that congress change the date of holding its regular sessions so that three instead of two sessions may be held in every two years. There is perhaps something to be said on both sides of this proposition. If the holding of three sessions instead of two during the life of a congress will facilitate the transaction of the nation's business there is no good reason why they should not be held, since members of congress are paid for their full time, and the additional expense would be trifling.

Under the present rule a member of congress is elected in November. His term of office begins on the 4th of the following March, the date upon which a presidential term begins. But as a rule he does not take the oath of office nor begin to discharge the duties of his office until the second December following his election, or thirteen months after it and some eight months after he has begun to draw his pay. If at any congressional election the people have declared by their votes for or against any given policy they must wait thirteen months before any move can be made to secure legislative action thereon, unless an extraordinary session is called.

It has been suggested and it is intimated that the president will so recommend that congress should meet on the 4th of March following a general election, thus making the term of a member begin with the discharge of his active duties as such member. At that first meeting organization might be completed and things arranged for rapid work at the longer session, which would begin, as now, in the following December. The second session would be the long one and could continue, say, until June 1, by which time most of the really important matters ought to be out of the way. Then in the following December congress would reassemble to sit until March 4, when a new congress would come into being.

This, it is believed, would not only give opportunity for more prompt action on any pending question of policy, but facilitate the general work of congress and lessen the possibility of disastrous deadlocks.

The desired end might be accomplished in this way and it might not. The average congress would rather talk politics than do business, and it is possible that if there were more sessions there would be more talk and even less business. The way in which really important business is frequently postponed until the last day of a session and then rushed through without proper consideration is an exhibition of congressional tactics hardly likely to be effected one way or the other by increasing the number of sessions. Besides, it may be questioned whether the country, which would prefer to have less rather than more congress "on its hands," would relish the idea.

Publicity and the Church.

One of Milwaukee's most prominent clergymen, Rev. Dr. Judson Titsworth, pastor of Plymouth church, in a recent interview reported in the Milwaukee Sentinel "advocates the maintenance of a bureau of publicity in every church, but he does not recommend sensational advertising. The basis of his theory is that the church should be conducted as a business enterprise. When there are applied to the churches the same principles that insure success in other lines of activity the churches will become prosperous. Conducted as charitable enterprises, their growth will be uncertain. This age is not more thoughtless or more irreligious than any other. It is merely more full of diverse activities and interests. Men and women are so much preoccupied by their vocations and avocations that they forget their religious obligations unless reminded in some insistent manner."

Rev. Dr. Titsworth's point is well taken. In ecclesiastical as well as business affairs "judicious advertising is the corner stone of success."

Grover Cleveland Fuller, aged eighteen, who was earning $30 a month as a stable boy a year ago, is now getting $50,000 a year as a jockey. On the other hand, a former jockey who was in receipt of $10,000 a year is now earning a mere pittance as a saloon keeper. So it may be observed that the wheel of fortune turns both ways.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that, "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover; and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.
