Now that the heated term is over, politics will wax warmer and political demostrations will be the order of the day. The campaign is to be a short and merry one.

The situation in China seems to be one of waiting on the part of the Powers for the others to show their hands. It seems to be the intention of Russia and Germany to indemnify themselves in land if the other Powers do not object too forcibly, and they are evidently feeling their way to expansion.

Usually the first reports of disaster are largest, but not so in the case of the Galveston horror The list of dead has grown continually until it is now placed at over—7,000. This makes the calamity of late years second only to the Johnstown flood in the number of victims and probably will exceed it in loss of property. The systematic methods for securing relief and the quick and generous responses from all parts of the country will not only relieve the suffering but will do much to abolish sectional lines and cement the bonds of friendship between the North and South. The South will realize that

"He who comes to them in the hour of need
With naught to gain, is their true friend indeed," and thus will tend to a closer union than ever.

Two brothers named Utter, of Amitz, N. Y., have got into a snarl because they belong to one had ruined peaches belonging to the other while searching for honey. The beekeeper, reports a local exchange, claimed that it could not be proved that his bees were the offenders, but his brother has ingeniously overcome this difficulty. The bees were first caught extracting juice from the peaches and were caught in a wire gauze trap. Then he let them through a trap door into a place supplied with a dish of honey. When the insects had eaten as much as they wanted they began to look for an exit, and in doing so crawled over a liberal sprinkling of flour which stuck to them. When thoroughly coated they were released and all flew straight for Brother Utter's hives, thus establishing a complete chain of evidence. The beekeeper however, declines to give in and will fight the damage suit.

Unfortunately Unfraternal.

Seldom has anyone shown such presence of mind as was exhibited by William T. McCracken, Who was fatally injured while repairing a broken telephone wire in Kansas City. In some way the line became crossed and McCracken fell writhing to the sidewalk. "Don't touch me," he cried to a bystander who hurried up, "you'll be killed if you do. Get a dry board and stand on it and wrap your hands in a felt hat, then you can get the wire off without hurting yourself." The man dashed off in search of the board, but before he came back McCracken was dead, the wire still grasped in his charred hands.

Karl Lindstrom, a farmer near Williamsfield, Mich., has doubts as to the economy of hiring cheap city boys to work on a farm. Karl engaged an inexperienced youth to help about the place and one morning told the lad to "salt the calf down in the pasture." The boy took a quart of salt and rubbed it into the calf's hair. Some colts scented the salt and before long had nearly licked off the creature's hide. Then the farmer tried to catch and wash the calf, but the frightened youngster thought he wanted to kill him instead, there was quite a time before he was captured and put in a

A crowd of American soldiers in the Philippines attended church service in their honor and were perhaps more amused than scandalized to see on a flaring banner an American eagle bearing in his beak a streamer on which was this legend: "Use only Soand-so's condensed milk." An irreverent artist had enlarged a picture which he saw on a milk can and the good padre was easily convinced that the whole design was American in the extreme. There he had the banner hung over the altar, hoping thereby to greatly gratify the soldiery among his congregation.

There was rather an odd wedding in Lansing, Mich., a few days ago when J. A. Greenough was married for the second time to the same woman. Twenty-five years ago, immediately after his first marriage, he started for the Black hills to seek gold. After a time, says a local report, he ceased to write home and his wife, after securing a divorce, married E. A. Timmerman, who died three years ago. Last spring the widow learned that her first husband was still alive, correspondence ensued and now they have been joined in wedlock once more.

A fish story comes from Kansas, perhaps by way of preliminary to the annual crop of tall cornstalk yarns. The irrigation ditches at Garden City are said to have become so filled with catfish that the hired men are compelled to spear them with pitchforks before the water can flow.

A new song now gaining popularity in the east is entitled, "A Kiss Was the Cause of It All." Until a copy of the production comes to hand, jocosely remarks the Denver Post, we are left to guess whether the "all" was a divorce case or a case of transmission of disease by lip microbes.

Farmers of Dubuque county, Iowa, are banding together to protect what little game is left in that section. Owners of 7,000 acres have formed a compact with this end in view, and others are joining daily, all determined not to permit further violation of the game laws.

In Edinburg, Ind., a hotel has been run exclusively by women for 50 years. A woman built the hotel and ran it for seventeen years, then it was sold to the present owner, who has been running it 33 years. A bachelor boarder remained at the hotel 25 years.

The names suggested to replace that of America for this country have been Columbia, Alleghenia, Appalachia, Vesperia, Freeland, Fredonia, Capotio, Vineland.

That one-legged man who is to travel on foot from San Francisco to New York has not as yet announced which candidate he will stump for.

cellent work of the performers.—Toronto The Mail and Empire.

Each of the three Misses Stephenson are ever welcome on their chosen instruments and were accorded a hearty reception. The ensemble numbers were all rendered with fine taste.—Hamilton (Can.) The Herald.

We were highly pleased with the Stephenson Quartet, and the ladies established an enviable reputation with all who composed the large audience. Encores were demanded with each number.—W. T Perkins, General Secretary Y. M. C. A., Columbus, Ohio.

He brings to the platform something new in manner and in variety of subject his work is wonderful, tear- and laughter follow close upon each other. The High school may congratulate itself upon the choice of such a pleasing entertainer as Wallace Bruce Amsbary.—Washington (D. C.) Post.

Dr. John J. Lewis of Boston. Subject, "Passion Play of Oberammergau."

WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC. 12, 1900.

This is not an ordinary stereopticon lecture, but is given with the motion views from the Kinetoscope, operated by an expert. During the last ten years Dr. Lewis gave the story of the Passion Play upwards of 2,000 times to more than 200,000 people.

Several weak imitations of the Passion Play are presented in Bohemia, Austria and Switzerland, but "The Play of Oberammergau is the only true and authoritative presentation of the "Passion of Christus." From generation to generation the peasants have lived simply to prepare themselves to take part in the great drama in a like manner for years Mr. Lewis has identified himself so closely with the Passion Play that it has become his very life to give the story. Each year has witnessed a growing interest in and a larger attendance upon his recitals. Now he again visits Oberammergau, and, studying down its last presentations, making use of all the latest improvements in, motion picture and stereoscopic art, he will give the lecture-going public a perfect reproduction of the grandest and most impressive religious festival of all time. To obtain the motion pictures and views of the characters and scenes of the Passion Play, the views painted by Katherine Gordon Bired and Helen R. Stevenson of Chicago involve an outlay of thousands of dollars.

To go with Mr. Lewis to this picturesque hamlet in the Bavarian Tyrol and by the aid of motion pictures, to look upon these wonderful peasants as they move about their fields and streets, or go to and from a representation of the Passion Play, will indeed be of highest interest. It will all be as real and as fascinating as an actual trip itself, without any inconvenience and expense of travel. The illusion of being in the midst of those who surrounded Jesus in the streets of Nazareth, Bethany and Jerusalem will be complete.

Dr. C. W. Eliot, President of Harvard College of Oxford, Boston, in announcing the lecture to his five hundred students, said: "You will hear a great lecture, for Mr. Lewis is a great man—great in body, great in brain, great in heart, and great in soul. These gifts, brought well nigh to perfection by years of culture and practice, have made him, the finest product of civilization, a great orator."

Dr. John W Hancher of Kansas City. Subject, "The Real Boy."

TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 15, 1901.

Dr. Hancher has had a wide experience, is ex-President of Black Hills College, South Dakota, has an attractive style, a superb voice and is a good entertaining orator. This lecture deals with the real, live, wide-awake, active specimen with whom we must live seven days in a week, four weeks in a month, twelve months in a year. "It helps the real boy and his pare nts." While dealing with a stoutly realistic theme it is richly illustrated with amusing incidents.

Scranton (Pa.) Journal: "The Rev. Dr. Hancher of Kansas City, Mo., delivered his lecture on "The Real Boy" at the M. E. church in this place on Tuesday evening. He occupied a full hour and a half and held the rapt attention of his hearers every moment of the time. It was perhaps the finest lecture ever delivered in Scranton. Dr. Hancher is a thinker and scholar. His every word was interesting. Surely it was a grand lecture and all who missed it missed a great treat. The writer will give a dollar to hear it repeated."

Edward H. Frye of Boston, Monologist and Impersonator. Subject, "David Harum."

THURSDAY EVENING, FEB. 21, 1901.

Mr. Frye has been on the lyceum profession for several years giving Rip Van Winkle. During the past year he attained such distinction in the impersonation of David Harum that it has been difficult to secure a date for the coming season.

Lovers of "David Harum," Edgar Noyes Westcott's most widely read novel, will avail themselves of the privilege of hearing Mr. Frye's new monologue, adapted from this novel David Harum in monologue is as thoroly entertaining as it is in story. David, of course, is the vital and dominant character, and Mr. Frye has never presented a character for which he is so well suited, in temperment and personality, as this, and he never portrays a one with more enthusiasm and fidelity. In voice and bearing, and in the many niceties of expression, he gives as fine and complete a picture as one could ask to see. He is a performer that easily takes rank with the greatest of monologists. He paints his characters with a broad hand, a true touch, and originality of treatment. Mr. Frye has adapted the story into monologue with accomplished skill, leaving it a consistent, logical, sequential and unified whole, and it has everywhere gained recognition as one of the most brilliant and attractive monologues of the season.

A FEW FROM THOUSANDS.

New Hampshire: He took the audience by storm. His impersonations of Joseph Jefferson were so like the original that one with closed eyes might be easily convinced that he was listening to the well-known actor.—Plymouth Record.

Canada: Those who heard him are wondering yet at his wizardy, and how it was he stood there and made them laugh. He amuses by virtue of his genius; it is not what he says or how he says it, it is his own winning personality that puts one in a merry mood.—Montreal Herald.

New York: Mr. Frye's presence and movements were in harmony with the sentiment of his impersonation and the spirit with which he entered into the characters represented held the attention and called forth the approval of the audience thruout the entertainment.—Utica Daily Press.

The Oxford Musical Club of Boston, vocal and instrumental.

TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 26, 1901.

The Oxford Club are a musical organization that has been on the lyceum platform for several years and are the most expensive company of its kind. They give a more varied program than any other concert company in the country. They give an evening's entertainment that is both interesting and amusing, and one that holds the close attention of the audience from start to finish. The program has been carefully arranged to suit all tastes, and consists of high class vocal and instrumental solos, duets, quartets, and its famous original descriptive selections, brim full of refined wit and humor. Among the many instruments used by the company are the piano, guitar, mandolin, flute, piccolo, violin, cornet, slide trombone, mandolin banjo, xylophone, contra drums, organ pipes, bells and many other novelty instruments.

PERSONNEL.

James A. Korman, Conductor, Bass-Soloist and Pianist; Howard E. Tilton, Manager, Flute and Piccolo; Frank Lancy, Instrumentalist; Ralph L. Reinewald, Cornet, Violin and Mandolin; Arthur E. Thrasher, Tenor Soloist and Mandolin Banjo.

PRESS NOTICES

It is not often that five men can give a satisfactory entertainment, but five men did it at the theater last evening. They were the members of The Oxford Musical Club, and gave the most pleasing number of this season's Midland course. Their selections were good, the music was excellent, and there were no tiresome periods of waiting. It is not often that a descriptive piece of music finds admirers, but "Down the Mississippi," "Ten Minutes with the Minstrels," and "A Day at the Circus," proved exceptions.—The Daily Globe, Atchison, Kansas, Jan. 26th, 1900.

The best entertainment given in the Star Lecture course was that of Wednesday night at the Grand Opera House by The Oxford Musical Club. The house was packed and the entertainment was a great success.—Akron (O.) Journal.

Eighteen post-offices in Washington county, Pa., have been abolished by the introduction of a free rural mail delivery.

Mrs. Wilson and two sons of Wellsville moved into town Saturday, occupying rooms over John Goodwin's harness shop.

Andover Lodge No. 786, I. O. O. F. sent a handsome contribution to their suffering brethren in Galveston, Texas, this week.

Dr. Brainard has a rig up on the Van Fleet lot, a good record being made in its erection, the derrick being run in half a day.

J. M. Hartrum sent a cheese to the State Fair and received first premium on it. A good compliment to the Hartrum cheese factory.

Thirty thousand dollars were paid recently for the privilege of selling peanuts at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year.

At the football game between Belmont and Bradford neither side made a score. This will undoubtedly mean another game in the near future.

The campaign is beginning to open up a little in Andover. We understand a Democratic club has been organize and that the Republicans are to organize the coming week.

The various railroads all over the country are making the statemnt that the excursion trains have been patronized this summer to a greater extent than in any previous year.

Commencing Thursday, Sept. 20, the stores of A. M. Burrows & Son, P. Cannon & Son, and J. L. Williams & Co. will close doors at 8 p. m. So make your arrangements accordingly.

The Republican State Committee have placed Erastus C. Knight, the present Comptroller of Buffalo, as the candidate for State Comptroller in place of William J. Morgan, recently deceased.

Drs. Walker, Witter and Burdick performed successfully a very difficult operation upon Mrs. Bert Chase last Wednesday. The patient is doing well, and chances are now in favor of her recovery.

You can't beat a good flag walk, try the best you may. The one placed in front of the A. M. Burrows & Son's store this week by J. C. Bassett, makes an elegant walk. Would that we had more of them.

J. C. Latham, of the successful Canisteo Times, has purchased the Canisteo Republican, and will consolidate the two papers. Latham is a hustler, and has much improved Canisteo journalism since striking that city.

What is the difference between knowledge and wisdom? It takes knowledge to make an automobile, but one must have wisdom to run one after it is made. We won't call any names, but Mark Houghtling hasn't got Joe's running yet.

An exchange says that even the most troublesome and painful tooth may have its ache stopped by the use of a little of the compound tincture of benzoin, sold everywhere in the drug stores. Put a few drops on cotton and place it around the tooth.

Among our exchanges we would think of getting along without any other before we gave up the Post-Express of Rochester. It is fair and clean in its editorials, always the most accurate in its news pages, and is always strictly right in its make-up.

Miss Alice Clark has captured the prize so far for fruit freaks. She brought to our office the other evening several stems of ripe strawberries just picked from the vines. Strawberries fresh from the vines the last of September would be a new dessert for Allegany county.

Vacations are all over, or nearly so, now, the various lodges and societies that "suspended work" for the summer are again "calling to labor," and things generally indicate that our citizens are now home for the rest of the year, and will be found at their wonted stands "doing business.

Thru the forethought of George Mead and the courtesy of George Young, the comrades of the G. A. R. Post and the ladies of the W. R. C. were highly entertained by the use of a phonographic machine at their rooms Saturday night. Joe Lauterborn manipulated the instrument.

Van Gelder, of the Lima Recorder, does not propose to be kept awake nights by squalling cats, and prints this warning: "Those people on College street who insist on keeping Thomas H. On account of a previous engagement with the Parker Concert Co. to appear in Andover to-morrow (Thursday) evening, Miss Harriet May Mills will speak at the Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon instead of evening. Her subject is. "The New Citizenship." She is recommended as a fluent speaker, and it is the wish of the Lucy Stone Club that there may be a large attendance. A collection will be taken.

L. H. Thompson is assisting L. A. Burrows in his drug store. Lew says that "Van" is a surprise; that he is much better posted on the line than he supposed, especially in the sundry line. The only trouble is he's bound to sell things by the bushel, and if a customer asks for malted milk he wants to know if they want Jersey or Holstein. White Star and Burbanks keep running thro his mind and gets them mixed up with hot drops and nursing fittings. But he will work in all right by the time he gets ready to buy buckwheat and potatoes this fall.

Our readers will find it to their interests to patronise the business men who advertise in THE NEWS. The merchant who advertises wants your trade. He will do all he can to deserve it.

Wanted, at once, a man with some push and capital to start some kind of manufacturing establishment in Andover. Plenty of good, pure spring water, cheap and convenient fuel, splendid site for location, unsurpassed railroad facilities and accommodations, the best of fire protection and the good will and assistance of every man, woman and child in the community guaranteed to the person, be he white or black, male or female, who will come here and start something to give employment to labor, so that our young men will not be compelled to go away from home to earn a livelihood. It is the manufacturies that make cities of small towns, and happy the homes of its citizens.

The idea that a small town must necessarily depend upon a very limited amount of trade is altogether erroneous. Just as soon as any town gets a reputation as a money saver for purchasers, just as soon as the farmer becomes convinced that he can get as much or a little more for money, that town will, no matter how small, draw the trade. There is nothing so sure to bring a customer to your store a second time as to give him a bargain the first time. Two business transactions with a moderate profit make more money than one deal with a large gain. And if merchants will advertise persistently and judiciously the people will come their way in search of bargains.—Bolivar Breeze.

A western farmer relates his experience in advertising in his home paper as follows: "When I am ready to sell my stuff, I insert a little advertisement in the local papers telling what I have to sell, and if live stock how many head of each and when they will be ready to ship, and the result has been that the buyers are right after me either personally or by mail, and naturally I always get the highest market. If I want to buy a cow, a steer, a horse or a dozen of each, I insert a little advertisement that costs maybe 50 cents, and instead of traveling over the country inquiring of my neighbors who has this or that for sale the home newspaper does it for me at less expense, and those who have what I want manage to let me know in some way."
