A man who recently visited a pie factory in Chicago thus describes it: "The Secrets of the Pie Foundry. day we were there a special run was being made on the pumpkin pies, and I looked in vain for any signs of pumpkin rinds. One of the foremen grinned and told me, in strict confidence, that real pumpkin was never used in pumpkin pies at present, except possibly in a few remote and very primitive New England villages. The substitute was a mixture of sweet potatoes, apples and cheap flour, flavored with a chemical extract. I tasted some of the stuff and was satisfied he was telling me the truth. Cranberry pie contains only enough cranberries to 'make a showing,' after the manner of the oyster in the church fair stew. The rest is apple jelly, colored red and flavored. I have forgotten the other substitutes employed, but these will give you a general idea of the morality of the business. The average output of the foundry was one a second, or about 36,000 pies for a working day. The manager told me they were shipped all over the pie belt in specially prepared crates."

The following from the pen of an optimistic philosopher in an eastern exchange is severe but true: "The pessimist is a robber. He enters you home and steals away the sunlight. He meets you on the street and he robs you of the feeling of contentment that crept into your veins when you noticed that the day was fine and clear. I cannot tell you just how he does it—his ways differ so—but you know well enough that he does. The pessimist criticises your friends and his own. And can you think of anything more depressing than to have the little shortcomings of the folks you like discussed? These little shortcomings you have long age recognized, and you do not need anyone to point them out to you. Besides that, you are generous enough to want your friends to appear well in the eyes of everyone else. But trust the pessimist for throwing the worst light upon them possible."

The recent epidemic of typhoid fever in an orphan asylum was traced to germs brought in on apples. This should warn housekeepers, if further emphasis is needed, of the risk in serving unwashed fruit. At every corner grocery the tempting fruits now so abundant are displayed uncovered, offering the best sort of catch-alls for the germs of the street and air. In addition they are handled by none too clean fingers, carried through the streets in unprotected baskets, and too often transferred directly to ice-boxes, in which they may stand, perhaps, next to open vessels holding those excellent absorbents, milk and butter. The average cook resents any reflection on her care of the food that is to be served uncooked. The vigilance and patience of the mistress, however, that will be needed to enforce her regulations in this regard are a small price to pay for the additional security to the health of her family.

A photographer at Seneca, Kan, recently took one of the most unique groups that ever stood before a camera. In Centralia there is a woman who is living with her second husband, having been divorced from her first. The other day the divorced husband visited the town and called on his former wife and her new partner. Seized by an impulse, the woman proposed that all three should have their pictures taken together. The husbands had no objections and the group proceeded to the photographer, where a likeness was taken with the woman standing between the two men.

Some of the principal public libraries in this country have added music to their circulation departments, and with marked success. The idea is coming now to the librarian in the smaller cities. Seattle has just adopted, beginning with 200 books of vocal and instrumental music. In the Seattle Public Libraries which have this feature, the aim is to encourage the home, the school, the church, the club, the literary society, the musical society, the dancing class, the social gathering, the entertainment, the concert, the opera, the music lesson, the music study, the music club. Great care has been taken to select popular literature and light and grand operas are the chief features. Popular music, so called, is not barred, however, the line being drawn only on the more objectionable "coon" songs and "cakewalks."

M. Hanotaux, former minister of foreign affairs, in an article entitled "The Balance Sheet of the Exposition," says: "France expended 200,000,000 or 300,000,000 francs to erect the exposition. The nation has recovered them easily in the increase of the treasury receipts, which for this year along is nearly 100,000,000 francs, in the surplus of Parisian octroi duties, in the monuments remaining to the state or the city and in the quays, bridges and improved transportation facilities bequeathed by the exposition."

The wine crop of Germany is as immense as that of France. It is the same way in all the vineyards of Europe, and their output is selling for lower prices than for a generation on account of the glut.

The prince of Wales makes a point of having every letter he receives answered with as little delay as possible. For this purpose two secretaries are kept busy nearly all the time.

The census office in Washington is often puzzled to know how to classify the returns of occupation in cases where the enumerators have given a too literal description of a person's employment. There are two census terms to cover such cases. Occupations not included in the regular list may be entered as "O. T.," meaning "other things," or "N. G.," which stands for "not gainful." To choose between the two sometimes suggests amusing complications. An enumerator in Indiana reported "drunkard" as the occupation of one of his men. The census office entered him as N. G., since the next column reserved this to be his occupation for 12 months in the year, and steady drinking is, to say the least, "not gainful." There is another sense in which a drunkard may be said to be N. G. A New York enumerator, who seems to have the inclinations of a detective, reported several men in his district as "crooks," "pickpockets" and "gamblers." They were entered as N. G., although their occupations may have been more "gainful" to them than to their victims. A Georgia man whose occupation was reported as "odd jobs" goes on the records under O. T.—"other things." While some of the occupations which the enumerators give are unusual, they are probably correct. A tramp was described as "loafer, not gainful, unemployed 12 months." An extra-thrifty person was in one instance reported as "occupation—miser," and another "lives on savings." A Connecticut womap whose husband was described as an "idler," gave her own occupation as "washing and wishing." Sad but true it is that "wishing" for something better forms a large part of the mental occupation of most people. And the intensity of this wish doubtless produces marvelous and beneficial results.

This is an age of hustle, bustle and sweat, observes the Dallas City (Ill.) News. A man hustles from early dawn until the katydids sing in the twilight for three meals a day and a place in which to lie awake at night and worry about it. If he doesn't overwork he is called lazy, and if he does overwork he goes crazy. He toils and saves through the days of his youth so that when he grows old he can wear a silk hat and sit on the knee of luxury, but when his hair turns to snow and his whiskers grow thin and gray in life's late afternoon he finds he has been victimized and grievously buncoed by his own calculations, and that rheumatism and poor relations have shattered all his dreams and punctured his long hopes.

A Denver man advertised that for $2 he would tell any able-bodied man how to get rich quick. Jerry Martin sent in the desired cash, says the Post; of that city, and has ever since been watching the mails and dreaming of a life of ease and high living. He received the formula the other day, but refused to divulge the secret, but his wife spread the news over the camp by confidentially telling a neighbor woman that the seeker after quick wealth was told to drink a pint of mountain whisky, and in half an hour he would own the earth and all that was therein.

"Wherever the trotting horse goes," said Dr. Holmes, "he carries in his train brisk omnibuses, lively bakers' carts and therefore hot rolls, the jolly butcher's wagon, the cheerful gig, the wholesome afternoon drive with wife and child—all the forms of moral excellence lounge aside, which does not agree with any kind of horse flesh. The race brings with it gambling, cursing, swearing, drinking, the eating of oysters, and a distaste for mobcaps and the middle-aged virtues."

One of the most interesting discussions was on the use of fats as food, and as preventives of certain common ailments. The unanimous conclusion based on expert knowledge of the conditions was that not nearly as much fat was taken into the system as was needed to perform its functions properly and easily. Milk fats, butter, cream and milk are suitable; so, too, are vegetable oils. All these are nutritious as well.

The sober judgment of a humorist may sometimes be more impressive than the philosophy of an ethical teacher, as when Mark Twain remarks that "Honor is a harder master than the law. It cannot compromise for less than 100 cents on the dollar, and its debts never outlaw."

The German emperor William has given 50,000 marks toward the new building which the Lette society proposes to erect in a Berlin suburb as a model house for 2,000 young girls, who will be instructed there in bookkeeping, photography, housekeeping, etc.

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Harr, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, run-down man or woman. Price 50c. Sold by Benedict & Van Noy, Andover, and by other druggists.

Wm. C. Cannon was admitted to the bar in Rochester last week. Mr. Cannon is a graduate of the Yale Law School, and will honor his chosen profession. He is located in Buffalo. Andover is proud of the success of her sons.

It is said that figures won't lie, but sometimes they will give a wrong impression. We stated a couple of weeks ago that the number of books loaned from the Public Library during the past year was 350, when it should have read 3,350, only a difference of 3,000, but then—

According to the official census returns, Allegany county is credited with having 41,601 inhabitants. The census of 1890 gave Allegany county 43,240, which shows a loss of 1,739 within the past ten years. In 1860, the population was 41,881 or 380 more than is now given.

The storm Sunday and Sunday night did a large amount of damage to the people around here. Sunday night the rain froze to the trees, wires, etc., as fast as it fell, and Monday morning found many of the orchards stripped of their limbs, and telephone wires broken in several places.

Some of the Andover people became a little anxious during the high water the first of the week for fear the dam up at the pond would give way. It is claimed the pond was higher than it ever was before. If there is any danger whatever in this direction it should receive immediate attention from our citizens.

The young people of Alfred have to come over to Andover when they desire a real enjoyable social time, as they cannot secure a room for dancing purposes in that place. They are welcome here, however, and they are not slow in finding that fact out, either, as they have made two parties at Prest Opera House within the past three weeks.

The High School football team of this place went to Whitesville Thursday afternoon and played a team of that place. The boys were unable to get a Referee to go with them, and they received rather unfair judgment from the Whitesville official. He tried to give the Whitesville team 5 points on a touchback. The final score was 5 to 0 in favor of the Andover boys.

While on his tour of the eastern cities last week, A. M. Burrows informs us that he visited Hartford and New Haven, Conn., and Springfield and Amherst, Mass. While in the latter place he was the guest of his son Frank, and reports him as doing finely. Mr. Burrows expresses himself much delighted with the enthusiasm and energy of the eastern towns.

The brethren of the Odd Fellow fraternity of this place enjoyed one of their unique social banquets at their rooms in the Opera House block last evening. After conferring the first degree, tables were prepared and oysters served, after which a large number of the boys responded to the call of Toastmaster A. B. Burrows. The evening was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The Outlook was the first of the weekly papers to publish, not long before Christmas, an illustrated number, specially devoted to books and literature. This year, in its Twelfth Annual Book Number, it furnishes a group of carefully written articles on the really important books of the present season and particularly in the department of art, biography and fiction, $3 a year. New York.

Rev. S. D. Pickett of the M. E. church gave a very interesting discourse last Sunday morning upon "The lurking places of the villages," many of his listeners pronouncing it the best temperance discourse they had ever listened to. Such practical sermons as Pastor Pickett indulges in cannot help but aid any one in their efforts to live honest Christian lives. The more of them the better, Parson.

For the first time in thirty-five years the store of A. M. Burrows & Son, on the corner of Main and Center streets, passed thru a flood with its cellar dry—no thanks to the village, however, but to property owners who had energy enough to take care of and properly drain one of the main streets of our town, at an expense of several hundreds of dollars. It is said by those who have been residents here for years that this flood is the greatest "since Bundy was married."

The door of a big safe in the Kentucky State Treasurer's office became jammed in some way and several skilled mechanics vainly tried for days to open it. Then a messenger was sent to the penitentiary and came with a gentleman whose ability to open safes had procured him board and lodging at the state's expense for a lengthened period. In just two minutes the door stood open and the successful expert was allowed to grin at the mechanics who had failed.

The soft coal question will no longer agitate the minds of the western railway magnates. The uncovering of vast beds of lignite coal along the Missouri river assures the present generation at least that their demands can be filled. The discovery of thousands of acres of anthracite in the Cascade mountain range relieves the minds of those interested, and does away with all possibility of a famine. The trans-continental and other lines that reach these fields will be immensely benefited by the development of mines.

Lazarus Myhan, a well known and respected citizen of Hornellsville, went to Rochester the other day and stepping into the Savings Bank of that city called for his balance, when he was told that it was $9.50, at which Mr. Myhan was horror stricken, for he was under the impression that he had $1,300 on deposit there. An examination showed that Henry J. Zoller, formerly assistant paying teller of the Rochester Savings Bank, had forged checks for about $1,290 against Myhan's account. Zoller comes from a Rochester family of high standing. He is 31 years of age and married. He is now under arrest.

The Christmas Ladies' Home Journal offers a superabundance of literary and artistic features in most attractive form. Among its nearly two score contributors are Mrs. Lew Wallace, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Charles Major, William Perrine, Clifford Howard and Elizabeth Lincoln Gould, while A. B. Frost, W. L. Taylor, Reginald B. Birch, Henry Hutt, George Gibbs and as many other illustrators supply its pictorial features. Apart from the articles having special holiday timeliness of interest, Edward Bok has a thoughtful article on Christmas celebration. The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. $1 a year; 10 cents a copy.

The dairymen of Pennsylvania are now aroused to kill the oleomargarine business. They had arranged a Pure Butter Association which held its first meeting at Bernville Saturday. Vigorous measures for the prosecution and punishment of oleomargarine dealers were decided upon. A large fund is being raised for the purpose of stamping out the selling of oleomargarine for pure butter. The association reports that it has members in forty-six counties and that dairy and creamery men are joining it in large numbers. A large number of cases against dealers are already in the hands of the United States courts, and it is expected that heavy fines will be secured against offenders.

Thanksgiving Dinner at the M. E. Church.
