Cup Races of the Future.

Undaunted by two defeats, Sir Thomas Lipton will evidently not relinquish his cherished ambition of "lifting" the America's cup. At a banquet given his sailors Sir Thomas said: "I don't want to appear as claiming a monopoly in the matter of challenging for the America's cup, but I wish to say that if no other Brittisher challenges for it in the next two years I shall certainly entertain seriously the project of again challenging for the cup."

The vanquished Shamrock II. is almost sure to remain in this country until next summer. The millionaire tea merchant has an idea that his second challenger may yet win against Columbia, and as the deed of gift governing America's cup contests strictly provides that a defeated boat shall not try for the international trophy inside of two years after its vanquishment Sir Thomas rightly concludes that the quickest mode of satisfying himself is to "lay up" his craft for the winter in American waters. Then he will be able to race her against both Columbia and Constitution as soon as they are put in commission in the spring.

It is a question, in the event of his again challenging for the cup, whether Sir Thomas will choose to construct a new and third craft. The cost of his first two ventures foots up to more than a million dollars, quite a tidy little sum of pin money, and even a plethoric Sir Thomas Lipton might well begin to consider the limit of expenditure approached, if not reached. Shamrock I. would be eligible to compete next year, but her evident inferiority to her successor precludes the belief that she will figure in future cup duels.

Yachting experts in general are strongly of the opinion that the next challenge for the America's cup will be made in behalf of a seventy footer. The limit of sail spread on a ninety foot model has plainly been attained, and it is the conclusion of many that the extreme point of speed development in a craft with a ninety foot water line has also been found.

A race of seventy footers would put British designers on practically an even footing with the Yankee breed. Transatlantic boat producers have few superiors in building vessels of moderate size. "Will" Fife is an expert of demonstrated ability, and it is confidently asserted in some quarters that he will be chosen to draw plans for the next cup hunter. Fife was literally brought up on the water, and he has a Scotchman's natural aptitude for nautical accomplishment. The Herreshoffs have put into the water many speedy boats of small dimensions and could be relied on to build a seventy footer that would be a fitting representative of Uncle Sam. Bowdoin B. Crowninshield of Boston, who designed Thomas W. Lawson's Independence, has considerable reputation in this line. His small boats have performed admirably, and Crowninshield could make a good showing against Fife or Watson in the construction of seventy footers.

Kaiser Wilhelm has been an enthusiastic yachtsman for many years, and it is reported that he is debating a plan to challenge for the America's cup. The lack of a designer seems to be the most difficult problem for the emperor to overcome. Wilhelm is convinced that boats in the class of the Meteor, his private yacht, would have but little chance against American racing machines, and consequently he is slow in forming a decision.

But come what may, whether the next challenger hails from Britain, Germany or Afghanistan, it will find us still "doing business at the old stand," and we will greet the foreign sailor lads with a nation's wish that the best boat will win. But we propose to have the best boat.

Our Internal Resources.

That the interior of the earth abounds in exhaustless treasure is well enough known, but the rate at which these buried riches are being taken from the ground is not as well understood. In 1900 mineral products to the value of $1,070,108,889 were added to the visible wealth of the world, $100,000,000 more than in 1899. The leading mineral products of the United States in 1900 as compared with 1899 take rank as follows:

	1899.	1900.
Pig iron	$246,172,664	$256,944,000
Bituminous coal	167,935,594	221,135,813
Copper	101,522,712	98,404,039
Pennsylvania anthracite	86,142,130	85,757,851
Gold	71,053,400	79,322,281
Silver	70,806,625	77,070,471
Petroleum	64,603,994	75,756,601

Coal and iron, it will be seen, made up more than half our whole mineral output in 1900. It is not hard, then, to understand the superiority of the United States in steelmaking.

More silver was mined last year in America than in any year since 1893, and the gold output was twice that of the year mentioned. More copper was mined than in 1899, but the value of it was less.

The value of the mineral products which are not metallic is far greater than is popularly supposed. Last year $23,000,000 worth of natural gas was produced. The mineral springs yielded $6,000,000 worth of table and medicinal waters. Our quarrymen dug out stone to the value of $48,000,000. The yield of salt reached a value of $7,000,000, phosphate rock $5,300,000 and cement $13,200,000.

Pumice stone and tin, which were once reckoned among the mineral products of the United States, have disappeared from the list published by the geological survey. We have mined no tin since 1893 and have never produced enough to give tin mining any standing.

The mineral deposits of our country seem to be far from the point of diminishing returns, though this point has been reached in many parts of Europe. The United States has many sources of mineral wealth which have not been touched. Large areas of the west have never been explored, and even in the east the mineral output is being constantly increased by new discoveries.

The first conflict of authority between the civil and the military regimes at Manila has occurred. General Chaffee attempted to deport a civil employee who refused to obey certain orders from the commanding general. The supreme court issued a writ of habeas corpus. The military authorities declined to produce their prisoner in obedience to the writ, and the matter has been referred to Washington for settlement. The importance of the case lies in the fact that both General Chaffee and the Taft commission owe their official existence to the war power of the president. General Chaffee holds that his power is equal to that of the commission and that the supreme court has no right to interfere with him in what he considers the prosecution of his duties.

The story of the finding of 10,000 English sovereigns in an old hulk at the bottom of Lake Champlain turns out to have been a fake. It is said that in the region in which the story originated the credulity of the newspapers has caused "unholy joy." It is hard to see why the acceptance of the story by the papers should cause joy, unholy or otherwise. No editor has time to investigate every trivial story that comes into his office, and that sometimes a practical joker should work off on the unsuspecting editor a tale which had its source nowhere but in his own imagination is inevitable. If the joker had a conscience, he would feel shame rather than joy.

That hazing exists among the enlisted men of the army, even if it has been eradicated at West Point, is shown in a recent order of General Brooke, commanding the department of the east. A soldier who deserted from Fort Myer was captured, tried and sentenced to six months' imprisonment, to forfeit his pay for that period and to make good the time lost by his desertion. General Brooke in reviewing the proceedings of the court martial calls attention to the testimony that the prisoner, who was a recruit, had been maltreated by members of his troop and that he had assigned that as his reason for deserting. The general therefore remitted the sentence of imprisonment and the forfeiture of pay.

A widow has been arrested in Dayton, O., charged with the murder of four husbands, five children, one sister and four members of different families in which she had been employed as housekeeper. If she is really guilty of all these murders, she has a record of which the most hardened male criminal might well be envious.

H. P. BENTON.

ARRIVED AT AUSTRALIA.

Dr. P. B. Hardy Writes an Interesting Letter to Andover Relatives.

50 MURPHY ST., SOUTH MELBOURNE, August 8, 1901.

I arrived safely in Melbourne Aug. 5th, two days late at Sydney, thirty-two days continuous traveling from Andover. I was tired and glad to reach the end.

I was one of four to always appear at table on the trip from Auckland to Sydney, the weather being frightfully rough during the first three days. We reached Sydney about 1 a. m., entered the harbor and visited till 8 a. m., when the quarantine officials came out and order ed the passengers taken ashore in tug boats and the ship fumigated. This was on account of the plague at Honolulu when we came thru. We reached the dock at 11 a. m. and left on the Melbourne Express at 7.15 p. m., and was at my journey's end at 12:35 p. m. next day, 17½ hours by rail.

The weather is about like our October minus the smoky, hazy atmosphere, and without the frosts. I think there is not nearly so much sun either, but about the same temperature. Australians say the spring is late, and that it should be warmer. However, roses are to be seen about in the different gardens, and Sydney beds of geraniums out-doors had not been frost-bitten.

I have been given a most hearty welcome by all whom I have met. The other afternoon a gentleman took my card and present address and the next day I received notice that I had been made honorary member of the City Bicycle Club, Victoria Commercial Travelers' Club, and of the Stock Exchange. One of the latter was on account of my Masonic connection, tho I don't know yet which one it is. We go to the observatory and weather bureau this afternoon and have a list of evenings for some time to come. I met a drug man in Auckland by accident whom I knew in Michigan and whom I expect thru letters of introduction to assist me to register. I have not as yet, of course, decided to remain away from home three to five years at a stretch, as will be necessary if we locate here. However, this is the opportunity I have looked and wished for, and could want nothing more if it was not so far away. My wife's acquaintance and social position is among the first. The doctors are all making money, and I am assured by more than one that the time of waiting is but one year for a physician. A number of doctors have built fine houses at the end of four or five years. Arrangements have been made by which I can get a lodge for the first year, which will pay $625. I am very much pleased with the city, but it is an awful distance from home. I saw but two rabbits between Melbourne and Sydney, but they were as large as and about the color of foxes, much larger than I expected. Magpies were about as thick as crows in New York, and nearly as large, black, with white neck and wings. Cockatoo were also plentiful in the country. The golden wattle, Australia's flower, is now coming into bloom. The trees are about as large as pear trees, and perfume the air for a distance around.

P. B. HARDY.

The Duke of Cornwall and York was so well pleased with the train which carried him across Canada that he is going to take it home with him. The duke's car was made in the United States and will be a standing advertisement in England for years to come that when you want a thing well done you must have it done in America.

The September report of the London board of trade shows a marked decrease in British foreign commerce. The imports, compared with the same months of last year, have fallen off by £312,000, while the exports have decreased £2,588,509.

Chauncey M. Depew is to marry a lady who speaks four languages fluently. Serves him right. The New York senator has himself been speaking at least one language with a good deal of fluency and frequency for a long time.

A hunter in Maryland mistook a brier pipe for a squirrel and killed the smoker. If the victim had been smoking a cigarette, his execution would have been more commendable.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came thru his kidneys His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters, which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c. by Benedict & Van Noy, at Andover, or by N. E. Coston, at Greenwood.

A seasonable atmosphere rises from the various useful and valuable features of the November Delineator. The styles shown are those for early winter. Articles tell about the making of coats; Thanksgiving and Christmas gifts; pruning and protection of rose trees thruout winter, etc.

The November Designer is strong in Thanksgiving features. Fashions and millinery are appropriate for winter. Aside from the regular departments where garment designs for adults and juveniles are presented, will be found three special articles, and the concluding chapters of the Kentucky love story.

Last Monday evening a company of the schoolmates of Mrs. Flossie (Jenkins) Houghtling surprised her at her home on Water street, it being on account of her recent marriage. A very enjoyable evening was passed, and on departing they left several nice presents as memorials of their esteem for their former classmate.

Quite a number of young people on Wednesday evening of last week invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Chase on Grove street, where a very social time was had, and a collation of fruit and candy served, after which a musical treat was enjoyed by all till nearly midnight, when with many good wishes for a long and happy life for their host and hostess, the company departed for their homes

Some one of the "wise acres" once defined the difference between a farmer and an agriculturist as that a farmer worked his farm for a living, while an agriculturist lived to have his worked. Ed. Atwood has joined the number of agriculturists in earnest. This week he informs the NEWS of the purchase of the Mrs. Belle Gallagher farm. While Ed. may raise pumpkins and ruttabagas, we never expect to see hay seed in his whiskers.

An important decision has just been handed down in Washington county. A man died leaving a real estate bought with pension money, and directed in his will that this should be sold to pay his debts. The widow denied the claims claiming the property was exempt from sale under the act making property bought with pension money exempt from sale or debt. The court has decided against the widow and orders the property sold and the debts paid.

The Canisteo liquor cases came up at County Court at Corning last week. Joe Rammacher plead guilty and was fined $400 for the first two indictments and the sentence on the third indictment was suspended. Reid Nelson of the Canisteo House was fined $200 on the first indictment and $100 on the second. Jack Margeson, Nelson's barkeeper, was fined $100. J. B. Ramsey was fined $200 on the first indictment and $100 on the second with no suspended sentence. We are informed that where licenses are granted, 40 per cent. goes to the state and 60 per cent. to the town, but that in cases of fines, the entire amount goes to the town, consequently in this case $1,200 will be added to the town funds of Canisteo.

THE HARRIS STORE.

An Extraordinary Event at A Surprising Time.

SUIT SALE SUIT SALE SUIT SALE SUIT SALE

Did you ever hear of a Suit Sale at this time of year? It's so extraordinary that we almost feel like apologizing for it. It's quite necessary for us to do this though, or it wouldn't be done. Here's one of the handsomest and choicest lines of Ladies Tailor Suits we've yet shown—the Ladies Coat stock is so large though that it clamors for more room Nothing to do then but reduce the stock of suits. Nothing to do but cut the prices to hurry the selling. Seems almost like sacrilege, but the suits must sell fast. Suit sale commences Tuesday at noon—EVERY SUIT IN THE STORE IS INCLUDED IN THE ABOVE. The suits will be devided in lots beginning at the remarkable low price—$5.00.

LADIES UNDERWEAR.

We want you to get acquainted with what we consider one of the best underwear values we have yet called to your attention. This is a fleeced ribbed garment—fine, firm and shapely, yet elastic. This seems so finished that the title "regular made" is the only appropriate way of describing them. The finishing in the neck, too, is unusual. The Pants have unusual features of merit. The manufacturers of this garment are considered to be the most painstaking of any we know. A handsome economical garment.....50 cents

THE NEW LINE OF LADIES TAILOR MADE WOOL WAISTS AND DRESS MAKER MADE SILK WAISTS ARE NOW ON DISPLAY. Many of these styles have only been de ve oped within a week or two, so the showing is of unusual importance. The styles are original, beautiful and numerous in variety.

We call attention to three lots of Ladies Waists of considerable merit. Nicely made Twill Wool Flannel in choice variety of shades—perfect fitting.....$1.50
Pretty styles of finest French Flannel Waists—waists that have character stamped in every line—all the best colorings—a specially good value.....$2.49
Norfolk Waists made from finest French Flannel and in all of the season's choice colorings and tints.....$3,50
A special offering of Lace Ties—handsome ties—worth 75c. to $1 00 in the usual way—selling them as we bought them—at about one-third value. Two lots.....25c. and 35 cents
Ladies' Kid Gloves—some broken lines of fine qualities, all of them desirable styles that at regular prices would be guaranteed for wear and fitted; all sizes among them, and quite a variety of shades. They are gloves formerly $1 00, $1.25, and $1.50 a pair—all at one price.....79 cents pair
Plain Velvets and Velvet Cords for Waists, Coats and Suits.
