Sign Boards in the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams

We look upon the faces about us and read the story of life. Faces are blotted and blurred and blotched with dissipation. Sensuality writes her signs deeply. Faces are weazened and pinched by hunger of body and soul. Eyes are clouded with tears of regret, yellowed with envy. They glitter with hate and narrow with revenge. The brow is ploughed deeply with the harrows of remorse, and beaten low by the hand of fist. Bodies are misshapen by parent's sins. Bodies are distorted and stooped by one's own sins. The marks of wreck are manifest to every eye. This is the work of sin. Does sin need any better argument against it than the fruit—the marks—of its presence? The business that cost Christ His life was to restore to the ghastly soul the lost image of God. Do you wonder that His life was the cost of such a work?

A tradition existed among artists that a picture of the great poet was concealed somewhere in the house in which Dante lived. After long search the picture was found. It had been covered over with whitewash. What kind of man, in the name of Beauty, could have ruthlessly whitewashe a masterpiece like that? The same kind that covers up the image of God with spots of sin and whitewash of self righteousness. Man was made in God's likeness, but sin painted it with black. The image was obscured. All men are in the same condition as regards sin. We all are smeared over with evil. But the germ of the divine lies in the heart and if God come in to reconstruct, the image will reappear. "Men are gods playing the fool." When we get ready to leave off the cap and bells of sin—God will reinvest us with the glory of his likeness through Jesus Christ.

The inner man is betrayed by the outer man. It is not possible for a pure heart to exist without a pure eye, a pure speech, a pure action to tell the tale. There can be no blot or defect upon the heart without the shadow showing upon the face.

We ought to wear our hearts on our sleeves and bid men take what they will of good. Our heart will not be diminished an atom's worth but rather increased. Off the joints of your harness elbows with the oil of human sympathy so that your arms won't creak when you do a good turn or give a best to the load. We ought to be so indispensible to our friends that they will wonder what's wrong with them until we come in sight. Count not thyself, oh man, indispensible to thy friends, unless their eyes sparkle when thou heavest in sight.

I would rather be a candle burning lowly for one of God's dear creatures—than a meteor set in the unreachable heavens that men gaze at—in wonder—but which has neither light nor warmth.

God will only come in to the life on invitation. He will not force entrance nor stay unwelcomed. If you don't make him at home he will soon depart. We are the keepers of the door of life.

Emerson said of a certain girl, "It seemed when she came into the room that another candle had been lighted." I wonder how many of us are candles to our friends.

Bidding Christ to come into the heart—He will begin to get rid of the marks of sin, and lay upon the soul the white glory of His spirit. Old things shall pass away, all things shall be renewed by the indwelling of God's Spirit whose work it is to reconstruct the soul into the likeness of Jesus Christ, who is the express image of God. At the last we all with unveiled faces shall reflect as in a mirror the glory of the Lord and shall be transformed into the same image from glory to glory until we see him face to face.

Little to Choose.

Our National Capital

Events of Interest from the Seat of Government by the News Special Correspondent, J. E. Jones.

BUSINESS AND POLITICS

Washington, D. C., April 15.—When the progressive political wave washed over the country of several years ago it drowned a lot of machine politicians who had effected combinations between business and politics that were a mighty poor thing for the country. The change was good for everybody, since reputable business interests were awakened to the necessity of cutting loose from the leeches that had grown fat by means of leading the innocents to believe the false theory that Congress and legislatures needed to be manipulated. Thank heavens such old-fashioned notions have been revised, and sensible business men can now go before Congress in confidence that facts, figures and arguments are more potent than paying for "grease" for political machines.

Sensible Conservation

The attitude of the National Association of Manufacturers, which has adopted a platform for sensible conservation of American business through a plan of cooperation between employers and laborers in all lines of industry, is in keeping with the trend of the time President Pope recently visited Washington and he was given respectful hearing when he declared that the present is the best time of all for capital and labor to forget some of their old difficulties, and to combine against the soap-box reformers. Colonel Pope has reminded thinking people that they must get busy and prepare to meet the vast economic changes incident to the European upheaval. He has no panaceas to offer, but he insists very vigorously that there should be a square deal for American industry and American labor, and he urges concurrent effort on the part of all classes, irrespective of party, in order that the United States may not only reap the legitimate fruits of increased world-markets; but what is more important still safeguard against the hazards of the future. The essence of this appeal from the manufacturers is that thinking people should "get together" for the conservation of American industry.

Civilized Men and Cooks

Senator Reed Smoot declares that much of the world's poverty, misery, drunkeness and disease comes from poorly prepared food. In a talk about the tariff the Senator gave his agreement to the sentiment of the poet that said: "Civilized men cannot live without cooks." He described the American garbage can as the fattest in the world, and followed a denunciation of it with a plea that American girls be educated to cook, by a process of making the culinary art part of the public school training.

Never Touched the Standard

The sudden rise in the price of gasoline has called for all sorts of investigation from government bureaus and committees of Congress. The resolution in the Senate fixing the blame upon the Standard Oil has been shelved, and an investigation will proceed without any pre-judged trust to bear the blame.

What's the Game?

A lot of "clever ideas" have been born in New York recently, all of which were supposed to furnish a very plain way by which the country might nominate a candidate from New York. After all that has been said and written concerning the wisdom and power of Wall street, it is extraordinary to find how stupidly the big business interests work. As an instance the Union League Club has butted in and endorsed Mr. Root for President. The public simply responds with the question: "What's the game?" Mr. Estabrook, whose first name we have forgotten or never have known, runs for President from New York, but to take out a little of the sting, claims to be from Nebraska. Again the public simply responds: "Very good, what's the game?" A hundred or more of the biggest newspapers of the country carried paid advertisements for one of the Du-Pont's, who is running for President. The public smiled curiously and remarked that the thing smells too much like powder. Again they asked: "What's the game?"

Colonel Roosevelt pulls a new stunt every day in his attempt to pin a tag on the Republican elephant. The people always had a hard time in following the Colonel, and they are not sure yet as to his exact party identity. So they want to know about some of his games too.

Republicans Refuse to be Stampeded

There is nothing new in the methods that have been tried during the past two or three weeks to stampede the Republican party in the selecting of a candidate for the presidency. The Republicans realize that they have a serious job before them, and in Washington the leaders of the party have refused to submit to schemes that would force upon them a candidate who might be objectionable to a very great portion of the members of the party. To state it differently the party has been torn by factional dissension, and a factional candidate can hardly be expected to win at the polls; and therefore it is deemed unwise to make such a nomination. In spite of the popular discussion regarding Justice Hughes and the apparent activity in the interests of Colonel Roosevelt, nevertheless the vast sum of opinion in the Republican ranks is against the nomination of either of these men. The Republicans realize that they have a strong ticket in the Ohio Senator, and they are not disposed to jeopardize his chances by any hasty action. Senator Burton is the strongest man the party can nominate. He was in Congress during all the hurly-burly days when the Republican party was being reorganized, and being of a naturally progressive mind he succeeded in co-operating with the new ideas which new men brought to Congress. At the same time he always proceeded in a conservative manner, and in consequence became the real leader in framing most of the big constructive legislation for a period of many years. Of all the candidates Washington regards Burton as the one man who can meet the demands of the factions within the party, and unite them, and thus be surest of winning the election for the Republicans.

The Ethical Culture Movement

There is considerable interest in the fourtieth anniversary of the Ethical Culture Movement in America, which is to be celebrated in New York next month. Dr. Felix Adler founded a society on the common-sense proposition that all established religions are various expressions of the ethical experiences of the race. In a recent statement he has declared that "the only thing that will bring about a desirable condition in society and a permanent peace among the warring nations, that are now fighting insanely for the possession of each other's territory, is a universal realization of the interwoven of all life and the consciousness that there is no sacrifice in the effort to bring out beauty and strength in others."—Upon such plain, helpful principles as these, thousands of earnest men and women have gotten together in a non-sectarian work that has proven one of the most wonderful uplift movements in recent years.

Cole, treasurer and clerk.

—Run-down?
—Tired?
—Weak?

Every Spring most people feel "all out of sorts"—their vitality is at a low ebb. Through the winter months shut up a great deal in heated house, office, or factory, with little healthy exercise in the great outdoors—eating more than necessary—the blood becomes surcharged with poisons! The best Spring medicine and tonic is one made of herbs and roots without alcohol—that was first discovered by Dr. Pierce—years ago. Made of Golden Seal root, blood root, with glycerine it is called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Ingredients on wrapper. It eliminates from the blood disease-breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health.

Akron, New York.
"I was badly run down and worn out. I had to have a strong medicine to build me up. I used 'Golden Medical Discovery' for nearly 6 months and received benefit.
