EDITOR MAKES THIS INDICTMENT

Ohio Newspaper Man Comes Out With a Few Words of Facts That Should Make Drys Sit Up and Take Notice.

Rev. Chas. Collins brings us the following very pertinent advice from Thomas Brooks Fletcher, Editor of the Marion, Ohio Tribune, talking to the dry people through the American Issue. He speaks from an editorial experience on three daily newspapers. We quote:

The wet people have the virtue of consistency. They stand back of the men who are on their side. The dry people do not always back up the hard workers they make when it comes to being loyal to the people on their side.

The editor of a newspaper came into my office once broken-hearted, and told me that he had followed his conscience, listened to the appeal of the drys, and turned his newspaper in defense of the dry cause. Did he get circulation and support from the dry people? He did not. The wet people struck the knife of boycott into the heart of his business and drove him into bankruptcy. And all the time the dry people never offered to help.

That day his business of thirty years had been destroyed, and he was going back to his boyhood home in Virginia, ruined.

I knew a church that let an order for $600 worth of plumbing. There were two plumbers in that town. One was a wide-open-town man, who believed in booze and stood against everything for which the church was fighting. The other plumber was a consistent church member, an ardent dry man, who spent time, energy and money working for the dry cause. But the wide-open-tow boozer got the $600 plumbing job from the church.

In the hotels of city after city, throughout this country, I have sat up with business and professional men until long toward midnight talking about this very condition—of the lack of co-operative support of the dry people, and the universal opinion of them all was that we could soon win this battle for humanity, if the dry people would co-operate with their financial, moral and social support, and stand back of these business men, whom they sometimes condemn for straddling.

A W. C. T. U. president came to my office to protest because we did not make a more direct assault on certain politicians and saloon men.

My newspaper was already spending more money for the dry campaign than any five individuals in the county. She never thought about that. She never thought about the anonymous letters we received every day from the other side, threatening to boycott us and injure our business. What did she care about how much we had to sweat to meet our payroll on Saturday nights? What did she care about the fact that our dry editorials were offensive to half of our readers? And while she sat here, she held a copy in her hand and a cut for job printing, which she was taking down to a little shop run by a wet man. She was condemning us, and our newspaper, the best friend the dry cause had in the community, and throwing her financial support to the wet cause.

And right here is one reason why a lot of business men become cynical and indifferent. I am not cynical and I am not indifferent, but for the sake of other business men and for the sake of the cause, I wish the dry people would be as virulent in their consistency as the wet people are.

The dry people could have the support of a lot more newspapers if they would be half-way decent in showing their appreciation. Every little while some excitable dry rushes into a newspaper office and says: "Why don't you fellows say this and say that?" And when you tell them, "All right, we will be glad to do it, you just write out your bright ideas, sign it, and we will publish it over your own signature." Then what do they do? They say, "Oh, no, I couldn't think of letting you use my name." Yet these misguided fools are perfectly willing that the newspaper shall assume all the responsibility for their notions, while they, the cowards, hide under the porch, refuse to come out into the open and stand back of their own utterances in the printed word.

Is it any wonder that many newspaper men in sympathy with the dry cause, and guided by a Christian conscience, have a tendency, at times, in their own minds, to classify as hypocrites some of the thoughtless crusaders?

Several years ago the newspaper owners for whom I was editor refused hundreds of dollars' worth of booze advertising every year, and on investigation it was found out that members of the W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League took the wet newspaper with its booze-advertising in their homes, and never once thought of their inconsistency.

I know good ministers in various cities in this country who have been slandered and hounded, and some of them have lost their jobs, and I know school men as well, who have lost their jobs, doctors who have lost their practice, and business men who have been boycotted and lost their business — all because these dry people were so thoughtless, and had such a yellow streak in their souls that they would not co-operate and back up these community leaders.

It is one thing to fight for Prohibition in a community when you have no financial responsibility, and quite another thing to make the same fight when you do have financial responsibility. I am conducting a newspaper at Marion, Ohio, the Daily Tribune, a newspaper with a conscience, but I have yet, with the exception of one person, to receive a single word of helpful commendation because of the fact that the Tribune is a newspaper with a conscience, as far as the dry proposition is concerned.

The fact is not an appeal in my own behalf—far from it. My newspaper happens to be a financial as well as a journalistic success in spite of the indifferent inconsistency of many of the dry people, but I am writing this in behalf of the cause of state-wide Prohibition, and in behalf of those much unappreciated, and much-abused business men in every community for whom the dry people must show more co-operative appreciation if we are going to cut the throat of this boozemonster that threatens mankind with its hellish menace.

I appeal to all those who read this to stand by the people in the community who stand for something—to support them financially, socially, morally and religiously. Unity of purpose and unity of action is the only way by which we will be successful in cannonading the fortifications of intemperance, and be able to take Booze's Verdun.

Indifference is the most brutal crime any community can commit against its leaders. Indifference it was that let Jesus Christ be crucified between two thieves. If you expect to win this fight for God and good, the home and your home town, it's up to you to be loyal and fight for the men who are on the right side of this war for righteousness.

I have written here what I know thousands of sincere men think about you. To use the advertisement of a famous brand of whiskey with which most of you are familiar, "That's all."

A visit to the stores means far more to you if you have read the store ads before starting—for the stores then mean something to you; their selling-policies are understandable.

By Hamilton B. Williams

Earl Mayo in writing in "The Outlook" upon "The conservation of the child," says "If we can imagine all the children born in the United States in a single year assembled in one gathering, we would picture to ourselves a mighty army more than two million strong. If again we look at our army after the lapse of a year, we find that its first encounter with the world has been disastrous, that its numbers have sadly decreased; more than four hundred thousand who started out under childhood's white banner are missing. If we follow their course to the end of the second, third, fourth and fifth years, we find that further deep inroads have been made on the numerical strength of the army. From one fourth to one-third of those who enlisted for the warfare of life have fallen before the enemy in one-seventh of the average span of service."

That picture is appalling, and no wonder there is the cry for the conservation of the child in the realm of its physical life."

Terrible picture of physical devastation, but consider, the ravage that evil must make in the lives that arrive at majority and finish the normal span of days.

Jesus Christ's great social service was the revaluation he placed upon the human unit. This was based upon his concept of the All-Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of all men.

When the social body really believes in the value of the individual and acts accordingly that recognition will bring to pass the kingdom of heaven.

For we are wise enough to take care of that which is intrinsically valuable.

We are very careful about our jewels and gold and lands—why so indifferent to lives?

A little while ago the people of the churches celebrated Children's Day. There was a great deal of talk about beauty and innocence and futures, and enough prayers, if prayers were enough, no doubt, to make a cordon of defense around the little folks. I wonder how much talk there was about the making right conditions in which to live.

Three "rights" the child has.

1. A right to have a lady and gentleman for parents.

2. A right to be nurtured in a church sufficiently equipped to insure a finished product.

3. A right to live in a town that is adapted to the culture of first-class citizens.

If a child be born of people who are gross, selfish, materialistic, unvisioned, carnal, God be merciful.

If a child be put into the hands of the people of a church, who are lukewarm for creed than kingdom, who have dreams of blessed hereafters and are blind to this world, God be merciful.

If a child has to grow up in a town whose citizens are unspurred by high principles, who worship the tax-god and refuse to equip schools properly and whose community interest is material, God be merciful.

The child is thrust into the mould of the home, the church, the school, the people of the town, and by all the laws that govern life he must be the resultant of these determining influences. Making due allowance for heredity and individualistic variation, nine-tenths of determining influence is environment. I know a locust tree with ten thousand years of heredity of towering strength, but the accident of living in a cellar undid heredity absolutely.

The child is what he is made to be. The Christian religion has had a mind to this. Jesus took the child and set him in the midst of His Friends. Consider that.

And the making out of this action of the Christ will result in the right surrounding of parents, church, school and community.

The child!

Behold in him the center of every labor, prayer, sacrifice, thought, business, program, and community relation.

The child!

He must be kept physically, mentally and morally normal. What is his right we must give.

Are we the sort of folks that God may safely entrust with the care of His children?

SPEEDING UP.

It's not hard work that does the harm, it's worry gets our goat, and nerves that turns in the alarm and makes us rock the boat. That we should still be so unwise as not to get the hunch, to say the least is some surprise, we're sure a thoughtless bunch. Blue Ribbon us for being dense and groping in the dark. For we are shy on common sense and much below the mark. The preachments that would change our ways and keep us going right, are crowded out by gloomy days and lose their rays of light. Our viewpoint seems to be at fault and thus we go astray. It's up to us to call a halt, before we've lost our way. The Game of Life is not so bad as some would have us think. There's no excuse for feeling sad and going on the blink. The ways and means are near at hand, for us to get in right. If slipping we should use the sand and push with all our might. And when at last we're speeding up to try to make the hill, our aim should be the trophy cup with a ⅋ determined will.

NEW YORKERS READ BOOKS

Not So Much to Pass an Idle Hour as to Obtain Instruction, According to Library Statistics.

With cabarets, dancing, theaters and all kinds of amusements to New Yorkers, no one would ever this city credit for being the literary center, a New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch says. There are more book-lovers in this town than in any other city in the world. This may cause a smile, but facts prove the assertion. The annual report of the New York public library shows that the year's addition of books is close to eleven million volumes. It is the opinion of those in charge of the public libraries, than whom there are no better judges, no better instructors, New York today is reading not only for pleasure or amusement but for instruction. Statistics gathered by the central library show that New York is reading less to pass an hour or two—the back of a day, I speak—than it has at any time before. It has learned how to read. In other words, it has acquired the art of reading, which is the science of reading. According to the librarians, the New York reader at present is not only deriving pleasure from a good book, but mental profit. Their tastes run to books on history, to poetry, to drama and to fiction. There is also a great demand for Shakespeare's works, Dickens, Thackeray, Stevenson and other so-called standard authors. An interesting phase showing the bent of the mind of New York's reading is noted by library officials in the increased demand for books on art, especially as to interior household decoration. It is not only the rich who require these books, but particularly the men.

EXCELLENT SERBIAN CUSTOM

One of the unusual Serbian institutions which bids fair to vanish under the conqueror's hands is the druga, a glorified family system to have saved the Serbians from poverty and all its attendant evils. It left them one of the gayest races of mankind. In the Zadruga one grows from another until a community is established on a thing like socialistic principles, the stareshine, or headman, and his wife live in the biggest house and direct the industries of the other houses.

"FLUB DUB" AND BUNK

Washington, D. C., June 10: Every intelligent voter should have the privilege of reading the numbers of the Congressional Record containing the speeches on the navy appropriation bill. There are hardly a dozen speeches out of all the vast array of noise, that express a single thought, or are worth the amount of paper consumed to print them. True, a few Congressmen have shown a grasp of the subject of preparedness, and have discussed it "for" and "against" in a highly creditable manner. But the great majority of the speeches remind one of the kind of oratory which old-time lawyers poured out before juries, when by making the latter cry, they succeeded in saying their criminal clients from getting the true justice that was coming to them. The Fourth of July orators who have become more or less of a joke shine resplendently in comparison with the men who have been handling this vital question. The "eagle bird" hasn't hardly a pin-feather left in the vicinity of his tail, so patriotic has been the "appropriation oratory." but if the statesmen-orators had known their subjects more thoroughly they would not have dispoiled the rear of the bird so ruthlessly, but would instead have tried to do something towards embellishing the head, where human intelligence and instinct are supposed to repose. The same thing is true of the debate on the rivers and harbors bill. A few men have studied the question and described it intelligently. The rest have merely made loud noises, issuing catchy phrases and cunning figures of speech.

But—this is campaign year!

Notwithstanding that necessity a careful perusal of recent speeches in Congress will convince anybody that there is something wrong. The brutal truth is that there is too much talk and too little brains in the House of Representatives. Of course it is easy to criticize and condemn, but nevertheless one of those great newspapers that carries the slogan: "All the news that's fit to print" wouldn't give a stickful to a hundred pages of some of the slush that is appearing in the Congressional Record.

A Matter of Opinion

I met an old friend on the streets of a large city the other day. That friend was at one time a United States Senator and he was prominently considered for the Presidency. The world has been kind to my friend—whose voluntary retirement from public life was heartiled throughout the country as a "national calamity." Ten years ago he was considered one of the country's greatest statesmen—to-day he is one of the country's most prominent law years. Such a record proves that he is a "great man." We exchanged pleasant compliments, chatted for a short time—invited each other to call; it was a very pleasant meeting. "So you are still in Washington, doing newspaper work?" remarked my friend? "Yes, and you Senator—you are looking great. I certainly am glad to see you." "And I am glad to see you. How is Washington anyway? Just the same, I suppose—just the same." "Oh, we don't change much here—nice, comfortable, semi-tropical, sleepy old place, you know," I suggested. "So it is, he agreed, "but the Senate has changed? Not much like the old Senate now, is it? Not the same kind of men?" His mind and mine were running in different grooves—his appreciation of the "old Senate," and mine were very, very different, but I replied truthfully — "No, indeed Senator, the Senate now is not like it was in the golden days" and under my breath I said "Thank God for that!"

Making Grass Rugs

In the Wisconsin and Minnesota marshes is found a vegetable growth known to botanists as "carix stricta." The common term applied to this product is "wire grass." Like many other things that nature has provided wire grass was formerly supposed to be of little value, but the mistake of such a viewpoint has been demonstrated by the Deltox Rug Company, at Ashkosh, Wisconsin. Mr. Emil H. Steiger, prominent in political affairs of Wisconsin, is at the head of this concern, and his rugs are carpeting the offices of the United States Government in Washington, the big office buildings of New York, Chicago, Milwaukee, and elsewhere, and besides are being used in homes, bungalows, and summer residences and hotels throughout the country. The agricultural Department in Washington has prepared some important bulletins regarding the use and durability of wire grass; from which we are to learn that the product is a long, slender, jointless vegetable growth springing from the ground in a single stem without branches or joints, or additional leaves. The fibre is round and incased in a hard outer casing, and somewhat resembles broom corn, minus the branches and seeds. It is different from grass in that it consists almost entirely of fibre, and when the outside cuticle is broken or crushed it becomes very tough and flexible. Ordinary grass, on the other hand, will break, and is of no use in the manufacture of rugs. Now grass may be grass, but the official evidence is that "wire grass is in a class by itself. The land on which it is grown possessed but small value until the harvest of the rug crops was begun by Mr. Steiger and others. The industry is among the very interesting new activities of the Middle West.

Goethals, King of Panama

General Goethals is back in the United States, and is ready to be relieved of every responsibility in connection with the Panama Canal. He declares that course of the 800,000 tons of soft rock that has been tumbling into Gaillard Cut, has been deflected to the north of Gold Hill into a small basin, so that it can never give any further trouble to navigation. And from this we are to believe that the Panama Canal is open for all time. Goethals has been king of the hearts of men at Panama, and unless he does some foolish stunt a la Admiral Dewey, he will have a niche in the appreciation and admiration of all Americans.

Blunt Facts About Brandeis

The nomination of Mr. Brandeis has been confirmed, and every lover of honesty, clean men, and a square deal, is glad of it. Months and months were consumed in attempts to beat Brandeis, and all kinds of bogey, imaginable excuses were cooked up. It's all over now, and the big fight has been a failure. The reason for the fight has been established. First, Brandeis is a Jew; secondly, he has been the "people's lawyer," and has fought the big, corrupt interests unremittingly Wall Street was unanimously against him — and that's a splendid reason why the Senate should have decided as it did.

If McAdoo Guesses Right?

The optimistic McAdoo, "son-in-law of the Government," and Secretary of the Treasury Department, says that there will be no depression in the business of the United States after the war. He declares that anyone who believes otherwise must be influenced either by partisan propaganda or ignorance of the prospect for "peace orders." Of course all hope that McAdoo is right. Nevertheless he is in a very lonesome class, advocating such views.

WRESTLER WOULD MEET ACTOR.

"A Pittsburgh amusement purveyor was endeavoring the other day to arrange a contest in a Pennsylvania one-night stand between Leo Pardello, the widely known wrestler, and an opponent to be selected," says Ren Wolf. "By long-distance telephone from Pittsburgh he was urging Pardello to consent to a match. 'I never heard of that place,' declared Pardello. 'It's all right,' replied the promoter. 'Warfield played it to $2,200.' 'Well, that's O. K. if he can draw that much money,' answered Pardello. 'Make a match for me with Warfield.'"—New York Letter to Pittsburgh Dispatch.

SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE RHEUMATISM, DROPSY.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to tell you of a recent experience I had when suffering from backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, and congestion of the kidneys. I tried a new medicine called "Anuric," which has recently been discovered by Dr. Pierce, of whose medicines and Surgical Institution in Buffalo, N. Y., you have no doubt heard for years. This medicine acted upon me in a wonderful manner. I never have taken any medicine so helpful in such quick time. I do wish anyone in need of such a remedy would give it a trial.

G. H. HERR, Cowlesville, N. Y.

NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery" which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

Popular Garden "Glad"—ener Which all Flower Lovers Should Grow.—Rare Offer of Highest Grade Bulbs Sweet Peas, Too.

No summer-flowering bulb in the world compares either in beauty or popularity with the Gladiolus the gorgeous spikes of which with magnificent blooms in a full range of colors will brighten and beautify the humblest home on earth. Used as a cut flower they last with good care nearly two weeks and attract the most enthusiastic admiration. But bulbs of choice named kinds of high-grade mixtures are absolutely necessary for satisfactory results—and precisely such are here offered. Listen:—

Attractive Bulb Bargains; For 50 cents I will send, postpaid, 24 blooming size bulbs, including 5 of the popular blush pink, "America," 3 of the magnificent scarlet, "Mrs. Francis King," 1 of the brilliant French blue "Baron Hulet," 1 of the ruffled petaled, "White King," each separately labeled, together with other popular kinds and the famous Groff Hybrids in mixtures.

A Still Better Bargain: For $1.00 I will send the same named kinds with two bulbs of the exquisite yellow "Glad," "Victory," added and sufficient other varieties and choice mixtures to make 50 bulbs in all. Either of these two collections would grace any garden in the land. What an aggregation of floral treasures for such a trifling outlay? Gladioli may be planted with good results up to the middle or last of June.

Sweet Peas: During the remaining weeks of the planting season I will continue to send 10 packets of the grandiflora Sweet Peas for 25 cents or a dozen of the lovliest "Spencers" for 50 cents. Coins, not stamps please.
