WISE AND OTHERWISE

Your name in print. How often men like the distinction of having their name in print. It means so much. Yet there are others who object to having the going and coming of themselves or friends chronicled in the press. Then there may be some who expect the reporter to have a sense of second sight, double sight, to see and know the things that occur far removed from his observation, or that of his contemporaries. Somehow we do not half appreciate the efforts and the privileges of the newspaper man and his products. He gives us the clean side of life, keeps us in touch with our friends, and makes life cheerier because of his faithfulness to the truth. At so little cost. The average paper comes to the reader at a cost to them of about two cents per week. Now isn't it marvelous? No wonder the press has become a mighty factor in every-day life.

WHAT CHANGES

have taken place in the printers' art since a few years back. Look over your copy of the NEWS, and the cuts use t by the advertisers are superior in their form and make up to the old wood cuts of a few years back. Some of the older readers will recall the old wood cuts. There was that one after the "war times." Everybody saw it. It was used on paper bags, wrapping paper and at the head of the column during the exciting times of political campaigns. It was the picture of an elephant dressed with top boots on his feet, and a banner held by his trunk, streaming over his back, with the words, "We are coming." Then the old pictures of the locomotives and steamboats, how they carry us back to the old times of the beginning of the development of the printers' art. When you look at the pretty calendar given to you, perhaps by one of the enterprising merchants where you do your trading, and see the beautiful work of art in colors, you can see what a change has been made. Printing is recognized as a fine art.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON IT.

It will pay the observers of the times to keep their eyes open toward the capital of the Empire State. The legislators are having a fine "mix up." There is no telling where it will end. Those political intrigues are past understanding. It does look as tho they are getting ready to put the "Easy Boss" on the shelf, but it will hardly occur yet. If we only had the sense of knowing and reading between the lines when the Assembly and Senate committees are announced we might find where many a man who wanted to shake off the collar was whipped into line with a nice appointment on a nice committee. Well, that's the way they do it "down there," and practical politics is a science in which the workers never sleep, and in which the workers are as clean and moral as those of any age have been.

THE LONG AGO.

Speaking about corruption in politics, there are some who lament present conditions and sigh for a return to the pure times of long ago. If we knew all the games that were played: Gen. James Wilkinson, who was in command of the American army in the valley of the Mississippi, receiving pay from his government and also taking Spanish dollars from Spain for shutting his eyes; and as Edward Everett Hale says, "It certainly does not speak well for Jefferson's statesmanship or his knowledge of men to allow such a thing to go on for eight years and maintain such a rascal at his post; but perhaps there was politics in it. It certainly could not be done to day under our system of political control.

BACK AGAIN.

But we do not want to live in the long ago. There are questions confronting us now which demand attention. Assemblyman Palmer presented a bill to the Legislature immediately after its organization, having for its purpose a sweeping change in the constitution and reducing the power of the Governor to a considerable degree. Its purpose is to take away from the Governor the power to name the Judges who shall serve in the Appellate Division and to designate the presiding Judges and confers the authority to the Court of Appeals. Now, in the opinion of the writer, that's wrong. It is only a return to that old system under the constitution of 1777. The council consisted of four Senators and the Governor, and the records say that there was a perpetual wrangle between the members. Such a council might get into the hands of a corrupt political machine. Better let well enough alone, and keep the courts clean of political intrigue as they have ever been. They are from the lowest to the highest, the stones in the bulwark of our Republic.

WHY SOME THINGS.

You will recall that the American Government sent the body of Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, home to England in an American warship. We wondered why this distinction. It transpires that during the days of the Hispano-American war, he stood by the side of America and right. The translation of a dispatch sent by Dr. Von Holleben to his government, given out in Berlin a few days ago, according to the New York Sun, shows that it was prepared in our state department, in answer to claims of British friendship. There are a number of details of that time where we will learn how England told the other nations to keep off the grass.

IT BREAKS THE RECORD.

Just a little nonsense from the Philadelphia Record may take off the weight of the cold weather. It is the record of a wonderful woman. Well, just read it:

Mrs. Muggins—Mrs. Bjones is a pretty shrewd shopper, isn't she?

Mrs. Boggins—Yes, indeed. Why, I have actually known that woman to get a bargain at a church fair.

HOW VERY STRANGE.

Dr. Hyppolate Borapue, a physician of Paris, has, according to the daily press, discovered a means whereby he is able to photograph mental states and to diagnose mental diseases by means of the pictures obtained. Well, well! that's carrying things too far. Why, the first thing we know some smart photographic fiend will be taking pictures of the mental state of our people, and perhaps the disease will be diagnosed as school house-tobra or silk-mill-enthusia, or perhaps Andover's toom e-dia, or sit still ada, or what not! Well, it's all the same. We will thrive after the wise and other wise has gone. QUIEN SABE?

Step Toward Municipal Ownership.

One of the most significant steps toward the municipal ownership of street railways lately recorded has been taken in Brooklyn borough of Greater New York. The borough has a population of about 1,300,000, and with the exception of two small independent companies its interurban transportation is in the hands of one big corporation, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, which operates about 500 miles of street and elevated road, carrying over 300,000,000 passengers annually. According to the Brooklyn papers, the service has for a long time been utterly inadequate and has lately grown to be intolerable. The long suffering and indignant people finally took the matter before the Kings county grand jury, which in turn has made a somewhat startling and radical presentment.

After finding that by reason of negligence, inefficiency and unwillingness to perform their duty the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company and its constituent corporations have forfeited the right to their franchises, and recommending that the attorney general take action to annul their charters, the grand jury suggests that "the only solution of this vexed problem of metropolitan transportation is municipal ownership and operation of the means of public travel." After giving the opinion that the result would be efficient operation, lower fares and a surplus revenue the grand jury recommends that the municipality of Greater New York acquire all the street, elevated and tunnel railway systems at the earliest opportunity and operate them "for the benefit of the people."

It will be interesting to note what further action follows this first step toward municipal ownership in the eastern metropolis. If the New York and Brooklyn papers are to be believed, it is difficult to imagine how municipal management could give more wretched and intolerable service than that supplied by the existing transportation companies of the great city.

WHAT'S THE PRICE?

That's the important question—and the first one nine out of ten customers ask.

Our answer—no need to pay more than you think you ought. Prices are graded—so are the values—and one is worth the other, always.

Suits as low as $18.00 and go up by easy stages to $40.00. Every extra $ gets you that much more worth.

NEW FEED MILL.

To help Andover's industrially it is as necessary to sustain industries already established as to erect new ones. We have just put in one of the very best plants money could buy for grinding feed, and will guarantee to do as good work as any concern in the country, and at living prices. Grists weighed in and out, and weights guaranteed within 1 per cent.

The Canal as a Business Venture.

Some economists are asking, Will the Panama canal pay? Presumably no one is in a position to definitely answer that question. Colonel George Earl Church, writing in the Journal of the Royal Geographical society, London, insists that it will not pay.

Ninety-six per cent of the inhabitants of the world, says Colonel Church, live north of the projected Panama canal route. What great trade is there likely to be, therefore, in a north to south or south to north direction? Next, with regard to trade from east to west or west to east, the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa must be left out of the question. The distance from Plymouth in England to Yokohama in Japan is 1,725 miles shorter by way of Suez than by way of Panama. Now, Plymouth and Yokohama are as far apart as any two important ports in the three continents under consideration. If Plymouth-Yokohama trade does not go by way of Panama, what European-African-Asiatic trade will? We are cut down, therefore, to the trade to or from or between the Americas. This trade Colonel Church analyzes. He thinks he finds that in the case of the ports on the western coast of South America it has been much exaggerated.

Proceeding along these lines of argument, Colonel Church reaches the conclusion that the toll receipts at Panama will bring in about $900,000 a year. This is at the rate of a dollar a ton, the highest possible rate. Meanwhile there will be interest—theoretical perhaps—on the $180,000,000 or more which the canal will cost, and there will be maintenance expenses reaching $2,000,000 a year. The deficit, therefore, will be over $1,000,000 a year.

Colonel Church may or may not be right in his conclusions. The chances are that he is not. There are, however, other reasons besides those of commercial expediency why the United States should build an isthmian waterway and will not be deterred from proceeding with the enterprise even by the possibility of a $1,000,000 deficit.

The Pittsburg Dispatch thinks that the story of the Standard Oil company acquiring the Beaumont and Jennings oilfields and raising the price of fuel oil $1 per barrel must be the reckless production of an unbridled and licentious press and asks: Has it not been told again and again that the result when a great and good trust gets rid of all its competitors is to lower prices? Is it not equally the prevailing doctrine that the Standard is exceptionally and invariably the typical good trust which always lowers prices and never raises them? How, then, could it put up the price of fuel oil after having absorbed the people who developed those fields? The papers which publish this report cannot expect to have any standing either in financial circles or in the richly endowed colleges of the land.

It was for the right to the use of the name of Roosevelt as a trademark for a rose that application was made to the commissioner of patents and which that official denied on the ground that a living celebrity is entitled to protection from the use of his name for purposes of trade by others, and this is especially true in the case of the name of the president of the United States. Why might not this ruling apply to others who are particular as to the uses made of their names as well as the president and thus put a stop to the annoying publicity which many people are unwillingly obliged to suffer?

A New York woman lawyer made a change in an original document presented in court and thereby lost her case. Commenting on her action, the judge said, "It may be a lay woman's prerogative to change her mind, but as a lawyer she may not change a line or a letter of moment in a paper purporting to be a copy of a verified complaint." So it would appear that in taking up the pursuits of mere men women must surrender one of their most precious privileges.

The governor of Indiana refuses to reinstate the sheriff whom he removed, under the provisions of law, for not preventing a lynching some months ago. Hoosier sheriffs will now perhaps be somewhat more alert than heretofore in preventing such disorders. It would be well if the Indiana law and its enforcement could be extended to some other states.

It is gratifying to learn that Prince Henry of Prussia will again visit the United States during the Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis in 1904. It is hoped by that time the damage inflicted upon his digestion on his former visit here will have been fully repaired.

The Boers have consented to meet Mr. Chamberlain. Having met Roberts and Kitchener and several other notable Englishmen, there is no reason why they should draw the line at a bland old gentleman with a monocle.

It is said that there are now more girls than boys preparing for colleges in the United States. By and by the sweet boy graduate will be a rare avis.

Preaching service next Sunday at 3:30 in the Elm Valley school-house by Rev. Chas. H. Harrington of the Baptist church.

Profanity in post-offices is forbidden in an order issued by First Assistant Postmaster-General Maston which it is said is prevalent in many fourth-class offices.

A Justice in South Scranton, Pa., fined a woman for doing the family washing on Sunday. Evidently the Pennsylvania law does not hold cleanliness to be next to godliness.

The marriage of Miss Edith Bennett of this place to Hervey Thorne of Brighton, N. Y., occurred at noon today, at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bennett, Rev. S. D. Pickett officiating.

Wayland seems to be booming in a way that is right. The American Drop Forge and Tool Company and a malable iron factory will locate there, making the fourth industry to locate in that village within the last three months.

The law offices of Hon. Jesse S. Phillips will be open during his absence at the session of the legislature, with competent parties in charge. He will be in constant communication with his office and all business will receive the same attention as ever.

From a copy of the Syracuse Herald received at this office it is noted that Prof. Armstrong, a former Andover High School principal has been elected President of the State Principals Association, which is a mark of esteem and honor Andover people are glad to know.

One year ago the State Superintendent of Education found 876 flagless school houses in the state. The school officer of each of the districts were ordered to procure a flag and display it as the law requires. On July 1, 1902, 140 flagless school houses still remained.

The new system of paying the employees of the Erie Railway Company by checks, which has been looked forward to for some time, will take effect this month. Considerable interest is manifested in this event by the employees of the company as well as by the business men and others.

A series of pictures dealing with "The Most Picturesque Events in American History," will be published in the Woman's Home Companion during 1903. The first of this series, "The Last Stand of the Patriots at Bunker Hill," a stirring drawing by F. C. Yohn, appears in the January number.

The court of appeals, in a recent decision in a fraternal insurance case, held that a policy of insurance taken out in a fraternal death-benefit association under certain by-laws cannot be affected by the subsequent amendment of such by-laws, even tho the amendments be passed at a convention of the duly-elected representatives of the policy-holders.

Woman's Home Companion: The American girl has often more individual character and strength of mind than any other girl in the world. She knows what she likes, what she wants, and what she dislikes and detests. This alone is a comfort when it comes to being associated with any one in a social way. The colorless damsel who simpers out "Anything you like, please," when you ask her what she wants for luncheon, is by no means a joy forever. The American girl knows what she wants to eat, what she needs to wear, what she cares to read. If she likes walking or riding or boating she will say so, and if she doesn't like these, she is quite likely to announce her predilections.

Notice to Advertisers.

No advertisement will be changed in this paper unless the copy is in the office before 12 o'clock Tuesday noon. This means you, and the rule will not be broken.

Seemingly the weather prophet has been loading the North Pole into our dooryards the past week.

Two little girls weighing 6 pounds each came to live at the home of Rev. B. B. Brown at Hartford Conn., Thursday last.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Watson of West Almond were guests of their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Robinson last week, Mr. Watson returning Saturday.

The Electric clock mentioned in last weeks NEWS, was placed in the A. M. Burrows Bank by our popular young jeweler F. C. Vars. This mention should have been made last week with that of the clock but the facts were not known to the writer in time.

Thru an oversight, the contribution of Capt. Robert O'Donnell was carelessly omitted from the list of Silk Mill contributors last week. Our genial Traveling Salesman coughed up 25 of those hard-earned Cartwheels of Uncle Samuel's to aid the enterprise, and he shall have due credit for his liberal contribution.

The Standard Oil Company is to give a pension to its employees. Those who have reached the age of 64, after 25 years in the service of the company, may retire on half pay for one year, after which the regular pension is to be paid to them. The pension is to be one-fourth of the salary which the employee was receiving at the time of his retirement.

Buffalo Express: The new licensing act in London is about as severe a measure as could be adopted short of prohibition for stopping drunkenness. A husband or wife may secure a separation for habitual drunkenness, while the police may arrest an inebriate whether disorderly or not. After conviction drunkards are blacklisted for three years, and if caught drinking in that time may be heavily fined, while the person who sells them liquor may also be fined. It will be interesting to see how this plan works.

A clipping from a western paper calls the attention of the NEWS to an interesting incident relative to a young man whom many Andover people know, in the person of Jailor Jackson, son of Victor Jackson and brother of Mrs. E. A. Stearns of this village. A shrewd attempt at jail breaking was planned by two cunning inmates who were awaiting execution for murder in the jail, over which he had charge, was nipped in the bud by his keenness. The paper speaks very highly of Mr. Jackson's services.

E. Raymond Smith has resigned his position with the Geo. Watkinson Rubber Company of Philadelphia, Pa., and accepted a like situation with the Atlantic Refining Company of Cleveland, Ohio, with territory in the eastern half of Pennsylvania. This company is one of the largest refining companies in the United States, and Mr. Smith is to be congratulated upon his success in landing so pleasant and lucrative a position. He has made splendid success as traveling salesman, and the NEWS is happy to chronicle the fact of his advancement.

The lecture given last Monday evening by R. E. King was not entirely satisfactory to the Andover people. In fact it is the poorest number that was ever in Andover on the School Entertainment Course. The weather might have had a little to do with the reception the lecture received, as the night was bitterly cold, so cold that the opera house could not be heated properly and the lecture was given in the Presbyterian Church. Never to be cheap "Worlds Almanac" talk as one of our citizens expressed it the next morning, is not taken by Andover people in good favor unless it comes with a ten cent medicine show. If train 8 had only been 30 minutes late instead of two hours that evening most Andover people would have been fully as well satisfied.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y. J. HARRIS AND SONS.

The Designer for February provides for its many readers a store of good things in which are cleverly combined practicability and attractiveness. The latest fashionable features in millinery and dress are given prominent place, but not to the exclusion of other matters, especially those in which womankind are particularly interested. The highly entertaining and instructive department "What Women Are Doing" show conclusively that the feminine sex are usurping some of the laurels heretofore awarded to their fathers, brothers and husbands.

Homemakers will be interested in the "all around house" described in the Delineator for February. For example is a house of modern cost, equipped with modern conveniences, and in arrangement artistic and comfortable. The well-known but often violated principle of architecture that buildings should be in perfect accord with the environment is exemplified in this case; and the interior, in decorations, furnishings and practical workings is a model of taste and convenience. The illustrations offer numerous suggestions that can be carried out in other homes.

It will be a pleasant piece of news to Andover people to learn that today Hon. Jesse S. Phillips was honored by the State Assembly with the appointment of Chairman of the Committee on Codes. Allegany county has not been honored with such an important position since the time of Assemblyman Robbins. The committee is one of the most important in the Assembly, and the fact of "Out Jesse" landing it is not only an honor to him but also a mark of respect for his ability that we may all feel proud of. The NEWS congratulates the Hon. Jesse S. Phillips.

The Symphony Club.

At the regular meeting of the Andover Symphony Club, held on Wednesday, Jan. 7, 1903, the following resolutions on the death of Miss Bessie DeLaney were adopted:

Death has once more invaded our ranks and taken from us our beloved associate in song, Bessie DeLaney.

Grieved by her sudden and sad demise, words would fail to express our deep and heartfelt sorrow. We may, indeed, say that "the angel of pity kissed the white lids down over the soft blue eyes, hushed her into the sleep no pain can wakon, and Heaven was brighter when she stood within the gates of pearl."

May her sweet voice be sweeter still in Paradise.
