GREENWOOD LOCAL BRIEFS

Trouble never comes singly.

Another cloud burst at West Union and Whitesville, Tuesday.

Bennetts Creek was on the warpath for a short time.

The Railroad Company had succeeded in getting a work train from Genesee to Whitesville, Tuesday, when a cloud-burst tore out the repairs that had just been put on the road.

The loss of the bridges and trestles in Greenwood and Canisteo will delay the operation of the railroad some time, in case the road is rebuilt.

The road through Greenwood and Canisteo suffered most and that part would cost heavy to put in operation.

The road from Macauley's Crossing at the south end of Main street above the trestle washed out, could be repaired at less expense, and trains could run from here to Genesee, a distance of about 16 miles, and connect with the railroad to Wellsville, where connections are made with the Erie. The distance from the Macauley Crossing to Canisteo Erie Station is about 11 miles or about 5 miles nearer than to Genesee, but would accommodate the traffic fairly well.

John and Frank Macauley, of West Hill, were in town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O'Dell, of Jasper, are in Greenwood. Mr. O'Dell has been in poor health for some time and his friends are highly pleased to see him out again.

Ben Sweet, of Rexville, is a village visitor.

Will Harkenrider, of West Union, was in our city Wednesday.

Cass Brundage is visiting relatives in Greenwood.

Thomas Day was in Greenwood Wednesday greeting old acquaintances.

Geo. Rollins, of Rough-and-Ready, was among the visitors in town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Eben Spencer, of Jasper, were in Greenwood, Monday.

Abram Bailey is visiting friends in town.

Jas. Fitzpatrick was on our streets Monday.

Mrs. Pease and son, Harland, are visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gasper were among the visitors in town Monday.

Mrs. Henry Whiteman died at her home in this place last week, of pneumonia, aged 81 years.

Her only near relative in this vicinity, William Hale, died but a few weeks ago. Mrs. Whiteman had been an invalid for many years. She will be remembered for her many good qualities and neighborly acts of kindness.

The funeral was held at her late residence, Sunday afternoon.

R. S. Wyckoff, of Jasper, was in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson and daughter visited this place Tuesday.

Doc. Stewart was in town Tuesday. While on his return from Rexville he got caught in the waters from the cloud burst near Rough-and-Ready and the water came into his auto above the floor.

John Swarts was in town Tuesday.

Will Bassett, of Bennetts, was in town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Keeffi of West Union, and son, Ligouri, are in Greenwood on business.

John Driscoll, of Rough-and-Ready, was in town Wednesday.

Carranza seems very ungrateful to the United States for what they have done for him and his party. He was in a deadly struggle with Villa and needed recognition by the world which waited the action of this country. We recognized his government, we have furnished him munitions and other supplies and have denied them to his enemies. Then when Villa made war on our citizens Carranza joins him. His base ingratitude will receive its just reward.

This Government has demanded the immediate release of the prisoners taken at Carrizal. A refusal to comply means war.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's Liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache attack utes and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp-out without Sloan's Liniment," writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.—Advertisement.

ALL-STEEL ERIE DINING CARS

The Barney & Smith Car Company has under construction for the Erie Railroad Company two all-steel dining cars. These cars will be seventy-nine feet long and will include all of the latest improvements. Indirect system of lighting will be used for the center lights and the side lights will be shaded.

One of the features of these cars will be the center table and seating arrangement. The tables will be placed in the center of cars with aisles on both sides. The advantages of this arrangement are: privacy; less liability of injury to diners due to windows being shattered or coal falling from trains on adjacent track; less liability of shock to persons of nervous temperament due to passing trains. Seven tables will be placed in each car, seating twenty-eight persons.

Bobby Veach proved one of the best fielding gents in the Major Leagues last season. In a Base Ball throwing contest at Boston last July against Speaker Lewis & Hopper he threw the ball over the extreme outfield fence three times and the best any of the Boston Athletes did was once. He will be with the Detroit Club at Wellsville, N. Y., Wednesday, July 5th.

THE COST OF UNEMPLOYED

By Rev. V. L. Eggleston

I.

"General" Coxey, who moved on toward Washington with his army of unemployed men, had an idea, and his manner of expressing it is quite original, but the idea itself is not at all original. It is the old idea of the parental relation of the government to the people. When things go wrong in business or social affairs the government is to blame. It is in duty bound to provide for the people and if any great number of them are out of employment the government should be appealed to to remedy the evil. If the people are hungry the "Great Father" at Washington must feed them, and so "General" Coxey marched to the national capital to demand work for an army that numbered a hundred and fifty thousand or more.

This view of the powers and duties of the general government is one worthy of serious discussion, for a great many well-meaning people accept it and are very persistent in urging it; but, if adopted and acted upon it will constitute a very great innovation in our political system. The American theory of government has heretofore been different. It has been held to be the duty of the general government to preserve the public peace, maintain the national honor, and secure to every citizen the freedom and protection to which he is entitled, but the providing work for all who demand it or establishing free homes or free tables for the needy, and maintaining public works for the mere sake of giving employment, has been heretofore quite beyond the recognized province of our government, and there are some reasons why this view should be maintained.

Perhaps the best argument in its favor consists in looking at the probable consequences of the adoption of its opposite, that is, the attempted fatherly care of all needy people.

II.

One fact bearing upon the question is of prime importance and that is that those who once get their hands upon the national purse are never satisfied. The government is to them a mine that is to be worked for all it is worth. Gen. Coxey only asked the appropriation of one hundred million dollars for the unemployed and proposed to camp in front of the White House until his demand was granted.

Another project was to build a vast paved highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific for the mere sake of giving employment, and another, which I believe was seriously formulated as a congressional bill was to issue bonds for the sum of six hundred million dollars, the proceeds to be expended in giving work at four dollars a day to all who applied as long as the money lasted.

There is no danger of our government ever failing under the power of this sort of "reformers," but their teachings may indirectly do a great deal of harm. They create dissatisfaction with our institutions and laws and whatever tends towards this is a source of real danger.

In fact it is just here that the future stability of our government is most seriously threatened. It cannot be doubted that respect for law is on the decline and that the number of those who sympathize with anarchy is steadily increasing. "Respect for law is a supersition," cried a speaker at one of the social science congresses at Chicago, and he was applauded as well as hissed.

III.

There is one fact that theoretical reformers are very apt to overlook, namely; that what may, under certain circumstances, be of the greatest value may, under other circumstances be not only useless but in the highest degree injurious.

A distinguished writer has pointed out that the ideal of the anarchist is the very highest. It is that of perfect self-government, the abolition of all external authority—and the substitution of that individual self-control in which consists the perfection of government.

But what kind of people are capable of this change? Is it not those of the highest moral organization, these and no others?

I believe the world is tending towards this end, this consummation of the process of evolution, when no political authority will be needed beyond that necessary to repress the undeveloped and secure freedom in proportion to the degree of moral elevation.

Have we not indeed, practically attained to this in many cases? Take the ease of any man who is usefully and honestly employed and who has no interests or ambitions in conflict with law or society. What is the law to him? What is it but a protector, a shield against harm? It is for him that the policeman patrols the street all night long. It is for him that men and horses and engines stand ready night and day to rush forth at the alarm of life. It is for him that a standing army guards every frontier, lest some intruder should disturb the public peace. It is for him that ships sail over the seas bearing the products of all climes to and fro, laying upon his table everything that can contribute to his health and pleasure. It is for him that a thousand arts have been developed and a thousand fabrics made, for him that books are written and printed, for him that the sun shines and rain falls and plants grow, for him that birds sing and flowers bloom and sweet music floats upon the air. What is law to him but a hedge around his just possessions? He is free in proportion to his moral elevation and his capacity for self-maintenance and usefulness.

Alexander sought to conquer the world and failed, but the world does not need to be conquered by the true philosopher in order that he may possess it. The world comes and offers itself to him and protects him into the bargain. The ideal of the anarchist is thus realized with no changes in existing institutions.

IV.

The process of out[illegible] and making it only a [illegible] stead of a tyranny is simply a process of personal evolution. The laws of this country are sufficiently just and impartial to admit of all the personal growth and all the practical success that any individual is capable of.

The problem for the unemployed is that of personal evolution. It is not one of devising means of squeezing money out of the government.

The unemployed who insist that the government shall support them are the opposite of the anarchists who want no government at all.

The problem of labor at self-supporting wages is the greatest problem that ever confronted civilization.

The enormous increase of machinery within the past fifty years has displaced the labor of human hands to an extent that cannot be regarded without the most serious apprehensions for the future. The machine cheapens the product and thus increases consumption, but it does not increase it to an extent that compensates to man for the loss he sustains by the competition. Where a machine does the work of fifty men it does not cause fifty times the consumption of the article made, hence man is at a loss.

It is believed by the most acute observers and students of social science that the disproportion between demand and supply in the labor market will go on increasing with the advance of inventive skill, and that human labor will be less and less in demand, thus compelling the workmen to a more and more disastrous competition. I felt thus a few weeks ago as I stood in the press-room of the New York World and saw ten great presses doing the work of a thousand men under the old hand press system, while two or three men to each press stood almost idle by, directing the work of their monster competitors.

The army of the unemployed threatens to go on increasing far beyond the capacity of governments or charity or human ingenuity to provide, meanwhile the most skillful in every line get the work. The unskilled will be the sufferers. The well-paid workman of the future will be the one who as a boy does his best to develop all the gifts of brain and hand he may possess.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, appear at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

Just be a game loser. Don't howl when you're stung. Let no one get wise to the fact you got hung. They don't care a rap, all they'll do is to talk, and say serves him right, he was always a gawk. The lid for your trouble and put it down hard. Let nothing get by your most vigilant guard. You can if you will face the music and say, There's no one more happy than I am today. We all have our troubles, but mine I forget. I don't harbor worries. I've no rooms to let. There's someone at home all the time every day. I'm wise to my cue and I know how to play. I'm shy on the dollars. I've no coach and four, but jitneys are plentiful right at the door. I care not for either the way that I feel. I'm healthy and strong on the pedalmobile. Let those take it easy who want to get sick. I'd rather work hard and be there with the kick. I'll not make a murmur or loosen my grip, no matter how far down the ladder I slip. I'll take a new hold, never minding the drop, and make a bee line again straight for the top.
