WHEN WILL IT BE?

When some person takes it in hand in the years to come to write the history of Andover, we wonder what there will be revealed that will startle. Perhaps then the ones who are laboring so hard to make the village what it ought to be will receive their due recognition, but now its the one who, fighting in the dark, unseen, unknown or at least unrecognized, who is lifting and using all the energy and power for the betterment of others. It will ever be so, always too late (and perhaps it's better late than never), that due recognition to the workers.

AND YET, WHAT?

There are always so many who see the lions in the way that have to learn they are harmless creatures. There's an opportunity for some live man to crown himself with glory by taking matters in charge and telling the officials of the Erie to slick up in and around the depot. There is not a place doing the business that goes out from Andover that is not given a more liberal treatment. Now you'll say, How can anything be done in cold weather. Well, there is the inside of the old waiting room a coat of paint or whitewash would help matters. When will it be?

THE NEW MOVE.

Perhaps there are visions of a new future. The days of visions have passed away. Sooner than we think the new move will be here. Plans have been laid for several new dwellings in the spring, and soon the sun will drive the workers out. But the new move must be a careful one. Do not look upon every new comer as legitimate prey to enrich your purse. Go slow. "Live and let live" is a good policy to follow, and the careful one will in the end reap the benefit of the new move.

OUR MERCHANTS.

When you look thru the advertising columns of the NEWS it will give you an idea of the progressive line of merchants we have. "Up-to date" and alive in every particular. The advertisements are an index to business, and the line of goods carried far in advance of grade and variety of any other town of like size. Think of that when you go to do your trading, and let everybody patronize home merchants, and give them an opportunity to still further increase and expand so that they too may be able to meet the new move.

"THAT'S ALL."

More could be said along the old lines, and there are many new lines that will be touched in the issues to come, and perhaps we may find the time when. Alas, the need is an open front, wide awake all thru the man, and that when things are brought to pass no one will fear results. When will it be?

QUIEN SABE?

Hamilton W. Mable's little story about a certain Boston religious weekly, told at the recent Mark Twain dinner in New York, wasn't half bad. This religious paper, it seems, was at first called the Fireside Companion, but when modern ways and especially modern methods of heating were introduced the Fireside Companion became the Christian Register.

The Kentucky distillers have concluded to organize and carry their own fire insurance. Now, how would the Kentuckians like it if the insurance companies should retaliate by getting together and making their own whisky?

Anyway Reed Smoot, the Mormon who wants to break into the United States senate, ought not to be held responsible for his name. He probably had no voice in its selection.

Though the Britons whipped the Boers, the latter are getting even with a vengeance. They are writing books and selling them to the English.

General De Wet is managing to get almost as much glory and luncheon out of the South African war aftermath as Lord Kitchener.

Formalin in Blood Poisoning.

Dr. Barrows' successful use of formalin in a dangerous case of blood poisoning marks a definite advance in the science of medicine and naturally attracts widespread interest and comment. In his report of the case to the New York Academy of Medicine Dr. Barrows tells of the treatment of the negro woman whom he found in Bellevue hospital dying of blood-poison following childbirth. The first injection of 500 cubic centimeters of a solution of formalin in the proportion of 1 to 5,000 caused a drop in temperature, and the second injection of a solution of the same strength, using 750 cubic centimeters, placed the woman on the road to recovery. Dr. Barrows said that a culture of the patient's blood made before the injection showed the presence of streptococci, the bacteria which, he holds, are the cause of sepsis, and when the woman had practically recovered he found no trace of streptococci. From this case he therefore drew the conclusion that the formalin had destroyed the streptococci and that it could do no harm.

It cannot be expected, however, that the results anticipated will always attend the use of the formalin treatment. All sorts of complications are liable to occur coincidently with sepsis, and even the destruction of the streptococci in the blood might not restore the conditions permitting recovery.

The formalin treatment was used in the case of Editor Gonzales, who was shot by Lieutenant Governor Tillman of South Carolina, and that it did not save his life is not to be wondered at. The liver was torn by the bullet, and the septic poisoning resulting was quickly beyond surgery. It is quite probable that neither President Garfield nor President McKinley would have derived any benefit from formalin injections, and theirs were typical cases of blood poisoning caused by gunshot wounds.

Very different, however, is the puerperal sepsis which sends so many young mothers to the grave prematurely and which has ever been the dread of the obstetrician. If the formalin treatment accomplishes nothing more than to minimize the mortality in such cases, it will be an inestimable boon to humanity.

As the New York Times remarks, it is the misfortune of discoveries of this kind that they are put to impossible tests by unauthorized and empirical experimenters and that success is questioned while failure is heralded. It would seem as if the great medical organizations could handle such matters better than they are now handled.

History Repeating Itself.

The London Chronicle finds a parallel for the Saxony scandal in the matrimonial escapade of another member of a royal house about two centuries ago. Cosimo III. when heir to the throne of Tuscany married Louisa, a daughter of the Duke of Orleans. Endowed with rare beauty and extraordinary vivacity, she was by nature and education opposed to all gravity and state. Neither her husband nor her father, the reigning Duke of Tuscany, could control her, and various attempts were made to induce her to respect the position she held. After several reconciliations with her husband she was at last detected in an intrigue with a Frenchman of the lowest rank, with whom she was projecting an elopement. Two German grooms and another Frenchman, this one a dancing master, were her confidants and lovers. She finally left her husband and took refuge in France to be near an old lover, Prince Charles of Lorraine. Naturally she came to no good end and died in Paris in 1721. Thus does history repeat itself.

The men at the head of the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis have promised a world's fair in 1904 which will surpass in interest and importance anything of its kind ever before seen, and everything now indicates that the pledge will be fully and faithfully kept. That the exposition directors are having the co-operation of a goodly part of the civilized world is apparent. Germany and Italy are making generous appropriations for exhibits at the fair. France took similar action long ago, and so, we believe, did Great Britain. All the countries of Europe of any consequence are pretty sure to be well represented at this great gathering of the products and activities of the world.

Patrick Sheedy, an eminent authority, says gambling odds make the gambling houses sure winners. Still many people will visit them, and every foolish victim who passes the guarded portals fondly expects that he will break the bank.

Venezuela is doubtless hoping that something may yet be discovered in the Monroe doctrine requiring the United States to indorse its promissory notes.

Owing to the prevailing prices for fuel it is perhaps unfair to criticise severely the New York French ball. The people must keep warm some way.

The news from the Morocco rebellion is so variable that it might easily be mistaken for a South American revolution.

The Fluctuations of Trade.

An interesting study in the fluctuations in foreign trade and commerce is furnished by the record of the year 1902, which shows a marked change in the share which the various ports have had in the distribution of the exports of the United States.

The gulf ports show a falling off of about 13 per cent in exportations as compared with last year and the Atlantic coast ports a decline of about 10 per cent, while the lake and northern border ports show a gain of 3 per cent, the Pacific coast ports a gain of 10 per cent and the Mexican border ports an increase of 25 per cent.

These marked contrasts, in which the ports tributary to the Atlantic shows a reduction and those on the Pacific or fronting upon contiguous territory show an increase, are in keeping with the general trend of the year's commerce, in which exports to Europe show a marked decline and those to Asia and to the contiguous territory at the north and south a marked growth. Exports to Europe especially were affected by the crop failure of 1901, since breadstuffs and provisions form the large proportion of the sales of the United States to that part of the world, while our exports to Asia, Mexico and Canada were less affected by crop failures, since manufactures form the bulk of our sales to those parts of the world; hence the decrease in shipments through gulf and Atlantic ports and the increase in those through Pacific ports and those fronting upon contiguous territory.

While the foregoing figures, which are furnished by the treasury bureau of statistics, include only eleven months of the year, they are presumably a fair index of the full year's operations at the various great doorways through which the exports of the country are distributed.

Indian Art and Industry.

Lord Curzon, the viceroy of India, has been making an earnest appeal in behalf of Indian art and industry. He lamented the fact that a study of Indian arts, industries and manufactures showed a progressive deterioration. Any effort to stem the tide of modern commercialism and utilitarianism would of course be futile. In India, he said, they were witnessing only one aspect of a process which is going on throughout the world that long ago extinguished the old manual industries of England and is rapidly extinguishing those of China and Japan. Nothing can stop it.

The power loom will drive out the hand loom, and the factory will get the better of the workshop just as surely as the steam car is superseding the horsed carriage and the hand pulled punkah is being replaced by the electric fan. Indian art, he continued, could only flourish or be revived by the determination of the Indian chiefs and aristocracy to patronize it. So long as they prefer to fill their palaces with flaming Brussels carpets, Tottenham Court Road furniture, cheap Italian mosaics, French oleographs, Austrian lusters, German tissues and cheap brocades the prospect would be discouraging.

Unquestionably the widespread distress that so frequently prevails in India is in a large measure due to the failure to keep pace with the rest of the world in the fine arts and industry, and if Lord Curzon shall be able to stimulate these he will be doing an inestimably valuable work for the vast country over which he has been chosen to preside. The chief trouble seems to be the inactivity and carelessness of the native princes and petty provincial rulers, who are seemingly unmoved by the deplorable conditions of the great mass of the Indian people.

It will be interesting to watch the results of a new law in England designed to abolish or at least lessen the nuisance of drunkenness. Heretofore drunkenness was not a legal offense unless accompanied by disorder, but now it is a punishable offense of itself. The police are drawing up a list with photographs of all the men in every district who have been convicted three times of drunkenness, and copies of these lists and photographs will be supplied to every saloon keeper or publican, and the latter will be subject to fine or imprisonment if they sell liquor to such persons. If the law is properly enforced, it would seem that the habitual tippler would have considerable difficulty in keeping up his dissipation.

An unfavorable report having been made on the bill proposing to change the date of the presidential inaugurations, the next president, like all of his predecessors, will have to be inaugurated in the rain.

An Indiana judge who accepted pay from his appointees to help defray his campaign expenses has been "persuaded" by the county bar to resign. Like Cesar's wife, judges should be above suspicion.

The irrigationists might arrange for some of the water the statesmen propose to squeeze out of the trusts.

People are not expected to "put on airs" because they are burning imitated coal.

The Workshop.
That's where the real value of an article is determined. The way a jewel or a piece of jewelry is handled in the workshop often determines its price. We buy from the best manufacturers. It is our intention to sell the highest grade of jewelry. If a ring, a pin, a watch or any article of jewelry whatever ever goes from here isn't as represented, we are here to give satisfaction—to make amends. We want your jewelry trade—we will treat you so that we will keep it.
Our repairing department is a hospital for the treatment of disabled watches, clocks and jewelry, the sort that is done right the first time.
FLOYD C. VARS.

The Most Critical Judgment
even that of the man who pays the bills, finds nothing but praise for these elegant and perfectly made Chairs of ours. There are Chairs here well made of every fashionable material. There are Chairs here becoming to every parlor, setting or dining room in Andover. Never mind about the price, they have nothing to do with you now—what we want is to get you to look. The buying part will take care of itself.

Miss Columbia is a most charming lady, if she is to believe all that Hans has to say about her, but if she is half as wise as she is beautiful she will reserve her favors for another suitor.

Every little while we hear that diamonds will explode. We are not concerned with the reason for this but accept the statement as a fact and will call it to the attention of Mary Jane at once.

Rev. Chas. H. Harrington, pastor of the Baptist church, will preach at 3:30 p. m. next Sunday in the Elm Valley school house. These meetings have been well attended during the stormy Sundays and a growing interest is noticeable.

Advertising is the link that connects business with success, and all the big merchants of this country are well aware of this fact. Why cannot our smaller merchants see thru the advantages of continually advertising? Jacksonville (Fla.) Advocate.

An exchange says a man in a neighboring town who took a city paper in preference to a country paper because he got more paper, was attracted by an advertisement of a fire escape which would be forwarded on receipt of two dollars. He sent the cash and in a few days received a copy of the New Testament.

N. E. Hardy returned Saturday from a three weeks visit with his daughter, Mrs. Daniel Cooper. His son-in-law is conducting a large chemical works at Backus, McKean Co., Pa., and "Nick" can give you some interesting details about that business that cannot fail to interest and instruct you. Ask him about it.

The business meeting of the Lucy Stone Club will be held with Mrs. R. B. Burrows instead of with Mrs. Fowler as announced in the Year Book, Tuesday afternoon, February 3d, at 3 o'clock. The annual meeting of the Andover-Whitesville Telephone Co. occurred at the store of T. R. Bassett, Independence, Monday. The officers elected were: Lewis Livermore, President; E. E. Clarke, Vice President; A. D. Howe, Secretary; T. R. Bassett, Treasurer; Directors, John M. Green, Independence; Park Rogers, Andover; Geo. Magee, Whitesville.

Clayton Williams has resigned his position in E. J. Atwood's hardware store, and has formed a partnership with his uncle, H. H. Williams, in the grocery business. The new company will be known as H. H. Williams & Co. Mr. Williams is a popular young salesman in this village, and his connection with the "Crescent Grocery" will add to the prestige already given that store, corner Main and Center streets.

Tuesday's Wellsville Reporter says: At 9:30 o'clock last evening occurred the death of Hon. Sumner Baldwin at his residence on East Fassett street, death resulting from a complication of diseases. Mr. Baldwin who would have been seventy years in March, has been an invalid for several years. On the last day of January, 1898, he suffered a slight stroke of paralysis and about a year after another one, which left him in quite feeble health.

The coal situation is something more than deplorable, it is a distinct threat to our system of government. No one connected with the situation seems to have clean hands, the operators have been harsh and unjust to the men, the men have been guilty of anarchistic methods, the dealers have undoubtedly preyed upon the sufferings and necessities of the public and the State and National officials have been afraid to touch the combination. A remedy must be found, and found before another winter, or there will be more and worse sufferings than the pinch of cold.

The office boy has been busy this week sending out statements to all in arrearage for subscriptions. There are one or two little matters we wish to refer to in this connection. Now do not think you are to be dunned right here in cold type. We never do that. We believe our readers usually pay for papers to contain reading matter that will interest them. We don't like to dun in any way, and are thinking very strongly of adopting the policy of no pay no paper, in the very near future. But did you ever know of any one who never made a mistake? The young man who made out these bills is not at all above error, and it perchance he has made a slight mistake in your account, don't rave over the matter but just take the last receipt you have received from us and come down to the office. We will make it right.

Governor Odell has expressed himself as in favor of the Good Roads movement now being thoroly advocated all over this state by members of the various boards of supervisors and highway commissioners. It looks to the most of us that it is the part of wisdom for the state of New York to put what surplus money they have into the construction of good roads that will be a benefit to its people, especially to the farmers—who are in fact the ones whom we are after all dependent—rather than into the Erie canal, that directly invites and fosters western competition to our own inhabitants, by taxing New York state tillers of the soil to equip a thorofare for the western agriculturist, who from the fact of the natural advantages can raise grain much cheaper than can the eastern farmers, and give them, at our expense, the eastern markets.

The credit system as worked in the various organizations in Andover brings out the most unique methods of entertaining by those of the defeated side. The ladies of the Relief Corps of Andover so far beat the record in that regard. The defeated sisters of that organization gave the "conquering heroes," or the winning side notice to meet them Tuesday afternoon at Sidney Crandall's home on Dyke street for a sleighride. They were there, punctual to the hour, and upon going to the street for the sleighride found each member of the defeated side waiting with a hand sled ready to draw one of the more fortunate members. The sleds were decorated with bunting, and after each lady had been seated on her "sleigh," she was given banners and flags to carry in her hand. The President carried a banner, "This is the President." The procession started up Main street, single file, from Dyke street, and ended at the G. A. R. hall. After a social hour at the hall a fine banquet was served at the home of the Captain of the defeated side, Mrs. S. J. Fowler.

Pastor Harrington in Olean.

The pastor of the Baptist church, Rev Chas. H. Harrington, has been assisting the pastor at Olean in a series of very remarkable meetings. Under the head of "Meetings of greater power", the Olean Times of successive dates says as follows: "The meeting at the Baptist church last evening was a decided advance. The large parlors were crowded and extra chairs were brought in. To-night the class room will be thrown open. Mr. Harrington is a unique leader of the singing, having methods which are delightfully original and taking. His preaching delighted all. It was in power and in demonstration of the spirit. A number of persons asked for prayers."

"The break has come in the meetings now being conducted in the Baptist church. Strong men and women are seeking Christ. Nearly one third of the audience last night were men. Six new cases of seekers, all adults, were the visible results last evening, and every Christian present was advanced in the Christian life. It was a meeting long to be remembered."

"At the Baptist church last night six came forward for prayers. Mr. Harrington has not spoken with more power than upon 'Eternity.' The singing was an inspiration to all".

SHOES!
Lincoln Shoes for Women are the Kind that Wear.
They are Models in Style and Cost Only $2.00.
We never sold a Shoe at the price that gave such universal satisfaction. We absolutely guarantee every pair, and if it has an equal we don't know where it is. We have never seen it. If you have never worn a Lincoln Shoe, ask your neighbor about them. A great many people in Andover and vicinity must be wearing them for we're selling lots of them every month in the year.
Another Shoe that has never been matched at the price is
Queen Quality
SHOE FOR WOMEN.
They don't have to be "broken in." They feel like an old Shoe from the start. They fit. Styles for most of the Shoes for women originate with the Queen Quality, and one more point—Queen Quality offers twice as many styles for your consideration as any other Shoe. You can't suggest a need that is not fitted with a Queen Quality Shoe specially designed for it.
