OUR KEYNOTE:
"If There is not a Way, Cut a Way."

Andover, N. Y., July 7, 1916.

Entered as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, at the Post-office at Andover, N. Y.

Buck up! We are not licked yet!

• • •

July, we hope, will be at least recognizable.

• • •

Swatting Carranza is at least giving the fly a rest.

• • •

When truth is your guide you never leave the track.

• • •

All aboard for Mex. Free passage for all who will fight.

• • •

We continue, thro to hear an occasional word about politics.

• • •

But Mexico, of course, has forgotten the lesson learned by Spain.

• • •

The man who loves his home town, is invariably loved by the people thereof.

• • •

China, perhaps, approaches some semblance of civilization in this day of slaughter.

• • •

With summer hopping along, the grasshopper, too, will begin to perform his stunt.

• • •

And the mosquitoes, too, are springing to arms in defense of their inalienable rights.

Time works wonders in many ways, but not all of us fall into step with the workings.

• • •

War is cutting down the use of liquors in England, but America is hitting the high spots at every jump.

• • •

One-third of the employees of shoe factories in the United State are women. Of course they ough to vote.

• • •

The Michigan peach crop, they say, is never a failure. And, to be sure, neither are our feminine peaches.

• • •

Three of the most desirable things on this earth are peace, a full stomach and stuffed pocket-book.

• • •

We copy it, but it is good. "Drink often brings a man so lov that he can't even raise the price of a drink."

• • •

Honesty is the best policy and will take you a long ways, but thieves often pull down the biggest plums.

• • •

While the men do the fighting in the field, wouldn't it be well to let the women stop the fighting at home?

• • •

Whenever you can see the good points of your town it's a moral certainty that others can see your own.

• • •

No wonder we have so many big paunches in this country. Forty-five per cent. of the incomes are spent for food.

• • •

The woman who diplomatically allures her husband to think he is the boss of the ranch, will continue herself to rule the roost.

• • •

A close friend occasionally loosens up, says an exchange. But most friends, we note, are just beyond the border of closeness.

• • •

Insurance is a great protection to the widow and children, but the accumulation of a heavy bank account supplies the fun between.

• • •

If given his choice between health, wealth and happiness, we don't know a man on earth who wouldn't scramble for the bunch.

• • •

The Brazilian navy has a power boat which developes 6,000 horse power—equal, we believe, to the power developed by the average American citizen.

* * *

Georgia employs practically all of her county prisoners in the construction of good roads. It's one way of improving them—the roads of course.

• • •

The armies of Europe have suffered one notable set-back. They have been knocked off the front pages in honor of our own little scrap with the buzzards of Mexico.

MAKING TIMES PROSPEROUS

Prosperity to a considerable degree rests upon the whims of the business interests of the country and upon the people themselves.

If they are optimistic and believe in prosperity and work faithfully to that end, prosperity will be with us, regardless of conditions in other countries. We are a self-supporting people and are not dependent upon the whims or exertions of others.

But if we become pessimistic and constantly predict disaster and force ourselves to the belief that it is to come, then we are likely to get no more than that which we predict.

A few people, through the constant use of their tongues, can in time instill into the minds of others the same atmosphere of gloom that pervades them, and this is spread to others, and yet others until communities and states and whole nations suffer from the effect.

But prosperity can be made if we want it. It will come if we seek it. It will remain if we nurse it.

We should talk prosperity, feel prosperity and get prosperity if we would have prosperity, for in no other way will we meet up with the favors of the gods.

It is up to you, to every citizen, to work for prosperity in Andover, for it is an almost universal rule of man that we receive in proportion as we do.

OUR NATIONAL HONOR

This is a time when every citizen of the United States, either native or foreign born, should rally to the flag of his country. Whether it be by the bearing of arms or by the expression of loyalty in sentiment and action, our country should have the undivided support of every person. It is not the time for haggling or criticism or for the indulgence in political juggling of the interests of the people.

We want unity of purpose and action by a united people and for a united people, and nothing lse.

The Mexican leaders appear determined to force us to a conflict of arms, and if it must come it is a duty of every citizen to be a citizen in fact as well as in name. Half-hearted loyalty is not to be even considered.

When the national honor and the protection of the lives and property rights of our people are in jeopardy political considerations and party strife should be relegated to the rear, leaving in its wake a nation welded together by the chains of an unquenchable fire of patriotism.

Our national honor is in the balance to-day. It must be upheld at any cost and under all circumstances and conditions.

TAKING THE HOME PAPER

Do you know of a person in this whole community who would be willing to go thru life month by month and year by year without a knowledge of the news features of the township in which he resides? Would you like to be that person? It is difficult to convince the average reader of the real value of his home paper unless he has at some time or other been forced to do without it. Then it is that its value is brought home to him. Most people subscribe for the home paper, read it, enjoy it, and absorb the news it contains as a matter of course, giving scarcely a thought to the vast amount of labor entailed in the production of the issue. And yet that issue means a tremendous concentration of thought and energy and perseverance on the part of both the editor and his entire force of employees. The work thus represented on an issue of the Andover News, for instance costs the reader the trifling sum of two cents when taken by the year as nearly all of them are sold. Would you like to fill the editor's shoes for a week, or a month? Would you consider that the work thus involved had met with just compensation?

As The Editor Sees It.

Some times the editor "sees it" and sometimes he don't but he writes right along just the same, for he is expected to see everything and know everything and tell everything he both sees and knows. But he don't. If he were to publish everything he sees and spread everything he knows a cyclone would be mild in comparison to the storm that would sweep over the community. And yet our fair bailiwick is no worse than the normal community the world over. But few people ever realize the amount of patience and discretion the average publisher must observe. He hears and sees many things. Their publication would serve no legitimate purpose, could result in no good whatever to the community, could be of benefit to no human being, but on the contrary would bring grief and suffering to many innocent people. It is in such matters that the humane publisher tempers his actions with mercy and adulterates it with the milk of human kindness. Yet, but little of this consideration is ever extended to the publishers themselves.

There never was a candidate for public office but what was exceedingly anxious to win the good will and the votes of the people on election day. There never was an intelligent voter but what he was equally anxious to know something of that candidate; of his qualifications, of his views, and of his ability to make good. No candidate can possibly expect to meet every voter face to face, and but few of them ever meet the majority. It thus becomes necessary to take them on faith or by reputation, a proceeding that is not very satisfactory to the voter—at least to the voter with brains. The simple and effective method, therefore, of bringing the voter and the candidate together is thru the medium of the local newspaper, and of late years this fact appears to have been thoroughly impressed upon the minds of the wide awake seeker for public favor. No candidate can do better than to speak to the people thru the columns of the local press. The very fact that he does so is evidence of the fact that he is open and above board with the people whose friendship and support he seeks. We suggest to all candidates that the time is opportune to take the people into their confidence and let them know just where they stand on the issues of the day—just what they are willing to do for the good of their constituents which they hope to serve. The cost of advertising space in all local newspapers is so small in proportion to the benefits derived that the preponderance of weight is all on the side of publicity. Come to life, gentlemen, and let us know who you are, what you want and where you stand. The people are waiting to hear from you before they are called upon to support your nomination at the local primaries.

The Crude Ovens not pictured here may be right for the preparation of food for the Mexicans, but they would never serve the purpose of a bakery that caters to the people of this community. Our Fancy Baked Goods need the most modern of baking appliances and also need expert care in their preparation. That they are of superior quality is proved by the statements of our large number of satisfied customers. "Quality and Cleanliness" is the motto of this Bakery at all times.

Here's the Backbone

---of the---

Chautauqua

It's in the lecture numbers. Music and entertainment there will be—and a-plenty of it. But the MEAT is in the five lectures. Talks like these are pace setters and thought stimulators. They make a man grow overnight. They lift him up as by his boot straps. They set him thinking in new trains of thought. They broaden his horizon and give him a bigger look at things.

Each day of the Chautauqua brings its special message in form of a lecture. We'll look at four of the five.

Professor E. J. Ward

of the Federal Bureau of Education at Washington is the founder of the social center movement. And what is that? It is a plan of getting neighbors together to talk over things that are best for the community and when they have settled on something to go out and make it a fact. It means the development of a stronger community sentiment. It is a movement that has the unstinted indorsement of two ex-presidents, Roosevelt and Taft, and of President Wilson. It is sweeping the nation. Hear Ward on the second day. He'll tell you all about it.

Judge Lee S. Estelle

the great juvenile court judge from Omaha, the man who established one of the earliest special courts for juvenile offenders and has saved thousands of "kiddies" from lives of crime. He has built a Child Saving Institution and has taken many a youngster out of the gutter and set him on his feet and seen him grow into useful citizenship. His lecture he calls "The Law, the Lass and the Lad." Hear him on the third night.

Dr. George P. Bible

It is the uplift and the inspiration in the Chautauqua that has carried it into more than 3,000 communities in ten years. No boy or girl will amount to anything unless they have a powerful INCENTIVE. And it is these great, powerful inspirational lectures that have stirred thousands to greater efforts. On the fourth day.

Lorenzo Zwickey

on art, a lecture on home decoration and the choice of colors effectively illustrated with the use of crayon and a large easel. An electric lighting device adds much to the interest of Mr. Zwickey's art entertainment. Fifth day.

The first day lecturer is announced under a special heading.

BUY A SEASON TICKET

It reduces the cost more than half. Get it of the committee before the tent goes up. It will cost less now than later. Every member of your family should have one. And remember, besides the lectures, there is a whole host of musical numbers!

AT ANDOVER, BEGINING AUGUST 2nd

Hundred Ways to Make Money

This is the title of a book that has been much advertised. The other day both the author and publisher were in court joined in a petition in bankruptcy. There are a hundred ways, perhaps a thousand, of making money, but there is only ONE way of accumulating money, and that is by SAVING! Two men may make a thousand dollars each this week and next Saturday night one of them will have a bank book with a thousand dollar credit and the other fellow an automobile (and a headache). Two men in the same factory or workshop get their pay envelope with exactly the same amount of Money Saturday night. Monday morning one has added from two to five dollars to his savings account and the other faces the same hopeless problem of provision that he has faced all his life.

What are you doing with YOUR EARNINGS? The thing the wants to discuss with you is not the hundred ways of making money but the ONE way of saving money. (Copyrighted)

BURROWS NATIONAL BANK

CHARLES CHERRY

In the Famous Play, "The Mummy and The Humming-Bird"

In the adaptation of the celebrated dramatic success, "The Mummy and the Humming-bird," the Famous Players Film Co., introduces another famous Frohman star, Charles Cherry, to the motion picture public. The drama is one of those rare plays which permits an actor of real ability to display the full force of his histrionic power. "The Mummy and the Humming-bird" recounts the tragedy of a neglected wife who seeks amusement in the company of an unscrupulous Italian novelist, Signor D'Orelli, known as the humming-bird, who "seeks first-hand information of the experiences and emotions of which he writes. Unfortunately his next story is to concern the wrecking of a home. The reawakening of the unsuspecting husband, the revenge which a former victim of the wily schemer wrecks upon him, and the saving of the innocent woman are fraught with thrills and dramatic suspense in abundance.

BRIGGS REUNION

The third annual reunion of the Briggs families will be held at the home of Ed. Briggs, at Whitesville, Thursday, July 27th. All relatives are cordially invited to attend.
