FROM NEW YORK TO GENOA

The Difficulties of Travel in the Countries Involved n War

(By Daniel Bidwell)

It was in May when the Dante—call it Dontay—sailed from Jersey City. Fifteen days later she was in Cadiz harbor, whence she sailed, to dash for her home port, Genoa.

Two hundred miles west of Cadiz, while still on the broad waters of the Atlantic, she took the covers off twelve of her boats, lowered the boats from the high davits to the rails of the promenade and main decks, held two boat drills for passengers, and stowed provisions for five days in the lockers. Among the passengers were five singers from the Metropolitan Opera House Company of New York City and fifty-three members of the Russian Ballet Troupe, which had danced "The Pawn" in the same temple of art. You may also include two war writers, Fred Smith of the Providence Journal and Yours Truly. Another press representative was Alberto Torchiani, New York correspondent of La Tribuna of Rome.

The captain had thought to coal ship in the harbor of Cadiz, but the Spanish authorities thought otherwise. They were not convinced that the sale of coal to an armed merchantman was neutral. In the note of January 19, President Wilson and Secretary Lansing had, in substance, hinted that such a vessel was, in effect, an auxiliary cruiser, as to their relations to submarine craft, and this view was upheld in Cadiz. At midnight in the teeth of a stiff gale, the captain weighed anchor. He was apprehensive that continuance in the harbor might be construed as an overstay, and that his ship might be liable to internment. He had landed three members of the Grand Opera Company, who feared the sea trip to Genoa, because of the chance to encounter with an enemy submarine, and who are to gain the city by a tedious rail journey through Spain and the south of France. In the meantime the war writers had spent six hours in Cadiz. They had separated to multiply by two the chances of observation. On their return each found the other's opinion to coincide with his own: Cadiz was pro-German. Furthermore, each had been told, even by English town, that Spam was pro-German.

It was the King's birthday. It was a festa. Flags wree flying and the King's portrait was in the shops. But portraits of the Kaiser were more numerous, and more buttons and badges of the Kaiser, than of the King were on sale.

The war correspondents were told that the King's mother was Austrian, that the royal family, barring the English-born Queen, were pro-German, that the nobles and most of the rich coumoners were also pro-German, and so was the press; that business men desired German competition with English after the war.

They wree told that the King, Court and Nobles, further, had feeling against two of the allied nations in particular, France and Portugal, because these were Republics. And then, cumulative of all this, masses of Spaniards had a hereditary feeling against the Portugese. And there was a religious sympathy for the Austrian Emperor because he was a staunch Roman Catholic. Most of these facts were new to the war writers, and most are likely now to millions of readers at home.

The captain had thought to save some $10 or $12 a ton by purchase in Cadiz, for though coal is high in the Andalusian port it is still more altitudinous in Genoa, where bituminous is about $30 to $35 a ton. As for anthracite it rises some times to $52, $55 or $56 a ton. Strange prices obtain in some of the war-stricken lands.

Off Gibraltar the captain received a dispatch ordering him to excise the run to Naples. He was told to make the run to Genoa. To Malaga the track rout runs almost parallel with the coast line, but beyond Malaga it was seen that the ship was keeping in shore, following closely the land, hugging the curves. In fact the ship was steaming well inside the international three mile limit. Thus she was, at least in theory, immune from marine attack.

All up the coast of Spain, for a day and a night, the ship fitted the shore, close as paper to the wall. Whenever the land swung to the west the faithful ship swung her bow. When she came to the broad Bay of Valencia she put her helm a-starboard and turned westward. And so hour after hour were by, the craft nosing along the rocky coast of Catalonia and on to the northeast until she was sailing in French waters and no longer protected by the immunity of neutral Spain.

Now she struck the arc of a great circle and made a wild spurt at top speed, with full head of steam, with all boilers at maximum pressure. The sharpest eyes on the craft were in the crow's nest. An extra officer was on the bridge with powerful glasses. Two lookouts were on the forecastle deck and one no the fore castlehead.

At night side lights and mast head lights were doused. All inside lights were shaded. Passengers slept in their underwear or in complete day clothing. Some slept in deck chairs. Several placed their chairs near the life boats to which they were assigned.

At three in the morning the lights of Genoa were seen far ahead. In an hour the sky began to gray. The stars paled. By this time the giant heights began to loom and take shape. The sun was rising over the great mass behind the city. The high white buildings glistened and gleamed. At six the ship made fast at the Ponte Andea Donia.

We passed through the customs and made our way to the Hotel Stella and there, late at night, came the members of the

Events of Interest from the Seat of Government by the News Special Correspondent, J. E. Jones

TOO MUCH WAR

Washington, D. C., July 8.—It is not difficult to analyze the temper of Congress and officials high in the Government. The spirit of democracy is opposed to all this carnage of blood and the United States Congress always reluctantly yields to the pressure which makes new preparation necessary in the army and navy. There never have been such heavy appropriations in the history of the country; but all are agreed that the American Government and the American people remain unalterably opposed to militarism. The public treasury is overflowing with money, and industry is booming as it never has before. Heavy financial interests that are "playing the game" complacently ignore all suggestions that make for peace, and our industries as a rule have forgotten their conservation in grasping the opportunities of the hour. From a purely commercial viewpoint, it may be a fine thing while it lasts; but strikes and rumors of strikes; and industrial discontent, indicate that there are breakers ahead; and the American business men who listen to the warnings that are coming from their Government to "slow up," are most apt to have the least to regret when the "world aflame" burns itself out.

No One Wants to fight Mexico

The President of the United States assumed the responsibility of calling out the National Guard to reinforce the regular army in Mexico and along the border. Still the President disowns any desire to crush Mexico. Nobody evidently wants to fight Mexico, and still we have what is practically a condition of war. The attitude of Congressmen is one of the biggest puzzles that any newspaper correspondent ever was called upon to face. While the members have followed the old custom of "standing by the President," they appear to accept their part reluctantly. One man expressed the condition correctly when he said: "Wilson is doing just what Taft did with the Mexican situation, but Taft is criticising the President. There are no party divisions of consequence in Congress with reference to Mexico, but no one wants to fight and everyone wants to find fault. If the Administration has a Mexican policy then it is the only one in captivity, for it is a sure thing that everyone else is engaged principally in fault-finding; and ideas as to what the United States should do in Mexico are scarcer than hen's teeth in Greenland."

The Guaranty Legend

The very comforting words "Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1916," are rapidly disappearing from labeled merchandise. Manufacturers have been given an extension of time in which to use up their old labels, but the deceptive guaranty is being discontinued as rapidly as possible. The federal authorities have found that the public has been led to believe that the Government in some way approved of the food or drugs bearing this legend. As a matter of fact, in its operation, it has been found that the guaranty has been an absolutely dead letter so far as the accomplishment of any purpose was concerned.

Washington is Hot

The Weather Man has been treating Washington to its first taste of semi-tropical heat, with result that there is some talk on Capitol Hill as to when Congress should adjourn. Washington is good enough for any Congressman to live in when the weather behaves, and a good deal of sympathy wasted on "over-worked officials" usually represents a misdirected sentiment. But when Old Sol gets good and busy it is not at all strange that statesmen adjust their consciences to the belief that they are greatly needed at home in their districts—especially when it is an election year.

Patenting a Hole

What was once the "State Mint" of New York, has jumped into prominence as a great crop that is raised in many sections of the country, and one of the reasons for the increased demand is to supply the American sweet tooth with peppermint candy. A year and a half ago a couple of young college men who had been following the increasing demand for peppermint as candy, conceived the idea that if they could manufacture it in some way whereby it would possess a novel sales feature, that they would be able to create a big business. Following this idea to its conclusion they placed a hole in the center of the confection, and their joy at being able to secure a patent on the hole, was increased amazingly by the records of their sales office. The American people looked upon the new form of peppermint with such favor that they bought a millions dollars worth of what were called "Life Savers" in a single year. The story of mint is interesting. It was among the plants first recognized of value by the ancients; and many references are made to it in early literature. It found its expression in our own country in the medicines of the Indians. It has long been common in physicians prescriptions, in the manufacture of toilet articles, and in pharmaceutics. For a long time julops and jags were associated with the use of the mint, and spring lamb gamboled with it. But its use in building a candy cut around a hole has been one of its most marvelous accomplishments.

Breeds Shipping Habit

When the parcel post was inaugurated one of the old express companies liquated and went out of business. Nearly all the companies gave indications of distress. But their recent financial reports indicate that the parcel post has bred the shipping habit among people of the United States, and the result has been that the express companies have been getting their full share of business. Parcel Post rates have been ridiculously low in many instances, but on long hauls where the greatest profit results, the Government rates have been so high that the business has gone largely to the express companies. Of course, no one would ever suspect that the express people had anything to do with creating such a condition—it would be very unkind to suggest the thought. However, the natural thing has happened in that the express companies have received their full share of the increased business. They are again able to poke up their heads and enjoy the benefits of a new lease of life. And the American public is inclined to watch them, lest they misbehave as they have in the past.

His Majesty—the Mosquito

Havana, Cuba, became one of the most attractive points of the West Indies when it was "renovated" under the direction of Colonel Gorgas. The same intelligent comprehension of the needs of sanitation which Gorgas applied to the Panama Zone, made the canal a possibility. Two-thirds of all the Frenchmen and laborers, who endeavored to build the old canal died from mosquito bites—that is to say they died from yellow fever and other diseases that are carried on the stings of mosquitos. The Panama Canal Zone has become one of the most healthful spots in the world since the mosquitos have been exterminated. And now the people of New Jersey, New York and Connecticut have arrived at the conclusion that the New Jersey mosquito should no longer be treated as a joke. The east winds have been carrying the little pests across the Hudson for many years and the marshes of Jamaica Bay, Brooklyn and Long Island have so menaced public health that New York City is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in filling them in and in digging drainage ditches. New Jersey and Connecticut are also taking vigorous steps in the same direction.

The Kaiser's Regret

One of the most prominent Germans in America, who has not the temerity to publish his own information, recently told the correspondent of this paper, that while he was in Germany two or three months ago, he had the opportunity to talk with some of the leading officials of the Empire. One of them told him of the sentiment of the Kaiser. The latter is reported to have said that he did not care very much about the opinion of the United States with reference to the war, but he expressed himself as deeply hurt because of the attitude and public utterances of Colonel Roosevelt. As one is invariably misunderstood when talking to the Germans, the reader is left to draw his own deductions with reference to the Kaiser's viewpoint.

CONCERNING SUFFRAGE

Do men want to vote? Just ten per cent. of the registered voters proved it at the presidential primaries in Vermont.

The other day a court of common pleas granted ninety-eight divorces in two days.—Happening as it did in Philadelphia it cannot be charged to the debit of woman suffrage.

Three hundred delegates representing the seven thousand travelling men of Indiana, at a recent convention in Kokomo endorsed votes for women without a murmur in opposition.

The Methodist General Conference adopted a woman suffrage resolution with but six dissenting votes. The suffragists owe much to the Methodist church for hearty support in suffrage campaigns all over the country. The adoption of the resolution by the conference but puts the official stamp on a current policy.

Do women use the vote when they have it? They certainly do in Los Angeles and Berkeley, if J. Stitt Wilson, former mayor of Berkeley is an authority.

In a recent interview in Iowa he said that last year in Los Angeles County 182,203 men registered and 148,101 women. At an election in Berkeley he declared that over half the vote had been cast by women. So impressed was Mr. Wilson with the success of woman suffrage in California that he has been speaking for suffrage in the Iowa suffrage campaign.

The editor of the SanFrancisco Clarion, the official organ of the trades council of that city, is a native of Iowa and learned his trade in Iowa but in California he learned from observation the advantage to labor of doubling its power by having both the labor man and his wife voting citizens.

In the Clarion of May 5 he sent a rousing message to trade unionists of Iowa and advised "every mother's son of them" to vote for the suffrage amendment if they wished to hasten the day of industrial justice.

There is one person who says that she cannot understand why men should object to a woman's voting if she wants to; that in her country men offered suffrage to the women and hurled them into politics by making political duties attractive. It is the wife of the Norwegian ambassador in Washington who made the statement and she added that in Norway women has served successfully in every civic capacity and with no detriment to home duties.

A GENERAL BUILDER

Mothers and Daughters of New York.

Orchard Park, N. Y.—"I have had an experience with 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription.' The 'Prescription' has been used more than the other. I began taking it because mother had used it and was benefited. It built me up and was of a strengthening nature. It acted also as a general builder and I could do my work more easily."—Mrs. F. A. TERVETT, State Road, Orchard Park, N. Y.

An affection confined to women must have its cause in the womanly nature. There is no doubt that a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organs is in general responsible for feminine nervousness and an undermined constitution.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps and languorous looks tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source.

Get the "Prescription" to-day—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily. In sickness and health—send for the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A book of 1008 pages. Send 31 dimes to Doctor Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

A WORD TO CHAUTAUQUA

Season Ticket Holders

And to Those Who Haven't Bought Season Tickets, but Probably Will.

THE Chautauqua will be with us for five days.

It will be held in a large waterproof tent, seating a thousand or more, and will thus be in the out of doors, and the place will be the coolest spot in town.

Every effort will be made by the local committee in charge to make the week one of extreme profit and enjoyment to Chautauqua patrons, and they hope these splendid numbers which are coming will be heard by every person in the community.

Programs will be held afternoons and evenings of the five days, the afternoon programs beginning promptly at 2:30 o'clock, the evening programs at 7:30. There will thus be ten programs in all, and in some of them two attractions will be heard.

A Junior Chautauqua Too.

The Junior Chautauqua will be under the care of a trained play director from New York City and will meet in the forenoons each week day of the Chautauqua. Every boy and girl should have a season ticket and enjoy the full delights of the Junior Chautauqua. They will learn many new games, participate in athletic events, and the younger folks will have a story telling hour each day. Other special features have been planned.

A beautiful souvenir program booklet has been issued which gives all the particulars. It shows pictures of the talent, with descriptions of each attraction; gives the program for each day and prices of tickets. The season tickets reduce the cost more than a half. They are sold by the local committee and will go up in price when the tent is raised. If you haven't yours, get them today and get in this great community procession, and you'll say it's the best five days you ever spent.
