Suffrage Department

CONDUCTED BY
Mrs. Anna Cadogan Etz
Upstate Woman Suffrage Press

In Illinois the press estimated that nearly 700,000 women voted; that the women cast almost 40 per cent. of the vote. Since there are more men than women in the state, the question as to whether or no women will vote if they have the right may be considered closed for all time.

The election has come and gone and the public now knows — or ought to — that the woman-vote can't be delivered as a solid vote for any creed or party. In South ern Illinois the women voted for Wilson and in the North for Hughes. In Southern California they voted for Hughes and in the North for Wilson. They voted as human beings, according to their supposed interests. Votes for women does not introduce the sex-line in politics.

The first press reports of election put South Dakota on the suffrage map by a majority of about ten thousand. But the rejoicing among the suffragists soon turned to apprehension as the tide turned and South Dakota passed from the status of a victory to a folorn hope. The South Dakota suffrage association when last heard from was still claiming the state.

From California comes the report that home-making pursued it uninterrupted course even on November 7; that women as a class either voted in the early afternoon or went to the polls with their husbands before supper. The idea of a husband and wife walking over to the polling place together to double the voice of the [illegible]

In Nebraska on election day [illegible] the estimates of naturalization officials came true, more than 1500 foreign-born residents of one county who cannot write the English language voted by virtue of having taken out their first naturalization papers which they were obliged to sign with a cross. The state refused in 1914 to give the vote to its educated, native-born women citizens. Nebraska's taste in electors seems to be poor.

[illegible] poll [illegible] for Congress by [illegible] revealed 370 [illegible] intended to vote for the Federal Suffrage Amendment if they got the chance; it revealed but 30 candidates who were willing to come out squarely and say they wouldn't; it revealed a general knowledge in regard to the subject of woman suffrage never possessed by aspiring Congressional candidates before.

In the light of these returns how is it possible, ask the suffragists, to keep the Susan B. Anthony amendment from passing the coming Congress?

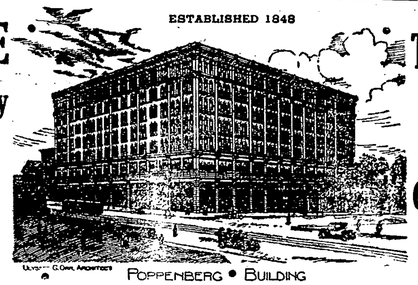
FREE Delivery Into Your Home



TERMS to Suit Your Convenience

Louis Cohn, Architect — POPPENBERG • BUILDING — Main, Carlton & Washington Streets

This Building Contains the Largest Piano Sales Floors, and the Largest Stock of Pianos to be Found in the Wide Wide World

In London, Berlin or Paris there is nothing to compare with them. In Chicago, where they are used to doing big things in a big way, there is nothing anywhere nearly so large. In our own "Little old New York" there are no TWO PIANO SALES FLOORS the equal of our FIRST or MAIN FLOOR, ALONE.

When you enter it you will see more pianos than you have ever seen before under one roof, or ever will see again, in all likelihood. Customers are given more privileges and more advantages is the reason for our success.

This 88-Note Player $175

We conduct our business of selling pianos on a scientifically organized selling plan that eliminates to the greatest degree any and all expenses that increase the retail price of the pianos. Our selling plan does everything to lessen the cost of the piano. We apply the rules of modern business efficiency, plus a knowledge of finance, plus common sense. To begin with, we cut out high-priced location expense, our address makes this evident to all who know real estate values in Buffalo. We cut out rental expense. We own our own building and pay no rent. We cut out financing expense. We finance our own business. We cut out buying expense. We do our own buying and pay spot cash when we can save a dollar for our customers. We cut out middlemen or jobbers' profits. We buy direct from the manufacturer in car load lots. Our customers gain by that. We cut out high salary salesmen's expenses. We do our own selling, we don't pay anyone a lot of money to talk you into buying a piano; our prices sell our pianos, you know what these pianos are; a lot of polished talk won't make them any better for you. We cut out the commissions. We appreciate the business when it is sent to us, but not at the cost of our customers. No teacher, friend? nor anyone makes a dollar on you. We cut out a dozen minor expenses, such as carting, storage, garage, collection, etc. That is, we don't pay anyone a profit to do these things for us, we own our own garage, sell, truck, do our own storing and have no expensive horde of collectors. We sell pianos anywhere in the United States and we will bear the expense of the railroad fare to Buffalo and return (within 150 miles), of any one who purchases one of our instruments.
