While Your Coal-Hod has been shrinking KEROSENE has stayed the same

Coal has been going up—and up!

The papers say it may jump still higher before the winter is over.

Go light on coal—burn

SOCONY KEROSENE

and cut the high cost of heating.

A gallon of Socony Kerosene costs from 10 to 15 cents. Burned in a Perfection Oil Heater it will warm any ordinary room for 10 full hours.

10 or 15 cents worth of coal is about half a scuttle-full—and there's small comfort in a scuttle of coal these days.

A Perfection is on when you need it and off when the weather turns mild. You carry it upstairs and downstairs, wherever you want it.

But the furnace stays in the cellar, steadily burning up the dollars.

Get out your old oil heater, or order a new one today. See that the grocer delivers Socony Kerosene and no other, because Socony is the Standard Oil Company's best grade of refined oil. Look for the Socony Sign in his window.

Suffrage Department

CONDUCTED BY
Mrs. Anna Cadogan Etz
Uptate Woman Suffrage Press

In Utah election day stepped into office the first non-Mormon Governor ever elected in the state—and as at least three women members of the legislature.

The demand in America for the vote, according to Rabindranath Tagore, who took the Nobel poetry prize and who is now touring this country, is but part and parcel of the movement that has made the women in China protest at their bandaged feet and the women of his country refuse longer to mount the funeral pyre on their dead husbands.

In the State of Washington there are but 28 women in every one hundred adults, according to the census of 1910. Yet in Seattle this fall the registration was over 60 per cent female; just a straw showing whether or no women do want to vote.

"Despite the popular rejection of enfranchisement in two states," comments the editor of the New Republic on how the election affected the status of woman suffrage, "no politician is left any longer with any doubt as to the crucial national importance of the woman's vote. No Congressman at Washington who has the slightest regard for his party can remain unanswerable to the suffragists."

The Consumers' League has launched a campaign to secure the eight-hour day for women in the forty-four states in which legislatures meet this winter.

Be it noted: the only states which have an eight-hour law for women are the equal suffrage states of Washington, California, Arizona and Wyoming. The law of California is the one selected by the Consumers' League as a model.

Down in Texas, so runs the story in The Survey, over a score of Mexicans testified in a federal court to the fact of receiving money for voting. Only one could give his evidence in English. Some did not know whether they were born in Mexico or the United States. None of them had ever declared the intention of becoming a citizen of this country. The suit revealed that at an election at which members of Congress were elected all candidates had been assessed a handsome sum to get out the Mexican vote.

It is interesting to note that, at the time this story was told in The Survey, registration officers in various parts of the country were refusing to allow women to register as voters, although these women had moved from states which had given them the right to vote, and the Constitution of the United states clearly intends to protect citizens from the denial of fundamental rights in one state that belonged to them in another.

The following case is but one of many occurring daily in Andover. It is an easy matter to verify it. You cannot ask for better proof of merits. F. W. Stratton, Main St., Andover, says: "I endured all kinds of hardships and exposure in the Civil War and I think that is what affected my kidneys, causing backache. Quite often when sitting down in a chair and then trying to get up, a sharp pain caught me in the small of my back and nearly doubled me up. I had to arise two or three times at night to pass the kidney secretions and there was a burning sensation accompanying the passages. The secretions were highly colored, too. I had dizzy spells when I came near falling. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and four boxes, procured from the Brundage Drug Co., gave me wonderful relief."

FACE TO FACE WITH A TIGER.

And a Curious Escape From the Very Jaws of Death.

It is probable that no man's life was ever saved to him by a more curious circumstance than that attending the experience of a captain of the Bengal lancers, a famous regiment of Indian troops. He had been on a visit to a civilian friend in Rajputana and went out for a walk in the country about sunset.

After proceeding four or five miles he found himself in a narrow path on the side of a steep hill. The path was a mere ledge in the rock, with a deep chasm on one side and a wall of solid rock on the other. It was not a pleasant place in which to come face to face with a big tiger, but that is precisely what happened to the captain.

It was too late to withdraw, so he determined to brave it out. The animal had evidently been asleep, for it continued for a few moments to lick itself into full wakefulness. The captain stood still, with his eyes fixed on the beast. Presently the tiger took a few steps forward and made a dash at him. Luckily its teeth seized him by the flap of his coat, just over the breast, so that he was not hurt by the blow.

Then the captain had a chance to appreciate the feelings of a mouse when it is shaken by a cat. The tiger shook him until his senses left him. Perhaps it was well they did leave him, for the beast held him over the deep chasm and a fall would have been as fatal as the animal's onslaught.

When the captain regained consciousness a few minutes later he found himself lying flat on his back, with his feet dangling over the precipice. He opened his eyes, only to see the sky above him. He dared not move, for the tiger might be close at his elbow, so he shut his eyes and remained motionless.

Then he thought he heard a strange noise at a little distance, a sound as of somebody sneezing. His first thought was that some one had come to his rescue and beaten the tiger off, but this was proved to be wrong by low, disagreeable tigerish growls mingled with the sneezing.

The truth then dawned upon the soldier. In shaking him the tiger had caused his snuffbox to fly open out of his waistcoat pocket and had received the contents full in the face.

The Round Earth.

The globular form of the earth was not discovered, but simply rediscovered, by the moderns. The globular form of the earth was taught by Thales of Miletus as early as 640 B. C., and Pythagoras, about 500 B. C., demonstrated from the varying altitudes of the stars that the earth must be round. Aristarchus of Samos maintained as long as 280 B. C. that the earth was globe shaped and turned on its own axis.

So far as we moderns are concerned the rotundity of the earth was first proved beyond all cavil by the great voyage of circumnavigation by Magellan in 1522.

Sign Boards on the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams

Upon the road that seems the long way 'round (but which in its turning touches at every neighbor's house) we shall find our true goals more quickly.

The blue bird of happiness, Nomrads, which we go seeking afar, is nine along highlands and some along lowlands, shall be found, when we turn again homeward, singing, upon our own rose-trees. For Happiness shall always be a condition of the heart of us.

By way of loss, we find; by way of giving, we get; and out of the suffering of the frail character is developed.

Let those who think a flower-bordered way, free from stress and opposition, would be fine for life, remember the sayings of the Arabs:

"It is all sunshine that makes the desert."

The Yoke, the Cross, the Cup, sinister symbols to the unvisioned, are by the favering of God made to lift us up.

Affection always comes high, necessity. Anything which has relation to the soul of us may not be achieved lightly. Love is the costliest of all things for it gives itself only in exchange for life.

A great many people would be glad to wake up some morning and find the kingdom of heaven a fact brought about by some magical processes. It may not so be brought about. Service and sacrifice have been made the means of the new earth or God's plan. The kingdom is delayed by the refusal of people to perform the necessary work. We know tilling of fields must precede sowing, and sowing is the first step toward reaping. Between sowing and reaping there is cultivation.

It is so in reference to spiritual condition. These must be a service and sacrifice before human souls shall be raised to spiritual understanding. Material conditions would not be a kingdom of heaven, although every person lived in a marble house and ate from golden dishes and dressed in scarlet and purple; if the hearts were unchanged there would be no kingdom which is a condition of Righteous and Peace and Holy Joy.

I believe in a better industrial, an cultural world, better homes, better wages, better living conditions. But there must be right hearts first. For we must seek first the kingdom of God. The Master is right. The kingdom of heaven is within us. The social relations will be necessarily right.

The only way by which the human race may be lifted up to the proper eminence is to lever them up with love.

If we do not think so—try it.

And God is always close by with His mighty arm—where love is.

THE ORKNEY ISLANDS.

Britain's Great Naval Base Came to Scotland as a Dowry.

No other territory in the British empire has a more tragic significance to Englishmen than the Orkney islands, off whose shores Earl Kitchener lost his life when the cruiser Hampshire was sunk.

These islands, ninety in number, of which only thirty are inhabited, are separated from the mainland of Scotland by the Pentland firth from six and a half to eight miles wide. They were selected as England's North sea naval base not only on account of their proximity to the field of operations, but on account of their semi-isolation and the advantages of the superb harbor of Stromness, in the largest island of the group, Pomona, which has an area of 200 square miles.

While the original inhabitants of the islands were Picts, whose round towers and chambered mounds are among the interesting ruins of this region, the Norse pirates secured a foothold here during the early centuries of the Christian era and carried on their depredations against all navigators of the North sea. In the last quarter of the [illegible] century Harold Haarfager put an end to the rule of the pirates and added both the Orkneys and the Shetland islands to Norway's domain.

In 1468 the Orkneys came under the sway of the Scottish crown. Christian I. of Denmark giving them as security for his daughter's dowry when she became the bride of James III. As the dowry has never paid, the islands have remained a part of Scotland's domain ever since.

The Orkneys, which are the Orcades of classic literature, furnished the setting for many of the episodes in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Pirate," the character of that romance being John Gow, the notorious freebooter born in Stromness and captured off the islands in 1725. Another literary association of the Orkneys and one of especial interest to Americans centers in Shapinshay, the birthplace of William Irving, father of Washington Irving.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.
