Tidbits From Our School

The large red building on Center Street opened its doors admitting the eager throng of pupils Tuesday morning, Sept. 5th. Eighty-six were seated in the Study Hall the first day, and among the crowd only twenty-two boys were to be seen.

• • •

Tuesday was spent in the registration of pupils and the planning of the program for the first semester.

All were glad to welome Mr. Emmett Dawson, a former pupil and exgraduate of A. H. S., as the new physical instructor for the coming year.

• • •

Positions and enrollment in the grades are as follows:

Grade	Enrollment	Instructor
First,	22	Miss Nellie Dunn
Second	18	Miss Mary Snyder
Third,	17	Miss Mary Snyder
Fourth,	24	Miss Ruth Taylor
Fifth,	16	Miss Nora McAndrew
Sixth,	20	Miss Nora McAndrew
Seventh,	23	Miss Annette Taylor
Eighth,	17	Mrs. Edith Thorne

Enrollment in High School totaled seventy-one. Principal Levi R. Tubbs teaches mathematics and science; Miss Sara E. Jones teaches English, literature and Spanish, and Miss Elizabeth Latimer, history, Latin and French.

• • •

Two school officers were elected by the students body. Harry Joyce is to serve as Editor-in-Chief of the "Tidbits" for the first semester, also Richard Harder for school secretary for the year.

• • •

The back seats were reserved for the dignified Seniors, and the prospects show that there will be at least twelve. This is an unusually large class, and we hope that each will have success.

• • •

Several rooms have been supplied with new-style seats and many comments pro and con may be head concerning them. Come up and try them! ! !

• • •

Plans are being made for one hour a week to be devoted to religious education and all are interested in the outcome.

ANDOVER ENTERTAINMENT COURSE

Splendid List of Attractions Have Been Booked for This Season. Course Finely Balanced.

The following letter from the Royal Lyceum Bureau gives News readers a good idea of what is in store for them the coming season. No better entertainment course is possible than the one chosen this year by the I. O. O. F. committee. If there was a better course the committee would have secured it.

A LETTER FOR EVERY CITIZEN

303. E. Washington Street,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Citizens of Andover, N. Y.:

Hello Folks! Yes, we're going To be with you all this season. Aren't you glad? You bet WE are, for your committee has selected a great course of attractions and we feel sure that you are not only going to enjoy them all, but that you and your town will get a great deal of real good out of it.

It is with that end in view that the committe has been public spirited enough to take on for all you other folks of Andover the actual working end of this community work. They have "seen their duty and they done it," to speak in the phraseology of some of our friends, and now we are wondering how the rest of you will back up — not down — this civic prided committee. No, we'll take that back! We're not really wondering, because we know that you know what we all know — and that is — that for your own pleasure and fun, your own improvement, your own education, and for the general betterment of your town we are going to boost the Lyceum Course this year — you are going to give your support and aid to the progressive committee which is giving you this opportunity.

In a very short time now your committee will issue the season tickets for the course. Perhaps they will ask you to help in the sale of them, or perhaps you will be asked to take one. How nice it would make them feel if right now you" would get your quartette — with some member of that committee and say "I'm with you! I believe in the opportunity you are giving me to do something worth while for my community. I've got two strong shoulders and can help push that wheel along a little way. What can I do for you?" We know what that means to a progressive committee in a progressive town. It means that your neighbors will soon sit up and take notice and ask "How do they do it?" Then YOU can tell them can't you?

Now that we have had such a nice introduction and talked things over in this way we both feel in good shape to tackle our respective ends of this proposition, don't we?

Wishing you all great success for yourselves we'll say "Goodbye" for the present. But keep your eyes open for some more news from us in the near future, and as the boys in Service used to say "you'll like it!"

Remember "Boost and the World Boosts With You — Knock and You Knock Alone."

Very truly yours,
ROYAL LYCEUM BUREAU.

Coming Attractions

A full play company carrying all of their scenery, properties, costumes, etc., playing the full three-act comedy which had such a successful run in New York City, "The Gypsy Trail," a cast of seasoned artists every member of which is a college graduate, having had legitimate stage experience, and the Little Theatre Party itself having been proclaimed a "Great Lyceum Company" such is brief is the first attraction of our Lyceum Course. The play "The Gypsy Trail" carries the audience an evening of laughter and good, clean, wholesome comedy interrupted for short intervals by some of the most beautiful poetic scenes ever written in American drama. The Gypsy love of the romantic, set in the situation of comedy as pictured in this play is the one feature that makes "The Gypsy Trail" a sure fire hit everywhere it is presented.

What To Remember: — Little Theatre Party, Nov. 20th, at the Auditorium.

C. O. More

A successful lecturer with a lecture of success comes to us on Dec. 12th, the same being Clarence Oliver Moore. This successful lecture is called "Heads," in which Mr. Moore deals with the vital subject of getting ahead. In order to get ahead one must get a head. Mr. Moore is the man who may well speak on a subject of this kind, for the success has been phenominal. To-day he is the young lawyer in New York, representing the largest bank in the world, whenever a speaker is required to put forth the policy of the bank and appearing in its hardest legal cases. And it wasn't many years ago that Mr. Moore was representing his university in every debate and public speaking contest and never once took any but first place. So the lecture by this great man who knows sucess and has gotten ahead with a head should be of great interest to all.

What to Remember: — Clarence Oliver Moore, Dec. 12th, at the Auditorium.

American Glee Club

One of the most popular forms of entertainment is that provided by a combination of male voices. The American Glee Club appearing as the third number of our course, is composed of four young men who are thoro musicians and conscientious entertainers giving their best to an always appreciative public. As the name of this combination signifies, it is more than a mere quartette — it is an unusual instrumental organization as well. Each is an artist on the saxephone, each is a xylophonist, making popular attraction on an instrument that is less common than a good many others, three are pianists, and one is a reader and impersonator. There is a base soloist who is second to none in quartette work, a first tenor and a baritone soloist, and the ensemble work, ranging from opera selections to popular and humorous numbers makes the American Glee Club an attraction which is sure to please the taste of the most critical and ardent music lovers. It is the kind of a company that has appeared several consecutive years in the same town, and is welcomed a year after year enthusiastically.

What To Remember: — American Glee Clug, Feb. 8th, at the Auditorium.

Warren Colston Company

In a unique program of character tudies, the Warren Colston Company which is to appear as the last number of the Lyceum course, is presenting a complete artistic production. After five years of truly unusual progress, Mr. Colston has been stamped as a great character interpreter — not simply an impersonator, but an interpreter who lives his characters. Interpreting their heart and soul, he presents the character and its emotions, both humorous and serious to always appreciative listeners. The Colston Company is carrying a complete production — presenting a three-part program. Part one consists of "The Family Album." The Book itself is represented on the stage, the character is introduced the book opens, and there appear the characters such as we have often seen in our Grandmother's Album. Part two consists of a one-act play, and Part three introduces us to some of the world's greatest men Shylock from "The Merchant of Venice," David Harum, Abraham Lincoln, and other famous characters, their habits and eccentricities.

What To Remember: — Warren Colston Company, Feb. 26th, at the Auditorium.

HORNELL SUFFERING WITH INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Several cases of infantile paralysis have recently developed at Hornell. Lewis, the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coogan, of that city died at their home, Sunday morning.

Lewis was three and one-half years old, a bright, active little fellow. The disease was first pronounced spinal meningitis, but a couple of physicians pronounced it infantile paralysis.

THRU SOUTHERN FRANCE

When we left Paris we traveled about 400 miles straight south to the city of Nimes. For the first 200 miles there is no very wonderful scenery. It was harvest time and the wheat and barley were being gathered in. Except for the fact that the grain fields are much smaller than in our own Eastern States, there was no great difference between what we saw on this day of travel, and what we might see on a journey of equal length at home. We passed thru the important industrial city of Lyon and then the scenes of interest began. A magnificant rolling country with every field a garden, now filled with ripened grain. The rivers are not large, but they wind their way along in true serpentine fashion. Nearly every field had its workers, at least half of them being women of the stalwart peasant type. We saw a large number of binders, made, of course, in the U. S. A. Very few horses could be seen. Practically all of the binders were drawn by one or more yokes of oxen. In a number of instances a yoke of oxen was next to the binder and in front of the oxen was a single horse led by a man on foot. With one man manipulating the binder and another driving the horse there seemed to be a waste of labor. But if labor is wasted, it is about the only thing of which that statement could be made. No grain is wasted. You will recall Millet's art masterpiece, "The Gleaners." We saw the original in the Louvre in Paris. But one must go to the country to really understand this painting or the other work of Millet. This great artist set forth in pictures the life of the French peasant as Burns set forth in immortal poetry the life of the poorer people of Scotland. We saw a gleaner at work. He was walking thru the field after the binder had passed, pulling out single stalks of grain. One cannot help admiring the industry and frugality of such people whom necessity has driven to be saving to the extreme.

In many cases the grain is all cut by hand. In other numerous instances a mower is used to cut the grain and then it is bound up by hand. We saw some threshing and it was all of the primitive type, a horse being driven round and round a circle to turn a "thresher," which resembles a corn-grinding machine of the American Indians.

Not far north of Lyon, the olive trees began to appear. It was near here that we were served our first French ripe olives. Near evening we passed thru the ancient, historic city of Avignon. Many centuries ago an emperor from northern Europe descended upon Rome and made the Pope a prisoner. He was taken to Avignon and shut up in a castle called to-day, "The Pope's Castle." We could see it very plainly from the train. For seventy years this castle was the residence of the Pope, and the headquarters of the Roman Catholic Church. This is called in general history, "The Bablonian Captivity of the Papacy." In Avignon there are some Roman ruins which date from the first or second century of the Christian era.

We reached Nimes about 10 o'clock. Our hotel there was a model of comfort and cleanliness at a reasonable price. Nimes is the largest Protestant city in France, about one-fourth of her eighty thousand inhabitants being Huguenots.

In the morning we started out to see the four points of major interest in Nimes. In the very center of the city stands the best preserved Roman amphitheater in the world. Supports have been added to some of the columns, but most of it is unchanged. We saw the tunnels thru which the victims passed into the arena and the section for the lions. France is to be complimented for the way in which this monument of the distant past has been taken care of, but we learned with regret, that on the 14th of July a bull-fight, witnessed by thousands, took place in the deep pit of the amphitheatre. Nimes is near the Spanish border and the Spanish influence is strong. This Forum seats 25,000 at the present time.

From the arena we passed to the most wonderful Roman construction in France — the Maison Carree — a small Roman pantheon. Here the illustrious Roman dead of this part of their vast empire were buried. The sculptured frieze outside of this building are in their original state. The building is beautifully simple in design and decoration. A small part of the wall which the Romans built around this tomb of the dead is still to be seen. A high iron fence has been placed around it all, to keep out spectators, except under proper guidance. Modern buildings, mostly business houses, completely surround it. We went next to the beautiful La Fontaine Park where many Roman statues and urns are to be seen. Louis XIV, who built Versailles, ordered the construction of this park. In the center of it stands the battered ruins of a one-time stately temple to Diana of the Ephesians.

Finally, we climed the hill and saw the Roman watchtower where the approach of an enemy could be seen for many miles. These four Roman ruins so far away from Rome as Nimes, speak eloquently of the immensity of the old Roman empire. Around the ruins of the empire two nations — France and Italy—builded their kingdoms, and one of them a Republic. Like the people of Paris, the citizens of Nimes would find it difficult to forget the past.

We left Nimes in the afternoon and journeyed to Marseilles, a distance of only 78 miles. Marseilles is the second largest city of France, with a population of about 700,000. It is perhaps the most important seaport of the Mediterranean. We did not enjoy our visit here except for the great National Colonial Exposition. All is business, and hurry and rush. The taxis are of the modern type and we saw many large automobiles, very different from what we saw in Paris. We would not advise anyone to take the time to visit Marseilles. Any of our larger American cities will give one the same impression.

The Colonial Exposition was really

NAMES "PLAIN BILL" FOR PRESIDENT

Correspondent Says Andover Has Most Business-like and Untiring Officials Around Here.

Mr. Editor:

There are hobbies and hobbies, and "Plain Bill" seems to have one, all by himself. How to run the traffic of this village is his "big one."

Maybe he knows all about it and then he may not. But he seems to want to bluff it thru. For the love of Mike, "Bill" give us something in the line of a change of subject.

In the last issue of The News "Plain Bill" took advantage of an automobile incident to give the "city dads" another wipe. Why keep harping always on one string? For goodness sake, Bill, give us a change of performance. You are becoming monotonous.

It is the consensus of opinion, as near as I can find out, that very few villages in the state can boast of a more business-like and more untiring set of officials than the present Village Board of Trustees. Of course they make mistakes, but let him that lives in a glass house beware of throwing stones, sometimes mud. These officials are spending time and some of their own money to improve our streets and have shown an unselfish interest in all affairs of our village.

But if we want a perfect administration of village affairs we would suggest that "Plain Bill" be nominated for village president, but we fear it would be a practical impossibility to find a running mate for him outside of the "Pearly Gates." "Bill" is the guy who seems to "know it all."

Let the people think.

TWO ANDOVER COUPLES SPLIT BY LEGAL DECREE

Hornell, Sept. 10. — Four Andover people are now as free as the air. Made so by Supreme Court Justice Brown at Belmont. George Gleason was granted a final decree of divorce from his wife, Lou Gleason.

Anna M. Page, of Andover, was also granted a final decree of divorce from her husband, Claude E. Page. The decree permits the plaintiffs to immediately marry again, while the defendants in both actions are enjoined from remarrying again during the lifetime of the plaintiffs.

MILLIKEN — ELLISON

The marriage of Mr. Theodore Milliken to Miss Anna C. Ellison, both of Belmont, N. Y., took place Sunday, September 10th, 1922, at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage, in Andover, the Rev. W. H. Smith officiating. The witnesses were Mr. Francis Milliken, brother of the groom, and Mrs. Mabel Moyer, sister of the bride.

The young couple will make their home in Belmont.

TAKING OFF BEST PASSENGER TRAINS

Erie Discontinued Thru Trains 1000 and 1001 Tuesday, Restoring Local Trains 24 and 241.

Hornell, Sept. 12. — The Erie's crack-thru passenger trains, Nos. 1000 and 1001 known as the Jamestown express, were discontinued Tuesday morning. These thru trains have run between Jamestown and New York City.

Two local trains, however, were restored on the Allegany Division, trains Nos. 24 going east at 9:15 and 541 going west at 8:07.

No. 24 will operate between Jamestown and Hornell reaching that city at 10:10 a. m. No. 541 will be made up at Hornell and runs over the Allegany Division. No. 541 will leave Hornell at 7:30 p. m.

This new schedule took effect Tuesday morning. Trains 1000 and 1001 had the fastest schedule between Jamestown and New York of any of the Erie passenger trains. Much inconvenience to the traveling public will be occasioned for a few days by this change.

MOTHERS BY PROXY

If the general public, and especially the people of the cities, knew more about milk production, its value as a food, and the importance of proper methods of production and distribution probably vastly more milk would be used and a higher quality asked for. To bring out these points the State Department of Health is circulating a very interesting report, entitled "Mothers by Proxy" which will be given at the Auditorium, Saturday evening, Sept. 16th.

The picture shows the methods of producing and handling first class milk and incidentally gives a side-light on its uses and the importance of high quality milk especially in infant feeding. It is rich in really beautiful scenes of farm life and dairy operations. It is especially interesting to the city dweller who often has very little concepion of the business end of dairying and even many farmers will profit by seeing these most attractive pictures of the most up-to-date dairy methods and processes.

It is very interesting to note how the movie is being more and more utilized for showing the interesting phases of everyday life. The managers of the live theatres are introducing variety into their program by including such educational pictures as this for they are quite as interesting as most of the every-day commercial films, and at the same time they teach a real lesson and please the audience. The State Department of Health has many excellent pictures of this character and we are fortunate in having them included in the program of the Auditorium.

DATES CLAIMED

The annual Baptist Fair and chicken-pie supper will be held this year on Dec. 5th.

ERIE IN "DUTCH" AT HORNELL

Peeved Because of Lack of Sympathy With Them, Road Threatens to Move Offices to Buffalo.

Hornell, N. Y., Sept. 11. — The Erie regional offices in Hornell are to move to Buffalo at once, it was announced at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Manager Robert E. Woodruff. The accounting bureau is included and the transfer is to be effected within a week.

The building in which the offices are housed at Loder and Center Streets, is to be used by the Erie as living quarters for its shop-workers. In making the announcement this afternoon, Mr. Woodruff stated that already the Erie had men scouting around Buffalo seeking quarters for the offices.

The work of refitting the building will be started immediately and certain contracts will probably be made this afternoon. As soon as the transfer was decided upon to-day, Mr. Woodruff called his staff together and began making plans for the moving of the office force.

Every bit of business transacted by the Erie Railroad is done out of this office which it is purposed to move to Buffalo. That is, their business covering the following divisions, Buffalo, Allegany, Susquehanna, Tioga, Bradford and Buffalo and Southwestern.

The Erie reginal offices here are located in what was formerly the York Hotel and prior to that the Osborne Hotel. It was fitted for office purposes at a cost of nearly $100.000. All of the accounting is done here for the Erie and the office is included in the removal.

The announcement coming with the knowledge that the Erie, up until this afternoon, had not so much as an eight by eight room rented or bought in Buffalo wherein to move the vast amount of paraphernalia and place scores of clerks to work is unusual. And the fact that they make this announcement and will remove the well regulated office to Buffalo at once in view of these conditions was not viewed with favor thruout the city to-night.

MAINE DEMOCRATS MAKE BIG GAIN

Returns from the Maine Election Show Enormous Loss by Republicans and Gain by Democrats

Portland, Me., Sept. 11. — Senator Frederick Hale, Republican and Governor Percival P. Baster, Republican, were elected in Maine to-day by majorities falling decidedly below those given Republican candidates in 1920. The Democratic vote in the three quarters of the state was nearly 5,000 ahead of that of two years ago, while the Republican vote fell off by 22,000 from that of the presidential year.

Returns from 484 election precincts representing 426 cities and towns gave for Senator:

Hale, (R)	66,260
Curtis, (D)	47,627
For Governor
Baxter, (R)	68,173
