OVER-AND-OVER

The first assembly of the Andover High School was held Friday morning, September 20th, in the High School Auditorium. The eighth and seventh grades joined the assembly. They will continue to attend and take par. in these weekly assemblies with the four classes of the high school.

The assembly was opened with two songs. "When You and I Were Young Maggie," and "Juanita." Miss Holmes, our drawing teacher, was at the piano. Miss Winona Earley led the singing.

The features of the assembly was a one-act farce comedy presented under the direction of Miss Helen Clark. The title "Lovebird's Matrimonial Agency" tells volumes of what it was and how it was. The players were good. Dick Harrison, alias Professor Lovebird, alias James Fuller seemed to have not a little difficulty with his disguises, especially the whiskers.

The cast for "Lovebird's Matrimonial Agency:"

Dick Harrison, alias Professor Lovebird ---------- James Fuller
Obidiah Bunchers -- Daniel Farwell
Dugald McTavish -- Burton Seely
Salini Smithers... Marguerite Perry
Susan Jane Mudge ... Virgil Slaght
Mariah "The Maid of all Work," Elizabeth Baker
Alice Everton -------- Ella Baker

The assembly was closed with a song.

The visitors during the week included Burton Crandall of San Luis Obispo, California. He left Wednesday night for Harvard Law School where he is a graduate student. Another visitor was Elmer Hipsley of Washington, D. C. He is in the McKinley Technical High School.

The Beta Mu seem to be doing some initiating. If you do not believe it, ask Robert Joyce, Wayne Crandall, or Robert Spicer. They seem to be on the receiving end of it all. They are this year's candidates for the order of the Beta Mu.

Football is in the air. Still "To be or not to be"—that is the question. It is all up to the boys to come out and make the team. We have the field; we have the equipment; we have the coach. All we need is a few more players. Yes, of the "whole week variety" and not players who came to practice only when the spirit moves them.

Many of the smaller schools are attempting football teams this fall, so that Andover high would not lack opponents in their own class.

"To be or not to be?" That is the question. Shall Andover have a team on the gridiron this fall.

BAD HABITS.

A KING.

STIMULATION.

Most people believe that to achieve success in life it is essential to have a good president in the White House, a good pastor, a progressive commercial club in his town, national prosperity, and neighbors devoted to God and country. The truth is, success depends entirely on the man who achieves it. He must have fewer bad habits than is the human average; with such an advantage, success is certain. . . . Another feature of the argument is, a man with fewer bad habits than the average actually gets along more comfortably than his acquaintances whose average of bad habits is higher than the unwritten law.

* * *

My favorite recollection of literature is that story of some drunken courtiers returning from a carouse. Encountering a proletarian sleeping off a debauch, they escorted him to the palace, and put him to bed. When he awakened, he found himself arrayed in royal raiment, surrounded with luxury, and lackeys who hastened to do his bidding; he went to sleep a drunken vagrant and awakened a king. . . . And he was the most impudent king in history; he grandly ordered this and that, and it was done too good for him. If the courtiers engaged in the prank failed to bow sufficiently low, they were reprimanded; a servant who neglected gold plate in serving food was whipped, altho the vagrant was accustomed to pewter. Soon the vagrant was beaten, his rags restored and turned into the street. . . . Every man believes he is capable of being a king, and that he has been wronged, because he is not. And if suddenly promoted to so high an estate, he would be as mean and incapable as the worst of them.

* * *

A Methodist preacher of national distinction told me this story: When a boy, his mother was always expecting to die of heart disease; whiskey was kept in the house, to stimulate her heart when it threatened to stop beating. . . She died at 91 and her heart beat feebly for three days after all her other organs were dead.

Heart-Heart

WEEDS

The pest of the gardener—the farmer—the owner of a liberal back yard. Weeds . . . Weeds. In endless variety they come, and so vicissitudes of weather ever prevent a bumper crop of them. Useless, worthless weeds. Kill them, uproot them, burn them.

Still, nothing on this earth was made in vain. There is good in everything; because we do not recognize it is no proof whatever that good is not there. Things that interfere with our favorite diversions are not wholly bad because of that fact.

From some of the hated weeds, come medicines that save valuable lives. I have seen some of these wonderful drugs functioning beautifully. Is a thing worth while that saves human life? I cannot think of a greater blessing. But weeds have the very industrious habit of springing up where we do not want them, and that is where the trouble lies.

A contemplation of the human soul, makes me think of a garden; in it beautiful and useless things grow—things that are vital to human life and happiness. . . And weeds come too, just as in the botanical garden. It is our duty to prevent their coming; failing in that, then, to root them out before they get too firm a hold. If soul-weeds get the upper hand—if they grow bigger than the precious soul-plants, the good may be lost entirely by tearing out the deeper-rooted tares.

If weeds grow too long, and too many of them, there is no question of the garden's destruction. It is precisely the same in the garden of the soul.

All this round-about way to prove that weeds may be, and are all right in their place—but the garden is not their place, no matter what garden.

If the weeds in my soul-garden are too deeply rooted to pull out safely, the Master of the garden will wait till the harvest time, then segregate the weeds and burn them. And He will save the good things He planted there.

Recognizing Our Debt to Others

Mark 12:28-34; James 2:14-17

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Topical lessons will be followed during this quarter and the general theme is "Some Social Teachings of the Bible." The Aim, indicated by the Lessons Committee, is "To guide the pupil into an understanding of right habits and attitudes in dealing with others." As in the previous quarter of topical lessons, numerous Scripture references will be indicated and these are to be examined with much care each time. The conclusions come from a wide range of study and not from just a few references. For this lesson read Nehemiah 4:15-23; Mark 12:28-34; Romans 15:1-7; Philippians 2:1-8; Colossians 3:12; 4:1; James 2:14-17. Our limited space does not offer opportunity for even a brief exposition of each selection.

Even Robinson Crusoe could not think of himself only for any length of time. The man Friday had to come in for his attention and likewise for the sharing of his provisions. All have obligations to others because each one of us is constantly being blessed by the sharing of others. It would be a sorry life that one lived entirely alone. This is in the mind of all, tho we may be slow to acknowledge the fact. Trick questions were being asked of Jesus during that last day of public teaching. The Master Teacher showed that the scribe need not have asked about the "first commandment of all." He should have restated the contents of the Shema, for both the phylactery and mezuzah called for supreme love for Jehovah. Then Jesus brought the man's attention to every day life by adding "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." People can get away with a kind of love for God without costing them much. It is different in loving our neighbor for he is constantly in need of our kindly deeds and gifts in his extremity. "What do I get out of it" is a suicidal question in these days.

Nehemiah could never have completed the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem without the co-operation of all the returned pilgrims. In times of danger we place ourselves and all that we have at the disposal of country or cause. OTHERISM is a word to coin and then cultivate all that is embodied therein as we seek to make this world, which science is making a neighborhood, into a real brotherhood.

"James" has well been called the "Gospel of Common Sense." Theodore Roosevelt had the habit of quoting from it as he sought to summon others to a practical rather than a professional life. Faith and creed are worth while only as "works" result which are for the good of mankind. Creed is of value only as it develops character and consistent conduct. One cannot even do as he pleases, for there is the obligation to set the right example.

THE CALL OF THE OUTDOORS

Hens Auto Wise

The timeworn query of "Why does a hen cross the road?" at last has been relegated to oblivion. For, if the question were asked today the answer would be "They don't." The hens have become sophisticated. They now jump, or fly to the near side of the road at the honk of an auto horn as spontaneously as does the average pedestrian. Even in the most rural of rural localities they are as "city broke" when automobiles are approaching as are the stray dogs of the city slums.

As a result of this tendency farmers' losses are lessened in proportion to the opportunity of motorists to "shoot a chicken" with their front wheels or bumpers. Having less opportunity—or temptation—motorists have begun to think about a new principle of fair play with reference to killing hens, or pigs, or product of the farm which may stray into the highways. Thus "Good Outdoor Manners," which are being taught so assiduously by chapters of the Izaak Walton League to fishermen, hunters and campers, have been extended to include respect for the property of others.

Good manners are being taught everywhere thruout the country by striking signs posted on crossroads corners, or on prominent trees in wooded areas, especial activity in this work being shown by chapters of the League in these days when the autumn colors are even more alluring to motorists than summer greens.

Special prominence is being given at this season to warnings to tourists and campers against the perils of dropping matches and lighted cigarettes from cars into the dry grass, or leaves along the roadside, or in leaving embers of a campfire. Such campaigns have been conducted for the last five or six years.

Official announcement of the U. S. Forest Service show that fewer forest fires are started by careless campers than ever before. While the Izaak Walton League does not claim all the credit for this condition, its officers are confident that the persistent campaign of education conducted by chapters thruout the United States has aroused a spirit of caution in the American people not hitherto existing.

As "biddy" herself has acquired a watchfulness that has destroyed her former propensity for beating it across the road instead of hitting for the nearest haven of safety when she hears a horn honking, so the public is playing "Safety First" with our forests and wild life.

The home dressmaker will find a smooth, firm, well-padded ironing board one of the greatest aids to efficient sewing.

She pawned her jewels to keep food FRESH

QUEEN ISABELLE'S ships dared unknown ends of the earth to find spices, so necessary to keep meat untainted and fit to eat.

But there's no need to search the seven seas for spices today. You can go right to your nearest dealer or our electric shop and purchase that modern miracle . . . an electric refrigerator.

It will keep food sweet and safe for days in dry 45° cold . . . save enough on left overs and unspoiled foods to pay for itself in a few years. So clean . . . so free from attention . . . and the cost is but a few pennies a day.

For never has your electricity been cheaper. While the price of most necessities has nearly doubled, Niagara Power Service costs less today than when you could rent a horse and buggy for 25 cents an hour.

Word was received this week of the death of Frank House of Howard. His widow will be known to News readers as formerly Mrs. Minnie Walker Scribner of Andover. A. R. Baker and Welman Baker attended the funeral at Howard, Thursday.

Bone meal, limestone, and salt are the only minerals necessary in the dairy ration. Complex mixtures are a waste of money.

CLOTHES FOR THE SMALL BEGINNER

When it comes to children's clothing, fashion experts must take a back seat to psychologists and educators. Mothers realize more and more the importance of the right kind of clothing rather than the style. By choosing the right clothes and having patience and sympathy during the awkward fumblings of the young beginner, a mother can help her child learn to dress and undress himself at an early age.

Garments which are easy for the child to adjust are a great help. In general it is well to have a few fastenings as possible on the small garments. Since hooks, snaps and small buttons are difficult to manage, taped-on buttons at least three-fourths of an inch in diameter are recommended. Front closings should be chosen for all garments but especially for union suits, underwaists and sleeping garments. Four buttons across the back of trousers and bloomers are easier to reach than three, because they avoid that difficult button in the center of the back. Zipper fastenings are easy for children to use and are fun besides. Before the child can button or snap he often can learn to use these simple fastenings and will find pleasure in putting on by himself even such cumbersome garments as leggings.

Some mothers find that if the colored bloomers which match the child's dress are finished with a white belt in the front, the child will not confuse front and back, and if shoes and rubbers are marked inside with a large R or L in red he can distinguish left from right more easily.
