Jim and the Extract

His Ways Were New, but the Ensuing Profits Were Big

From "Letters From a Self Made Merchant to His Son," by George Horace Lorimer. By permission of Small, Maynard & Co., Publishers, Boston

The first college man I ever hired was old John Durham's son Jim. That was a good many years ago, when the house was a much smaller affair. Jim's father had a lot of money till he started out to buck the universe and corner wheat. And the boy took all the fancy courses and trimmings at college. The old man was mighty proud of Jim. Wanted him to be a literary fellow. But old Durham found out what every one learns who gets his ambitions mixed up with number two red—that there's a heap of it lying around loose in the country. The bears did quick work and kept the cash wheat coming in so lively that one settling day half a dozen of us had to get under the market to keep it from going to smash.

That day made Jim a candidate for a job. It didn't take him long to decide that the Lord would attend to keeping up the visible supply of poetry and that he had better turn his attention to the stocks of mess pork. Next morning he was laying for me with a letter of introduction when I got to the office, and when he found that I wouldn't have a private secretary at any price he applied for every other position on the premises right down to office boy. I told him I was sorry, but I couldn't do anything for him then; that we were letting men go, but I'd keep him in mind, and so on. The fact was that I didn't think a fellow with Jim's training would be much good anyhow. But Jim hung on—said he'd taken a fancy to the house and wanted to work for it. Used to call by about twice a week to find out if anything had turned up.

Finally, after about a month of this, he wore me down so that I stopped him one day as he was passing me on the street. I thought I'd find out if he really was so redhot to work as he pretended to be; besides I felt that perhaps I hadn't treated the boy just right, as I had delivered quite a jog of that wheat to his father myself.

"Hello, Jim," I called; "do you still want that job?"

"Yes, sir," he answered quick as lightning.

"Well, I tell you how it is, Jim," I said, looking up at him—he was one of those husky, lazy moving six footers—"I don't see any chance in the office, but I understand they can use another good, strong man in one of the loading gangs."

I thought that would settle Jim and let me out, for it's no joke lugging beef or rolling barrels and tierces a hundred yards or so to the cars. But Jim came right back at me with: "Done. Who'll I report to?"

That sporty way of answering, as if he was closing a bet, made me surer than ever that he was not cut out for a butcher. But I told him and off he started hot foot to find the foreman. I sent word by another route to see that he got plenty to do.

I forgot all about Jim until about three months later, when his name was handed up to me for a new place and a raise in pay. It seemed that he had sort of abolished his job. After he had been rolling barrels awhile and the sport had ground down one of his shoulders a couple of inches lower than the other he got to scheming around for a way to make the work easier, and he hit on an idea for a sort of overhead railroad system by which the barrels could be swung out of the storerooms and run right along into the cars and two or three men do the work of a gang. It was just as I thought. Jim was lazy, but he had put the house in the way of saving so much money that I couldn't fire him. So I raised his salary and made him an assistant timekeeper and checker.

Jim kept at this for three or four months, until his feet began to hurt him, I guess, and then he was out of a job again. It seems he had heard something of a new machine for registering the men that did away with most of the timekeepers, except the fellows who watched the machines, and he kept after the superintendent until he got him to put them in. Of course he claimed a raise again for effecting such a saving, and we just had to allow it.

I was beginning to take an interest in Jim, so I brought him up into the office and set him to copying circular letters. We used to send out a raft of them to the trade. That was just before the general adoption of typewriters, when they were still in the experimental stage. But Jim hadn't been in the office plugging away at the letters for a month before he had the writer's cramp and began nosing around again. The first thing I knew he was sicking the agents for the new typewriting machine on to me, and he kept them pounding away until they made me give them a trial. Then it was all up with Mr. Jim's job again. I raised his salary without his asking for it this time and put him out on the road to introduce a new product that we were making—beef extract.

Jim made two trips without selling enough to keep them working overtime at the factory, and then he came into my office with a long story about how we were doing it all wrong. Said we ought to go for the consumer by advertising and make the trade come to us instead of chasing it up.

That was so like Jim that I just laughed at first. Besides, that sort of advertising was a pretty new thing then, and I was one of the old timers who didn't take any stock in it. But Jim just kept plugging away at me between trips, and finally I took him off the road and told him to go ahead and try it in a small way.

Jim pretty nearly scared me to death that first year. At last he had got into something that he took an interest in—spending money—and he just fairly wallowed in it. He used to lay awake nights thinking up new ways of getting rid of the old man's profits. And he found them. Seemed as if I couldn't get away from Graham's Extract, and whenever I saw it I gagged, for I knew it was costing me money that wasn't coming back. But every time I started to draw in my horns Jim talked to me and showed me where there was a fortune waiting for me just around the corner.

Graham's Extract started out by being something that you could make beef tea out of—that was all. But before Jim had been fooling with it a month he had got his girl to think up a hundred different ways in which it could be used, and had advertised them all. It seemed there was nothing you could cook that didn't need a dash of it. He kept me between a chill and a sweat all the time. Sometimes, but not often, I just had to grin at his foolishness. I remember one picture he got out showing sixteen cows standing between something that looked like a letter press and telling how every pound or so of Graham's Extract contained the juice squeezed from a herd of steers. If an explorer started for the north pole, Jim would send him a case of extract and then advertise that it was the great heat maker for cold climates; and if some other fellow started across Africa, he sent him a case, too, and advertised what a bully drink it was served up with a little ice.

He broke out in a new place every day, and every time he broke out it cost the house money. Finally I made up my mind to swallow the loss, and Mister Jim was about to lose his job sure enough when the orders for extract began to look up, and he got a reprieve. Then he began to make expenses, and he got a pardon, and finally a rush came that left him high and dry in a permanent place.

Jim was all right in his way, but it was a new way, and I hadn't been broad gauged enough to see that it was a better way.

That was where I caught the connection between a college education and business. I've always made it a rule to buy brains, and I've learned now that the better trained they are the faster they find reasons for putting their salaries raised. The fellow who hasn't had the training may be just as smart, but he's apt to new the air when he's twaching for ideas.

Trial of Former Mayor Ames.

Minneapolis, May 6.—Former Mayor Ames was subjected to rigid cross-examination while on the stand in his trial for bribery and extortion. When confronted by his written orders to the superintendent of police with regard to making a list of disreputable houses, he declared that the signature was made with a rubber stamp and he had never seen or authorized the order.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

Rev. S. D. Pickett, Pastor.

A large attendance was secured at both morning and evening services last Sunday. The people express themselves with more enthusiasm concerning the appearance of the church and the character of the services. Four persons were baptized, two were received as members on probation, and two were received by certificate. Several additions to the membership have been secured within a short time and more are expected in the near future. The attendance at the Sunday-school, and Junior and Epworth League was very encouraging.

The topic for next Sunday morning will be, "Some things our church should do."

The Junior League service will be conducted by Edith Brainard.

The Epworth League service will be conducted by Mrs. Emery Cook. Topic, "Missionary work among heathen women." Text word, Woman.

Union service in the Presbyterian church in the evening.

There will be a meeting of the Sunday School Board in the church parlor at 7:30, on Wednesday evening.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICES.

QUIETLY OBSERVED IN ANDOVER BY EDWARD SEAMAN POST.

Because Many Members of Post and Corps Are Seventh-day People, no Public Demonstrations were Indulged in.

Never before was Memorial Day observed in Andover as it was this year. Instead of the usual parade, and exercises at the Opera House with an address—and Edward Seaman Post has always had the best—the flowers brought to the Relief rooms by the school children were made into bouquets and wreaths early in the morning, and taken by detailed squads and deposited on the graves of their dead comrades.

In the afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock, a large number of the comrades of the Post, with the members of the Woman's Relief Corps, assembled at the Post rooms, and presented a program, the principal feature of which was the Ritualistic Service as laid down in the Service Book.

It is sad that Memorial Day has become a gala day, instead of a "memorial day," a "national sabbath." The time is coming, and rapidly too, when there will be no "old veterans," no organization known as the Grand Army of the Republic, to perpetuate the memory of their comrades who fell in the noble cause of forcing the union of states, and giving to our children the heritage of one country and one flag, but we trust the sons and daughters will take up the pleasant duty of "covering them over."

F. B. Keeney of the Belvidere Stock Farm Sends Two of his Fine Jersey Heifers.

Two of the finest Jersey heifers ever seen in this section were shipped this week by F. B. Keeney from his Belvidere stock farm. Their destination is Painesville, Ohio, where certain buyers are gathering the best of the Jersey stock. They will all be kept at that place until next spring for a trial test so the twenty-five best can be selected for exhibition purposes at the World's Fair at St. Louis. The buyers purpose to prove the precedence of the Jersey over any other breed of cattle.

WHITESVILLE vs. ANDOVER.

Score 1 to 15 in Andover's Favor on Decoration Day at Whitesville Grounds.

The Andover baseball team went over to Whitesville Decoration Day and gave the local fans there lessons in how to play the National game. The Andover boys took along a delegation of about fifty people from this town to help do the rooting. The game was easily won by a score of 1 to 15 in Andover's favor. Our local players express themselves in high praises for the courtesy shown by the Whitesville people.

The game was mostly played by the batteries, which were White and Ainsworth for Whitesville, and Joyce and Driscoll for Andover. Some of the features of the game was the throwing by Joyce for Andover. Sam's arm was lame before beginning the game, but it stood by him until the finish. He threw the best game of the season. Bettinger made a good shortstop, and Emery's home run strike came in well as did also Snyder's long catch which was particularly needed just at that time.

CLOSING THE YEAR'S WORK.

THE HAWTHORNE CIRCLE ELECT OFFICERS.

Chautauqua Work this Year Done and Members Feel Well Paid.—Progressive Luncheon Closes the Season.

By invitation of their President, Mrs. Pease, the Hawthorne Circle met at her home Tuesday evening, May 19th, for the last meeting of the year. As the close of the lesson, the names of the members having the highest number of counts for work and attendance were read. The report showed an exceptionally good year's work done by all. Altho the Chautauqua work for this year with Russia has been somewhat difficult, the members expressed themselves as well repaid for the time and labor expended. Plans for next year's work were perfected, and the following officers elected:

President—Mrs. Fannie Backus.
Vice President—Mrs. Pease.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. J. M. Brundage.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Coleman.
Treasurer—Miss Belle Brundage.

Cake and cream were served the ladies by the hostess.

The members upon the defeated side were very prompt in paying the forfeit by handsomely entertaining the Circle at a progressive luncheon upon the following (Wednesday) evening at the homes of Miss Millie Barney, Mrs. Pease and Mrs. Brundage. After an excellent menu, the ladies were called upon to respond to the toast list presented by Mrs. Orvis.

At the close of an enjoyable evening the guests bade good night to the hostesses with many expressions of pleasure for their entertainment and anticipations for the coming Chautauqua year.

BURIAL OF HARRY P. MYERS.

SERVICES CONDUCTED BY MASONIC FRATERNITY FRIDAY.

Large Delegation from Macedonia Lodge of Bolivar of Which Deceased was a Member, Present.

The body of Harry P. Myers who died in a hospital in Lima, Ohio, of enlarged liver, arrived in Andover Thursday. Funeral services were held under the auspices of Andover Lodge, No. 558, F. & A. M., assisted by members of Macedonia Lodge, No. 258, of Bolivar of which the deceased was a member. Rev. S. D. Pickett, assisted by Rev. H. D. Bacon, conducted the services at the M. E. church Friday afternoon after which the beautiful Masonic Ceremonies were conducted, a delegation from the Bolivar lodge acting as pall bearers.

Harry P. Myers was 45 years old. A number of years ago he conducted a livery in this place with a brother-in-law under the firm name of Myers & Cook. When the oil excitement broke out in the Richburg field he removed to Bolivar where for ten years he conducted the leading barber shop and made money. From Bolivar he went to West Virginia where he made a modest fortune in the oil buisness. About four years ago he built a cottage at Chautauqua and spent his summers there, and the winters in California, from which place they were returning to Chautauqua and stopped off at Lima, Ohio, to see friends when the disease overmastered him.

Arriving on the same train with the body were the following: Mrs. Myers and her mother, Mrs. Lelon Cook, Mrs. Allen of South Dakota and Mrs. Ball of Buffelo, sisters of the deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cook and little son, Mr. James Cook of W. Va., and Miss Louise Cochrane of St. Marys, Ohio.

Those attending the funeral from Bolivar were, Geo. A. Beers, R. N. Andrus, E. J. Root, L. D. Jones, J. C. Holcomb, C. F. Streeter, E. W. Cowles, C. M. Van Curen and H. L. Zimmerman.

Spoke at Friendship.

In reporting the Memorial Day exercises at Friendship, the Wellsville Reporter pays the following compliment to the Speaker of the Day, Assemblyman Phillips:

"Hon. Jesse Phillips of Andover delivered the address, which for patriotic sentiment, terse expression and true oratorical style, could hardly be equaled. It gave great satisfaction and he impressed his hearers as being a man of uncommon ability."

GREAT FIVE DOLLAR SUIT SALE!

The Greatest Chance Ever Offered the Men of Andover and Vicinity.

NO PREVIOUS SALE TO BE COMPARED WITH IT. ALL PRICE RECORDS BROKEN.

HERE IS THE PLAIN TRUTH about this sale: For about two years back we have been buying altogether too liberally of Men's Clothing. The stock instead of being kept down to where it belongs has grown larger each season until to-day we are carrying a stock a way out of proportion to the size of our town. Without resorting to any fake excuses we tell you frankly we want the money out of this clothing stock, and the only sure way we see to turn it into ready cash is to give you dollars for about fifty cents. Each customer is to have his choice of over 150 Suits that we were to retail at from $8 to $12 for only FIVE DOLLARS. The suits offered consist of all-wool Cassimeres, Cheviots, Thibets, Worsteds and Fancy Suitings. Think of it! An all-wool, well tailored Suit for a V.

Every Suit sold in this sale will mean a positive loss to us, but the advertising resulting from such awful price cutting will be beyond estimate.

We know that the amount of Clothing sold cannot be pushed beyond a certain limit in a small community like this, but we believe that we can dispose of 150 Suits to men who don't really need them when they see the Suits we are to sell at FIVE DOLLARS.

Don't take our "say so" for the statements we make, just come in and see for yourself, and come soon, for just the things you may want may be the first to be picked up.

SUGAR FREE---For a few days we will give for ONE DOLLAR the following first-class Groceries and a 5 lb. sack of GRANULATED SUGAR FREE.
