State Issues

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT has finally forced the Republican candidate for Governor to discuss state issues and as might be expected, Ex-Prosecutor Tuttle displayed complete ignorance on matters concerning the office to which he aspires. With Governor Roosevelt's own campaign just getting under way, the Republicans are in complete retreat and even those leaders who thought Mr. Tuttle had a chance to win on his sole issue of New York City corruption are now privately conceding that he will be defeated by a tremendous majority.

The Republican candidate's charge that the Roosevelt administration had sought to aggravate unemployment by delaying state work was promptly and completely met by Governor Roosevelt. As the New York Times said editorially:

"The Governor's reply, over the radio, was crushing."

Nevertheless, having nothing else to talk about, Mr. Tuttle repeated the mis-statements and tried to make the Governor's answer appear as an "apology." Mr. Tuttle had charged that $20,000,000 of public funds were available for construction and had not been spent. The Governor pointed out that the state is letting this work on a business-like basis and that the balance of this year's appropriations would all be under contract before the end of the year. More than $35,000,000 worth of work is already under contract and the state is furnishing work for the largest number of people of any time in its history. Even our Republican President, Mr. Hoover, has paid tribute to the State's efforts to relieve unemployment.

The Republican candidate likewise displayed a complete lack of knowledge of what has been done to improve agricultural conditions during the past two years.

For instance, at Rochester, he promised if elected to appoint a commission to study the reason for the wide difference between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays. This must have been amusing to the farmers who heard him over the radio. They know, even if he does not, that just such a commission has been functioning ever since Governor Roosevelt took office. They know that the Governor's Agricultural Advisory Commission is the most representative body of farm experts which could be brought together. They also know that this commission framed the mass of farm legislation which has already done so much to improve agricultural conditions.

The Republican candidate early found out that a candidate can't ride into the office of Governor of New York State on a sole issue of local corruption which in no way touches the state government. He will find out on election day that the people of the state want for Governor a man who knows state affairs and who has shown his capacity to administer government in a progressive, humane and constructive manner. That is why Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt will be re-elected by a record-breaking majority.

Probably no one is better acquainted with the needs of the farmer and what has been done to meet them than Fred K. Freestone of Interlaken, master of the New York State Grange. This is what he said on October 3:

"Governor Roosevelt has stood by the farmers for the last two years better than any recent Governor of New York State."

What can Mr. Tuttle say to that?

A surety company official says fat men are good risks. At least somebody loves a fat man.

Silent Danger Signs

SEVERAL states, including Ohio, erect small white crosses along the highways designating places where fatal automobile accidents have happened. These little crosses are reminders to motorists that automobiles frequently have a habit of dealing a fatal blow.

Motorists soon learn, tho not familiar with the meaning of the crosses, the significance of the silent roadside signals:

But will they be a warning? Will these somber tablets of death stop the speed-crazed driver who thinks nothing of himself or of those in other cars?

Surely the sight of a white cross at the roadside near a dangerous curve or beside a railroad crossing, ought to make some impression. It ought to bring a picture of crumpled bodies and wreckage, and a personal realization of the consequences if care and caution are not used.

But even seeing the results of some accidents and knowing of the carelessness of drivers that leads to disaster may well wonder whether anything short of a first hand view will keep some automobile drivers off railroad tracks when trains are approaching—or, whether a warning of certain death would cause them to slacken their speed.

Slogans are good things to have lying around if they are put into practice.

Another Air Tragedy

ANOTHER tragedy of the air has been written, with the recent collapse and burning of the British dirigible R-101, in which nearly 50 lives were lost.

In 1925 the United States experienced a similar loss to the Shenandoah, but the loss of lives was not as large as in the recent disaster.

Calamities of the air, such as these, bring about the expression from many that the task of conquering the air is still a long way off. Man, it is true, must learn much more before travel by these giant ships is actually safe.

However one is not to become discouraged over these failures. When the first steamboat was launched, the same crowd said it couldn't be done; when the first railway engine made a trip, you could find thousands who doubted the success of such a locomotive. It has been so far down the line.

Man has paid dearly for the progress that he has made. He probably will continue to pay the price. While the doubters look on, we predict that great accomplishments will be derived from these expensive and fatal experiments.

Science is on the way toward extending the human life limit 900 years or so, it is said. That will be a long time for lots of folks we know to be bored.

The Highest Court

WORTHY merchandise is the only kind that can successfully stand trial at the highest court in the land—the court of public opinion. All others are soon condemned and sentenced to oblivion.

The merchant who advertises, deliberately places his merchandise on trial. He invites your critical inspection. He makes publicly certain claims upon the fulfillment of which depends his commercial success. If he were not sure of his goods, he would not dare to advertise. For advertising would put him to a test he could not meet, and thus hasten the end of his business career.

Advertising protects you against fraud and inferiority. It saves you money by presenting for your consideration only the best products.

Well-informed buyers seek news of good merchandise in the advertising columns and are guided by the advice they find there.

Community improvement, like physical improvement, comes from exercise. Somebody has to do something.

Careless Habits

THREE times a year sales of unclaimed lost property found in the cars of the underground railways in London, England, are held with the purchasing privilege withheld from all but the company's employees. Under a fixed scale of prices umbrellas may be bought for 24 cents each; walking sticks, four to eight cents; gloves, six cents a pair; books, six cents each and brief cases, 20 cents each.

Why are these articles not claimed by the original owners? Surely many of the umbrellas, walking sticks and brief cases are worth many times the sums they bring at the auctions.

The same condition prevails in America. People are always losing umbrellas, bundles or other bulky articles and most of them are lost under conditions which would insure their return if the original owner made reasonable attempts to get them back. Last year patrons lost in the underground railways of London and failed to claim 12,000 umbrellas and 500 walking sticks. Those same people probably laugh heartily when they hear the story about the man who lost the bass drum.

Among the other fading illusions is the one that two can live as cheaply as one after there are a half dozen.

About Eels

NATURE provides a great many intricate little puzzles, for those who have the money, the leisure and the inclination to worry over them.

An expedition has just set out for the Pacific Ocean to attempt to unravel one of the most mysterious of these puzzles—where the eels come from.

It has been discovered that all the eels found in Europe and eastern America are born in a certain very deep section of the Atlantic Ocean. While still very small they make their way to the seacoast and go up rivers, thru lakes, across swamps and along narrow creeks, to the spots where they eventually make their homes.

But this doesn't solve the puzzle of the eels that live in the countries bordering on the Pacific. So a group of scientists has set out to clear up the mystery.

The whole thing isn't very important, of course. But it's interesting, after all. Let's hope the wily eel is made to give up the secret of his birthplace.

One man in ten thousand becomes famous. Hence "one in a million" is making the average too low.

Sadly Mistaken

A FRENCH magazine writer predicts that the century-long policy of an unfortified frontier between the United States and Canada is about to break down.

Soon, he believes, both nations will have troops and fortifications at strategic points along the boundary. The reason? Inability to get together on the business of liquor smuggler. This, he holds, is irritating both nations and will end the old policy of peace and unpreparedness.

We don't know where this French writer got his information, but we know right well that he's mistaken. That unfortified frontier is one of the finest things on the North American continent. It would take a lot more than a dispute about rum running to cause abandonment of that magnificent policy.

What has become of the good old days when widowhood was regarded as a misfortune instead of an achievement?

A resourceful man is one who, if given enough rope, will begin the manufacture of five-cent cigars.

An ignorant man is dead earnest can make a more eloquent appeal than a grey orator who isn't.

Europe reports the tourists about all gone. They have just about finished the last one.

Attention, New Voters

ALL NEW VOTERS are required to present evidence of literacy (ability to read and write) in order to vote at the coming election. This may be done by one of the following methods:

1. By presenting a certificate or diploma showing that he has completed the work of an approved eighth grade elementary school or of a higher school in which English is the language of instruction. This certificate may be presented to the registration officials at the time of registering and the new voter will be credited on the register that proof of literacy has been presented. Or the eighth grade certificate or diploma may be presented to the election inspectors at the polls on election day.

2. All new voters who are not able to qualify by the method mentioned above must obtain a certificate of literacy.

Certificates of literacy may be issued as follows:

a. To all persons who have successfully completed the work prescribed for the sixth grade of the public schools or the equivalent elsewhere.

b. To all persons who have not completed the work of the sixth grade, after successfully passing the test furnished by the state education department for the literacy certificate.

Application for the literacy certificate may be made to any person on one of the following dates and at the place named below which he finds most convenient. The principal of each school named is authorized to give the examination:

Friday, 1 to 4 p. m. Oct. 24th.
Election Day, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Town of Alfred, high school building, village of Alfred.
Town of Andover, high school building, village of Andover.
Town of Independence, high school building, village of Whitesville.
Town of Ward, Phillip's Creek School, District No. 2.
Town of Wellsville, Proctor school.
Town of Willing, York's Corners school.

The examination for the literacy certificate cannot be given at the polling places nor can the certificates be obtained there. To avoid confusion and delay secure your literacy certificate before going to the voting places.

Determination of New Voter

1. The following classes of persons are "new voters" and must present evidence of literacy to the election inspectors:

a. All men and women born in the United States who became qualified to vote in New York State after January 1, 1922.

b. All men and women of foreign birth who became qualified to vote in New York State after January 1, 1922.

c. All persons who have previously voted in one or more other states, but who became qualified to vote in New York State for the first time after January 1, 1922.
