THIS WEEK IN ALBANY

Albany, Sept. 4.—On the theory that the best defense is an offense, the Democratic party this week opened its campaign to retain control of the 1936 Assembly by penetrating the Southern Tier, long the stronghold of Republicanism.

This move was intended as notice that the Democrats expect to hold their present seats in the Assembly and battle furiously for a large number now occupied by Republicans.

Speaker Irwin Steingut, one of the principal speakers at the Owego rally, which was attended by a vast audience from seven counties, made that plan clear when he said:

"Every Assembly district upstate this year is debatable ground and we propose to fight to the limit for each seat, even if it has been occupied by a Republican for a century.

"The day is past in this state when the Democratic party bases its hope of winning the Legislature on a huge vote in New York City, plus victories in such communities as Albany, Buffalo, Rochester and Utica.

"The smaller communities and counties no longer are conceded to the Republican party. We propose to extend our lines into many other upstate counties this fall."

Speaker Steingut flung the charge that the Republican leadership in New York State has stood for negation and obstructionism, failing to submit a program of its own and resting content with tossing barbed words at Democratic governors and legislators who attempt to advance constructive ideas.

He lashed out vigorously at Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, who has talked himself hoarse in recent months in a series of "one-night stands" upstate. Eaton, the Speaker declared, has indulged in "glittering generalities" and statements which were "far from the truth."

"The real issue," he said, "whether the Democratic record of accomplishments last winter justifies continued Democratic control of the Assembly, has been submerged in a welter of reckless words."

The Speaker declared that the record of progressive legislation enacted this year is the best in history and he warned that a return to Republican control will be marked by an attack upon unemployment insurance and similar social legislation

"If the aims of government are turned over to reactionary Republican hands," he said, "the first move made in the Legislature next winter will be an attack upon this social legislation. We have won the first trench in our fight for the men and women of this state. Let us keep our advantage by retaining a Democratic Legislature. You have your choice between a party of progress and one of negation and obstructionism. I have no doubt of your decision."

—o—

The success of the Owego gathering has spurred Democratic leaders in other upstate counties to plan similar affairs. This indicates that the party will be extremely active north of the Bronx from now until election day.

Republican leaders are said to be worried about the Democratic sortie into their counties. Instead of reaching out to attack in present Democratic Assembly districts, the G. O. P. may be forced to fall back to the defense of districts they have controlled in the past.

One of the major tasks of the next Legislature, according to Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews, is regulation of hours and conditions of labor for children employed in industrialized agriculture.

"A very unhappy picture is presented," he said, "by children in industrialized agriculture in this state because of the fact that the regulations and limitations which protect children in manufacturing and mercantile plants do not extend to industrialized agriculture. This condition aggravates the usual evils of child labor by giving to one set of industrialists within the state a privilege of exploitation which is denied to all others, and to industrialized agriculture it gives an extreme and unfair advantage over the individual farm owner and operator who is also a home-maker."

Commissioner Andrews emphasized that there is no quarrel with the farmer whose own children assist in farm work. He is striking at large industrialized farms under the control of absentee landlords or corporations.

"Such exploitation of child labor," he declared, "is a real and growing menace to the incomes, profits, well-being, education, culture and general security of the farm families of the state."

Governor Lehman took occasion this week to disagree with views expressed by several speakers at the convention here of the New York State Sheriffs' Association. They had urged defeat of the Fearon amendment for county home rule.

The governor appeared before the association and urged approval of the amendment, which, he said, will be a long stride toward efficient and less expensive local government. He emphasized that none of the governmental changes can become effective until the voters in the county approve.

New York State's health development at Saratoga Springs is going over with a bang. Hundreds of persons are taking the "cure" there and indications are that the facilities will be used next year to capacity.

Physicians in the past have suggested that their patients play golf for exercise, but for the first time in medical history, so far as known, golf was prescribed the other day at the Spa as part of the regime of treatment.

Dr. Carl R. Comstock, of Saratoga Springs, wrote the prescription for W. W. Hawkins, general executive manager of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, and Joe Williams, widely known sports columnist, both of whom are taking the cure.

The prescription was filled on the therapeutic course of the spa, a nine-hole layout designed to call for a minimum of physical effort but for a maximum of skill in play. No grade in excess of ten per cent exists on the course.

The course is one of the features of the state development and is expected to be one of the features which will make the health center an attraction for the entire world, as well as a self-supporting project.

Watch Runs After Being Buried Five Years

Five years ago while working on the farm of Merritt Adams near Main Settlement, Omer Austin lost his watch. The other day while plowing on the same farm his plow turned up the watch which seemed to be in no way injured by its long burial in the ground. When wound it started running and has since kept good time.—Portville Review.

HOW, WHAT and WHY?

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Is Water Near?

J. H. A., Holmes, asks: "Does the presence of peat moss indicate plenty of water nearby?"

Professor A. F. Gustafson of the agronomy department replies: "As a rule, peat moss develops only in cold, fresh water usually supplied by springs. The water in which the moss grows preserves it against decay.

"Under these circumstances the presence of peat moss often indicates a supply of spring water. This depends, however, on underlying geological conditions.

"Muck is formed in lakes that are not fed by springs, but by streams. Some places like this have been drained and are now reasonably dry; under these conditions the presence of peat moss would not necessarily indicate the presence of water supplies.

What Is Poctin?

Mrs. M. B., writes: "I have seen the word 'pectin' used many times in connection with the making of jelly. Just what does it mean?"

Mrs. Linnea Dennett of the New York State college of home economics answers: "Pectin is a substance found in most fruits and in many vegetables, such as tart under-ripe apples, currants, orange peel, carrots, turnips and cranberries.

"Without pectin, juices used for jellies would not 'set' or 'jell.' That is why commercial or homemade pectin must be added when a jelly is made from juices of products that do not contain pectin naturally."

A DISH FOR THE WEEK

Some foods, like summer squash, have to be taken while they are in season. When combined with other foods, fresh squash golash (the accentuation is especially attractive to the home maker

Squash Golash

Three slices of bacon
One large onion
One medium-sized summer squash
One green pepper
Two cups of tomatoes, fresh or canned
Salt and pepper.

Cut the bacon in small pieces and fry them. Add the onion, sliced thin. Cook the onion until it is yellow. Add the squash, cut in thin crosswise slices. Add the pepper, cut in small pieces, the tomato, salt and pepper. Cover and cook slowly until it is tender.

For luncheon or supper, serve squash golash with whole wheat bread, swiss cheese and crisp lettuce sandwiches; fresh apple pie for the grown-ups, apple sauce for the children, and milk for all, suggests the New York State college of home economics.

Banana slices that have been dipped in pineapple or grapefruit juice for from 15 to 30 seconds and then removed, keep their natural color for several hours, a recent study reveals.

The Family DOCTOR

JOHN JOSEPH CARRIS, M.D.

THE POISON-VICTIM

I hope you may never be confronted with a poison emergency as I see many times been, the case of accidental (or suicidal) poisoning of a human being. It is one of the most serious moment of life when an unconscious and prostrate body is found demanding immediate effort.

Quick and accurate thinking is demanded and action with it. Have some one summon the doctor. Don't waste time looking for evidence. Be quick to try to preserve life and look for evidence afterward. If the patient's lips are burned with carbolic acid, pour in heavy solutions of alkalines—soda or epsom salts—or, diluted alcohol if it is at hand. Do it plentifully and be sure it is enough. Let the doctor be the judge as to an emetic when he arrives.

If the patient is in convulsion with violent contractions of the limbs and neck-muscles it indicates strychnine poisoning. Pour in warm mustard-water—anything that will produce vomit. If you have an opiate, give it and don't be afraid of over-dose. Quiet those spasms if you can. Whiff of chloroform if it can be had—anything to combat this quick-acting poison, until the doctor arrives.

With the patient that cannot be aroused it might be opium or morphine. Look at the pupil of the eyes. If they are contracted to pinpoints and the sleep is profound and heavy, then give black coffee. Give all you can force down.

If you can get an emetic dose into the patient, do it. Stimulate. Do everything to keep up breathing, artificial respiration if you can perform. Keep the patient awake—or try strenuous methods to do so. We used to even "larrup" the morphine victim to keep him from sleeping off the mortal coil.

Children may get hold of aconite—it produces excessive sweat, fetid rapid pulse and great [illegible]. Give stimulants.

13-Year-Old Girl is Champion Speller

In a contest of 500 words, Evelyn Jones, 13 years of age, of Cayuga, won the championship as spelker of the elementary schools of New York State at the annual contest at Syracuse fair, July 29th. There were 49 contestants from as many counties.

The word which finally got Little Miss Jones was "cachet." She omitted the last letter.

Marion Gilbert, 13, of Putnam county won second with two words misspelled; Amelia Bona, 14, of Dutchess county won third and Virginia Chimer of Nassau county won fourth in the contest.

Fewer hogs in Germany, more hogs in Denmark, and the smallest crop in many years in the United States are prospects reported by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

THE HOUSE OF HAZARDS By Mac Arthur

The Divorce Court MURDER

by MILTON PROPPER

The trouble started in Mr. Dawson's private law office.

Six people were discussing the case of Rowland vs. Rowland and four of those people were angry.

Mrs. Rowland and her lawyer objected to the introduction of new evidence and a new witness.

The battle raged until Mr. Dawson, Divorce Court Master, ordered the new witness to be brought in.

She was in the next room, but they could not bring her in.

She was dead.

That started a sensational investigation which involved one of Philadelphia's most respected families.

It led to scandal, intrigue, a sordid affair in a road house . . . and, finally, to a startling solution.

"The Divorce Court Murder" is a thrilling mystery story by a prolific young American author, Milton Propper. It is a story packed full of action from beginning to end with startling surprises for the reader at every turn.

Milton Propper is one of America's foremost writers of mystery thrillers. Other popular stories he has written are: "The Student Fraternity Murder," "The Strange Disappearance of Mary Young, "The Boudoir Murder," "The Family Burial Murders," "The Ticker Tape Murder," etc., etc.

"The Divorce Court Murder" will start in the Andover News next week. It is one of Milton Propper's best stories. We urge our readers not to miss a single installment.

TEETHING is an important period in the life of a baby. Mothers expect complications at this time. If the baby is restless, refuses to eat, has an elevated temperature and shows signs of swollen gums, he may be teething, or he may be getting into some other kind of trouble. Serious disturbances start in the same way and are easily confused with the teething process. A mother should be careful not to rely too much on her own diagnosis after all she has had experience with only a few babies at most. The doctor has observed many.

New York pays about 33 per cent of all federal income taxes.
