Stepped Against a Hot Stove.

A child of Mrs. Geo. T. Benson, when getting his usual Saturday night bath, stepped back against a hot stove which burned him severely. The child was in great agony and his mother could do nothing to pacify him. Remembering that she had a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, she thought she would try it. Inless than half an hour after applying it the child was quiet and asleep, and in less than two weeks was well. Mrs. Benson is a well known resident of Kellar, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment and especially valuable for burns, cuts, bruises and sprains. For sale by O. E. Vars & Son, Andover, and N. E. Coston, Greenwood.

Dark Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a great many years, and although I am past eighty years of age, yet I have not a gray hair in my head."
Geo. Yellott, Towson, Md.

We mean all that rich, dark color your hair used to have. If it's gray now, no matter; for Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color to gray hair.

Sometimes it makes the hair grow very heavy and long; and it stops falling of the hair, too.

A Runaway Bicycle.

Prince Albert, Prince of Wales, on the Isle of Man, ran a runaway bicycle in Grove Road recently, and was considerably injured. Bruises and contusions of the face, hands and knees were the results. Had he used Bucklen's Arnica Salve he would have escaped with a few bruises only, as it is the best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, boils, felons, burns, scalds, blisters, corns, warts, chilblains, chapped hands, skin eruptions and piles. 25 cents at O. E. Vars & Son's Drug Store.

Great Cloak Selling.

Our Cloak and Suit sales during the month of October were the largest we ever had. We have made preparations for November by procuring from a leading manufacturer his entire stock of finely tailored suits at greatly reduced prices. These are now on sale and we anticipate the liviliest kind of selling. These garments are of the same high grade that is making this department more and more popular each season. They are a class of goods that you would not expect to find at such low prices at any time. As the number of suits in some sizes are only a few, we suggest promptness if you wish one.

Cured of Piles after 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, O., had the piles for 40 years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Unsalvable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, saltrheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package—all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. Sold by O. E. Vars & Son.

Stanley's Beginning.

Sir H. M. Stanley possesses the distinction of having commenced his career in a workhouse, a fact which has not prevented him from rising to heights of fame. Of Welsh origin, the great explorer cannot have all pleasant memories of his native land, although he can still speak the language. He left the workhouse for a butcher's shop, which he found little to his taste, and ran away to America. In New Orleans he saw an announcement in the shop of a Henry Mortlake Stanley that a boy was wanted. The lad obtained the situation and remained with his employer, who adopted him, until his death. In this way he came by his present name, having formerly borne that of John Rowlands. He is a man of iron, easily discouraged; full of dogged will, which is his strength, and a splendid leader. Extremely abstemious in all his habits, he has ever had a passion for tea, and as for tobacco, he himself says, "I have always found it a solace and an aid to concentration."—London Tit-Bits.

The Latest Parisian Scandals.

Paris is wrought up over the Avenue de Friedland scandals as no city has been since London was horrified by the Pall Mall Gazette revelations. The further the police probe the greater the horrors that are revealed. The interesting thing about it is that these revelations have given increased impetus to the campaign against salacious literature, and especially against the many pictorial prints that overstep all bounds of decency. The reaction against the "modern" spirit in Fiction and Poetry has become very strong during the last few months, and the present scandal will serve only to increase its strength.

Not a Sick Day Since.

I was taken severely sic with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try it. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured and have not seen a sick day since. NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

NO PAY, NO PAPER AFTER JANUARY 1, 1904.

The "News" Adopts the Cash in Advance System, Believing it Better for both Publishers and Readers.

The ANDOVER NEWS is today the only paper in Allegany county printing eight six-column pages all at home, that does not charge more than $1.00 per year subscription. It is a close thing to issue such a sheet at that price and make both ends meet. The price of print paper has doubled within the past four years. The only way the NEWS can possibly maintain the present $1.00 rate is to carry no deadheads. Believing it unjust that a good subscriber be taxed to help pay for his deadbeat neighbor's paper, we have determined to adopt the "No pay, no paper" policy January 1st, 1904, and live rigidly up to it after that date. Kindly read the label on your paper and if you are not credited beyond Jan. 1st, 1904, you are hereby notified that your paper will then be discontinued unless you walk up to the Captain's office and settle before that date. After Jan. 1st, 1904, all subscription accounts then due will be placed in an attorney's hands for collection.

MURDERED SIX PERSONS

CRIMES BAFFLE POLICE

Ghoul King Confesses—Says He Was Never Alone—Mystery of Many Assassinations Cleared Up—Tells How a Grave Is Robbed—Chicago Cemeteries Easy to Work.

Rufus Cantrell, the negro "King of Grave Robbers," has confessed that murder was a part of the traffic that he carried on in dead bodies.

When before the court he gave details as to the manner of robbing the graves and disposing of the booty to the demonstrator of anatomy at the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons. But he never told until now that his stock in trade was obtained sometimes by murder.

Superintendent Byrnes, formerly of the Ohio State Prison, is the man to whom Cantrell first divulged this startling phase of the case. At various times, when he could not get hold of dissecting subjects in the "regular" way—from undertakers or by desecrating the tomb—Cantrell said he committed murder. He said he killed six persons. These he recited in detail the story of these murders and cleared up six mysteries with which the police have grappled in vain.

The first killing was that of Policeman Watterson, of this city. Cantrell sold the body to the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

His next victim, he said, was Walter Johnson, of Newark, N. J., whom he waylaid and robbed of $400. He had no difficulty in disposing of the body as usual to the dissecting room, thus enjoying a privilege that does not fall to common murderers.

The third victim, a Pittsburg man named Claude, was killed and what money he had taken.

Cantrell's next enterprise was more lucrative. He slew Carrie Salvage, a wealthy woman, three years ago, and the mystery it baffled the police.

The fifth victim was Kenneth Lawrence, of Ohio, and the sixth William Jordan, of Indianapolis.

Cantrell asserts that he was never alone in these deeds of death; that one or more members of his band of body snatchers always had a hand in them.

At first his story was regarded as improbable. The police began a searching investigation, and they say to-day that they have verified it in every material point. It has been put in the form of an affidavit, and this is in the hands of the Attorney General.

Cantrell made a trade of body snatching for many years, according to his own statements in court. His career in Chicago indicates that city as a favorite hunting ground for ghouls.

"One cemetery in Chicago," he asserted, "had furnished more bodies to St. Louis medical colleges than have gone to the dissecting rooms of the city from cemeteries surrounding St. Louis itself.

"There are a score of undertakers in Chicago," he said, "who bury ice in the coffins instead of bodies, and then sell the bodies to medical colleges.

Cantrell described the manner in which a grave is robbed. The entire coffin is not laid bare, he said. A hole square as the grave is wide is dug at the head of the mound. When the coffin has been reached a man is sent into the excavation, and while he is at work drilling through the casket the light he requires and the noise he makes are both prevented from arousing suspicion by a heavy robe that is thrown across the top of the grave, while he labors beneath.

When the coffin has been opened and an aperture has been made large enough to permit of the corpse being drawn through, a second man takes the first man's place, and, seizing the body by the shoulders, drags it from the coffin and lifts it to the surface.

A School of Happiness.

Dr. Paul Valentin is starting a "school of happiness." We would all be happy if we were taught how, and we shall now be able to learn. A complete course of lectures on the subject will be given, and a periodical will be published, called the Normal Life. The school will be opened and the magazine will appear next autumn. One of the doctor's supporters says that henceforth "men and women will be taught the art of happiness, just as they are taught that of painting or playing the piano." All sorts of happiness will be lectured upon, and, in particular, the doctor will teach his pupils how to be happy though married. He considers that conjugal felicity depends upon (1) circumstances which do not define, and over which one may not always have control; (2) cerebral equilibrium between the two parties, and (3) suitability of character. The thing is to learn how to fit these three conditions, and that the doctor will teach us.—Paris Correspondence of London Daily Telegraph.

The Hip-Pocket Habit.

Certainly we have too many unjustifiable homicides in this country. And the real root of all the evil is the hip-pocket habit. If the laws which prohibit the carrying of concealed deadly weapons were rigidly enforced, as they should be enforced, there would be an immediate decrease in the number of homicides in the United States.—Salt Lake Herald.

A PROTECTIVE BRONCHO.

No One Allowed Near Her but the Owner—She is Not For Sale.

Frank Brown, a barber living in New Bedford owes his own and his wife's escape from a highwayman to his fiery little mustang. Two nights ago Brown, accompanied by his wife, paid a social call upon friends near Buttonwood Park.

He drove his mustang, which he had bought out west three years ago. While gentle enough with her owner, the animal is vicious enough when touched by strange hands. No one else she allows near her save Brown.

It was about 11 o'clock when Brown drove out of his friend's yard. By the dim street light he detected a shadow in the road, which he at first took to be that of another carriage. He reined in his horse.

Hardly had he done so when a man sprang from the roadside and seized the bride, shouting, "Stop! Stop! Throw up your hands or I'll fire!"

The light glinted upon a revolver held in the desperado's free hand. At sight of it Mrs. Brown fainted and sank to the floor of the carriage.

Brown held up his hands, but in the few seconds which elapsed between the command and the time the robber could release his hold upon the horse a strange thing happened.

At the touch of the stranger the mustang gave a shrill neigh, and, sinking her teeth in the man's shoulder, lifted him from his feet. Then she dashed him to the ground, making vicious kicks at him before she bolted down the street.

She had covered a mile before Brown could rein her in, and even then he confesses that he had no desire to go back to investigate. He was unharmed, and carried quite a large sum of money with him. He had been thinking of selling the mustang if he could get any one to buy her, but now says she cannot be bought.

Brown described the highwayman as being a powerful man, more than six feet high, shabbily dressed and with unshaven face.—Boston Journal.

Sir Oliver Lodge on Radium.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the great English physicist, believes that many phenomena now not well, if at all, understood will be explained by further discoveries in radioactivity; he mentions the slight of the glow-worm and firefly, and the Brownian movements of microscopic particles as examples of present mysteries which a study of radioactivity may solve. He closed a recent article on radium with the following paragraph:

"And let me conclude by asking readers to give no ear to the absurd claim of paradoxers and others ignorant of the principles of physics, who, with misplaced ingenuity, will be sure that the foundations of science are being uprooted and long cherished laws shaken. No thing of the kind happens. The new information is supplementary and stimulating, not really revolutionary, nor in the least perturbing to mathematical physicists, whatever it may be to chemists; for on the electric theory of matter it is the kind of thing that ought to occur. And one outstanding difficulty about this theory, often previously felt and expressed by Prof. Larmor—that matter ought to be radio-active and unstable if the electric theory of its constitution were true—this theoretical difficulty is being removed in the most brilliant way possible.

Deadly Venom.

The poison of the Hydrophidae, or sea snakes, which occur in large numbers on the coasts of India, is extremely deadly. According to Dr. L. Rogers, who recently described his study of their venoms to the Royal Society, the poison of the Elubydrina, one of the most dangerous species, is from five to twenty times as powerful as cobra poison, and to fishes is fifty times as poisonous as the most deadly cobra venom. It produces the same symptoms as the latter—drowsiness, muscular weakness, progressive paralysis, failure of breathing, and finally, convulsions. Dr. Calmette's antivenine was found to have no value as an antidote to the Eubydrina venom.

Italy's Revival.

This modern revival of the ancient mother land of great rulers, famous conquerors and gifted artists, poets and painters, builders of cities and masters of empires, is one of the bright signs of the times. It shows how far the world is from exhaustion, in the districts where man has been most active and the population has been most dense. There is no country so well worn and so long crowded, judged by the standards of any age, that it may not aspire to much greater achievements and higher prosperity than it has ever enjoyed.

The world is in no sense "played out," in any extensive or important region.—Cleveland Leader.

He Evened Matters Up.

A young negro couple, according to a story that is going through the rounds of the state press, presented themselves the other day to be married. After performing the ceremony the preacher, who esteems himself some what of a joker, remarked: "It is customary for the preacher to kiss the bride, but I will omit that on this occasion." The groom grinned, making a fine display of ivory, and answered: "All right, boss, it am customary to gib de preacher five dollahs after the ceremony, but Ah will omit dat on dis occasion." The parson has concluded that he will not joke any more on so solemn an occasion as a wedding.—Kansas City Journal.

COOLIE WEDDING CEREMONY.

Generally Given Names of Hero and Heroine from Last Novel.

A coolie wedding on one of the old sugar estates in the West Indies is an interesting affair.

After the marriage ceremony, which is held in the house of the bride's parents, is over, the bridegroom, in all his wedding finery, mounts a horse and rides off to the groom's house of the estate on which he works—that is to say, the house in which the planter lives. He walks his horse slowly, for after him there comes a long procession of his relatives and friends. If he rode quickly the splendor of the scene would be lost to the envious onlookers.

This procession is a very solemn affair. But for the gay colors worn by the coolies it would look more like a funeral than a wedding.

After the mounted bridegroom walks the bride. She comes after him, and on foot, to show her subjection to him. Her robe is of white and yellow, with a lot of silver bangles, necklets and earrings; even her small ankles are covered with heavy anklets of carved silver. The more jewelry a coolie woman wears the more her husband is looked up to, for coolies always make their wives their banks. After the modest-looking bride come two small boys beating tom-toms and singing a wild Indian chant. Next to these singers come two other boys, beating their chests and crying:

"Hussain, Hussein!
Hussain, Hussein!"

"Hussan and Hussein were two brothers, martyred for the Mahomedan faith. They are looked upon as prophets by the Mohammedan coolies.

When this strange procession arrives at the "great house," the master and mistress of the place, with their family, receive them on the veranda.

The bride and bridegroom kneel before the mistress of the house, who is accompanied by some them with Christian names. She generally uses the names of the hero and heroine of the last novel she has read. The coolies, however, are quite satisfied and proud of their new names.

When the planter's wife consents to "name" a converted coolie couple she takes a heavy responsibility upon herself, for she is supposed to teach her new "relations," as they call themselves
