DEMOCRATIC FINANCE

It is so long since a Democratic administration has been seen that many of our young voters know nothing about the controlling ideas of the Democratic party, except what they may have picked up from works of history, which is practically nothing.

The greatest single weakness of the Democratic party lies in its failure to understand the nature of money. The majority of the Democratic party has always believed that you could make the people more prosperous by cheapening the money supply. By the flat money of 1876, by the 50 cent dollar of 1892, it was supposed that all burdens of the workingman could magically be lifted by giving him a cheaper dollar.

The great panic and persistent depression of 1893 to 1897 tells the story of results. Business men cut their enterprises down to the lowest limit. They expected that if they put out a gold dollar, they would get back a 50 cent silver one. The money was put into safe deposit vaults instead of productive enterprises.

It is true that the silver question seems settled for the present, no thanks to the democracy. But it is also true that the money question is never settled. Some new phase of it is always coming up.

Just now it is the need of currency reform. Our currency is admittedly inelastic. An industrial depression was caused in 1907 principally because business men locked up currency as the result of fear. Some safe needs to be provided by which enough currency can be provided in times of stress to supply solvent bank depositors.

This problem is imminent, and should be settled within the next presidential term. Will you dare trust the Democratic party to settle it? Given the reins of power, will not they make a mess of it, as they have always messed the money question?

MAKING BETTER BOYS.

The fact that William R. George has withdrawn from the George Junior Republic, of which he is the founder, may create the impression that his unique theories of dealing with neglected children have proven a dream.

It will be well to recall that of 500 boys who had gone out from the colony up to a recent time, only two had drifted back to lives of crime, and some eight had disappeared. All of these were children who stayed only two or three months in the colony, and did not get acclimated.

Mr. George's work originated from his dissatisfaction with the superficial means ordinarily employed to help slum children. Herding them out in the country for a fresh air week, he felt, sending them back with brighter faces and stronger muscles, did not really meet the case. They simply could run a little faster when the police chased them.

He believed that human nature is largely governed by three motives: Desire for property, which in the slum turns to theft; desire for adventure, which in the slum turns to conflict with the police; desire for applause of one's fellows, which develope gang leaders and lawlessness. Society gets in bad on all three, by trying to overturn human nature with penalties.

Mr George believed he could enlist all these motives among his boys along the side of law and order. So he established his boy courts, legislature, prison, schools, farm work, shops, etc., a community as near governing as this state.

"Banjo," the sullen kid, who absolutely refused to co-operate, was made sheriff. "I'll make 'em hustle," said "Banjo," and the energy he used to go into scrapping with the "coppers" found outlet in hunting down refactory newcomers from the Bowery. A currency of their own, redeemable in United States money when the boy left the colony, made the fellows work. The love of applause encouraged the boys to seek the positions of responsibility.

Now that Mr. George is leaving, the question comes whether the colony will work without his unique personality back of it. Is a boy law-abiding because he has no share in making the laws he is expected and subpoenaed to obey, or do we might as well give up the idea of making better boys by any such method?

GOLF AND THE COMMON PEOPLE

The golf players have had the public eye the past week, as the long drives have been swatting the ball over Chicago Golf Club's velvety links for the amateur national championship.

Golf 15 years ago was an alien and aristocratic game, played but little outside of the suburbs of the larger cities. To-day it is adding its pretty club houses and rolling turf in many a modest village.

The advance of golf raises the question whether it will ever become popular in the sense that base ball is popular. The fact that the $800 a year bank clerk usually plays does not prove that the $3 a day artisan will sport his mashies and niblicks.

The limitation of golf is largely caused by the notion that it is a rich man's game. When the Consumer loams of the capitalists who will drive a dozen 75 cent balls into the bushes one after the other, a 25 cent bleacher seat at the ball grounds looks very good to him.

In actual practise, however, the capitalists are not seen much on the golf links. It is much easier to make $10,000 a year than it is to drive a straight golf ball for 200 yards. At least many men find it so. The capitalist is more apt to be pushing a high powered motor car over the highways where no inherent obstacles in the shape of awkward muscles can dull his glory.

The players one actually sees on golf links are really a simple minded type of men. They cling to a 75 cent golf ball as to hard earned and blood-bought treasure. If the white surface wears off, they take it home at night and paint it on the kitchen table, while the wife is sprinkling the sheets. They search long and earnestly for the elusive little pill, when it hides its furtive head in the long grass.

The great reason why golf clubs are expensive is not essentially in the game. A hundred fellows and as many women can buy land, put up a simple little club house and maintain links almost anywhere, except near the large cities, for the proceeds of a $5 or $10 initiation fee and $5 a year dues. You could not play billiards on the greens, but then you don't need to.

The high cost is in the habits of the members. The crack players want motor mowers. The boys want clover baths, the butterflies want dance floors, the high livers want a restaurant. Before you know it the dues are $50 per, or double that.

THE BEST NEWS IN THE PAPER.

Several newspaper men from different cities got to discussing the other day what was the best news in the newspaper they were reading together. One of them insisted that the game between the leaders in the two league base ball championships attracted the most readers. Another persisted that it was the page of political speeches for the day. A third argued that the best news in that paper was the column of classified advertising, under the heads of Wants, For Sales, To Rent, etc. He argued that the information in those columns was read with keener interest than anything else, because it related more to people's daily lives.

The women, he contended, were particularly affected by such advertisements as those for housemaids, and of housemaids looking for positions. Even if they weren't looking for servants themselves, it threw a bright light on their household troubles.

The men, he said, were touched by the dishes they were being offered for sale. The farmer found out which of his competitors was trying to dispose of market produce; owners of houses were interested to see what other houses were selling for; men that rented houses were always looking out for something better than what they had.

Whether or not the newspaper brother was right, it is certain that a column of classified advertising always comes down very close to home life. It is scanned by a great many people who enjoy seeing what others are trying to buy or sell, even if they are not searching for anything themselves.

If then you have any unsupplied wants, or you wish to sell anything, if you want a better job, if you want help, the classified advertising in this newspaper gives you an audience, listening with keen interest to know about the trade you want to make. A small amount invested in this form of advertising brings quick and wonderfully cheap returns. It is a singularly efficient form of salesmanship.

—Will you share some of a store's usual profits on things in your shopping today? The ads will tell you how and where.

Sign Boards on the Up-road.

By Hamilton B. Williams

There are many theories of happiness, but the soul that has lost peace knows what is the essential of happiness. We value our friends when they are separated from us; blessedness when the doors are far from us. So with peace. It is a long, hard, dark, toilsome road we must trudge upon a-seeking the gates of the lost joy. And few there be who find that which one has lost.

The master in his beautitude in reference to the peace-makers, meant to glorify the work of those who lived for the common weal. Peace-makers are the builders of the kingdom of right conditions. Every one of us desires to be called an honorable name. Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called — The Sons of God.

A beautiful custom of middle-age gentlemen, was, when leaving a house in which they had received hospitality, to paint upon the wall of the house their coat of arms. This was a pledge of fealty, a sign of alliance. When our good Lord-brother was about to leave the world he left this pledge of friendship. What gift would we expect the Friend of Man to leave? Peace, I leave with you; my peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled.

The world have its friend poor entertainment—hate for love, scorn for his truth, a wag of the head for his overture of grace. Nevertheless he painted his sign upon the lintels of men's houses, a sign in blood, and climbed his last hill like a gentleman.

To-day the christian church is the mock and jest and object of indifference of those who need its ministry most. But we must go up and down the world painting the sign of the cross upon men's houses. Et in hoc signo vincemus!

For the business of life we must be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. We shall then be ready for thorn-ways, be proof against nettles and sharp stones. Our christian life depends upon how we are garbed, especially how we are shod. Some of the Lord's friends are touchy, some exact the maximum of attention in return for the minimum of help, some, like hirelings, flee away when hard times come, some show up when everything runs smoothly. In addition to plain ordinary religion, these thin-skinned brethren need the sandals of peace, that is, good will.

The sandals of peace are made of compassion, sympathy, courtesy, friendship, measured by the golden rule, tied on with the bond of perfectness, which is love.

Wonderful how the dances off the hard miles so shod.

The everyday trudge is that which we must prepare for. As sensible for a farmer to go plowing in his Cuba-side slippers as for a christian to do his pilgrimage of kindly deeds unless he be shod properly.

Would we rather the people with whom we live put on the sandals of hate, malice, envy, anger, discontent, bickering, fault-finding, nagging, discouragement, touchiness—or the sandals of peace?

Whatsoever kind of shoes we like others to wear when walking with us, even so put these on when we walk with others.

Prayer is almost a lost art. However, it is the one road that God has built as a highway between Himself and His children. The path must be kept clear; all little clay gods must be beaten into dust. We do not see the avenue, we do not know enough about prayer to analyze it scientifically; but prayer is the main road to God.

Let us pray.

Good Father, we are a long way from home and Thy peaceful fireside, but we will turn us away from husks and pottage and start Thee-ward meet us on the road and give us a lift. The world is flooded with light, Oh, Light; make it the warp and woof of our words and deeds this golden day. Amidst the clanger and jangle of the world-streets, give us the hearing of the melody of the love-time. And as we live in our homes, as we sit in our offices, as we perform our little jobs, may we sing Thy love-tune.

Oh Liberal of Gifts, we are inclined to have and to hold, to nestle gold to our breasts, and to build a wall between us and our neighbors. Make us big enough to be liberal of self and self. Oh, Thou who loved us beyond measure, give us the grace to say the kindly word, to do the simple deed. Keep our eyes lightified, our faces love-bright. Grant that we bring no cloud with chill and rain upon any heart's summer weather.

God, who madest man and woman, in thine own likeness, help us to place the better man and woman on the throne of our own lives. We face an unknown road. What may hap we do not know; give us to believe fully what our Good Friend said: "Let not your heart be troubled."

Help us to live one day at a time.

Keep our loved in Thy mother's arms.

Help us not to tie ourselves to earth.

Make us glad of the day when task is ended. And in the purple of the last evening of things earthly, may we wander down the lane with torch of hope and staff of faith.

And just when darkness falls, Oh Father, may we see Thee opening Thy gates to come to us.

Oh God, make thyself known to Thy children all. And may none miss Thy house.

My Uproad friends, to-day we're trudging the trail, pegging away at the task. We need God to help us. He comes when we want Him.

Comrades, let us put on the sandals of peace and good will and fare uproad—blithely.

Pax vobiscum.

AUDITORIUM DANCE.

The date for the next big Auditorium Dance is Friday evening, September 27th. Merriman's Orchestra has been engaged which insures a large attendance and a splendid time.

OF INTEREST TO BIBLE SCHOOLS

A Token of $5.00 To Be Given to the School Having Greatest Increase.

It will be of considerable interest to all members and teachers of Allegany County Bible Schools to learn that the Bible School having the largest increase during the last three months of this year, will receive an award of $5.00 from the Superintendent, R. D. Beebe.

It behooves every Bible school, not having a home department as a friend, to at once elect one and put it in her way, so as to be in full working order by October first. The home department superintendents are requested to send to Supt. Beebe the number of members at the close of September, and at the end of the year the full number of new members added since October first.

Superintendents of Home Departments are requested to send in the list of new members secured during the last three months of the year, to Supt. Beebe, on a postal card, at the first of the year and the school having the greatest increase will receive a check for $5 as soon as all reports are in.

Any further information regarding the matter will be cheerfully given by addressing R. D. Beebe, R. D. No. 4, Wellsville, N. Y.

All pastors are requested to make this know next Sunday, so there will be no delay in getting the work started. The fields are ready for the harvest. The laborers are few—will you be one?

The people who read your ads are the people who are to make business "good" at your store—their patronage is subject to your INFLUENCE.

All Days are Big Days at the Big Cuba Fair

September 17, 18, 19, 20, 1912

Another year has rolled around and the season for fairs is upon us. Most of you, no doubt, are making arrangements to attend one or more of them and are looking about to see which fair offers the best inducements, both in regards to Premiums, Attractions and Amusements.

It is with this view that the management of the Big Cuba Fair believes in presenting the best to be had and are putting forth their entire energy, adhering to their time-honored policy of making each succeeding fair Bigger, Broader and Better than ever before. In presenting the following list of Free Attractions they are satisfied that they have not only lived up to their past reputation, but will have added fresh laurels to the same.

Wallace's Vocal Orchestra

Those of you who heard these popular musicans last year are sure to be on hand to hear them this year. Those of you who missed them last year will now have a chancs to hear THE FINEST MUSICAL ORGANIZATION IN THE COUNTRY.

The Five Martellonis

(Four Pretty Women and One Man)

Star Acrobatic Act of Three Continents, introducing every trick in modern acrobatic work. This wonderful acrobatic troupe excels for its novelty, beauty and skillful execution of astonishing feats by these pretty women.

Burleigh's Concert Band

of Olean—no need to sound the praises of this band, as you all know them.

The Ernest Trio

A combination of skill laughter. Will positively appear with the most novel and side-splitting Comedy Tramboline Act ever seen at any fair. They are bound to keep you laughing all the time.

In addition we will have the Alfred University Exhibit. A Big Horse Sale every day. The Midway has been re-arranged and several shows are already booked and more are booking every day. Something doing every minute at the Cuba Fair.

Trotting, Pacing and Running Races daily.

Friday, Sept. 20—Day of Sports for Registered School Pupils and Boy Scouts. (See Premium List)

LOST BELMONT GIRL RETURNS A BRIDE

The supposed disappearance of Miss Alcine Peck, daughter of George W. Peck, of Belmont, was cleared up Saturday morning by the return of the young lady to her home, entirely unconscious of the worry that she had caused her family and of the search being made for her. Miss Peck, who had been visiting friends near New York was supposed to have started for home Tuesday morning. Instead she wrote her father that she would go to Pittsburgh and be married that evening to the man of her choice, John Benjamin Gregory, to whom she had been engaged for some time. The letter mailed in the Jersey City depot, never reached Mr. Peck, hence the natural worry of the family over the girl's whereabouts. Miss Peck, however, reached Pittsburgh that evening and at 7 o'clock was married to the man of her choice. For the past three days the newly married happy couple have been enjoying a honeymoon, not knowing of the anxiety at home. Mrs. Gregory got off of train 5 at the Wellsville station Saturday morning, called up her father to say that she would be on train 7 and learned for the first time of the search being made for her.

The engagement of Miss Peck, the youngest daughter of the family to Gregory, was well known and the wedding was anticipated, but not in just the way it happened. The young lady expected to surprise her family and did so effectively. However, it has all turned out well and Mrs. Gregory will in a few days join her husband in Kensington, a suburb of Pittsburg, where he is employed as a machinist. Mr. Gregory was formerly a resident of Belmont and an employee in the Clark Bros. shop.

Belmont was greatly stirred up over Miss Peck's disappearance. When she did not arrive home at the time expected, her family were almost frenzied about her and made frantic efforts to find her.

KISSING ON STREET NO CRIME.

Philadelphia Judge Says Lovers Need Not Hide Affection.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—According to Magistrate Scott it is no crime to kiss a girl when on the streets of Philadelphia. The Magistrate was called upon to render this decision when Harold Luders was called before him, having been arrested for kissing Miss Hilda Young of 2216 Montgomery Avenue. It is thought when he was leaving her last night to board a car for his home.

"Why, this boy has committed no crime," said the Magistrate. "Things have come to a pretty pass when a man cannot kiss his girl on the street. If this keeps on it will be time for the young people to move out and the crippled and feeble minded to move in. If a good, clean young man must hide his head under a bucket or crawl under a barn when he wants to kiss a nice, sweet girl, then I say it's about time for Gabriel to toot his horn and set off the big blast.

"Where do you think a fellow ought to kiss his girl? Down in a big cave? If a girl is good enough to be kissed she ought to be kissed out in the open so that everybody can see it, and no one likes to do it and see it more than I."

He discharged Luders forthwith.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Hamilton B. Williams, Minister.

Sunday morning, Sept. 15, 10:30. Mr. Williams will give his sermon built on the life of the Supplanter Jacob. The theme is old, but the treatment is quite up-to-date. The influence of heredity; the power of another's life; woman's place in a man's life—these and other matters will be presented to thoughtful people.

Other meetings at usual hours. The attendance of the boys to the Boys' Class was very commendable last Sunday. Practical guiding for the Boy's Trail every Sunday.

Mr. Williams will conduct a service at the Grange Hall, near J. K. Miller's home next Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. Those in that neighborhood are heartily invited.

"The christian church is designed, not to save individuals out of the world, but to save the world itself."

"Christianity cannot be proclaimed apart from the social life of the community."—Jane Addams.

Let us be square with the institution that sheds light.

ROAD IS PROGRESSING

The Hornell-Canisteo State Road Will Be Completed Soon.

Work on the Hornell-Canisteo State Road is progressing with much rapidity now-a-days and it will only be a short time before it will be practically completed. The work was started early this summer but owing to the extent of the job it has taken all summer. Some very extensive improvement have taken place and the road has been changed considerably at several points.

The heavy grades in many places have been greatly modified and where possible, totally eliminated. Near the Canisteo end several bad turns have been eliminated and the road straightened. One of the most noticeable of the features of the work is the change in the right of way directly in front of Glenwood Inn. At this point formerly the road took a sharp grade coming in close to the Inn while now it keeps straight on without any turn or grade.

The road is twenty-four feet in width which made considerable necessary work along the Narrows between the Page farm and Glenwood where the road borders the river.

The road is practically completed along the lower end near Canisteo and a short distance near Hornell, while a long space near Glenwood still remains unfinished on account of the fact that most of the heavy work was done along this point.
