THE ANDOVER NEWS

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, - EDITOR Andover, N. Y., Jan. 11, 1893.

The Legislature has passed a law postponing the constitutional convention until May 1894, and also providing that delegates to the same shall be elected at the general elec tion in November, 1893. This will do away with the mid-winter election which was to have been held next month and will save the State a good | people. many thousand dollars. The foolish part of the whole business is that the election of delegates was ever appointed to be held in mid-winter.

One of Governor Flower's recommendations is that "the leading market roads in each county should be maintained by county taxation, expended under the supervision of a competent county engineer, subject to the general direction of the Board of Supervisors. It is suggested that the Legislature should pass a general law prescribing certain kinds of improved roads, ontlining the methods of raising and expending the neceseary moneys, and authorizing any county upon the vote of the Board of Supervisors to avail themselves of the provisions of the statute." Should the Legislature enact such a law the next Board of Supervisors will be charged with the important duty of deciding what use shall be made of Lovers of the mysterious will be interested in this story, which is well authenticated: Two years ago the portraits of President Harrison, Mrs. Harrison and Dr. Scott were reproduced in a group on glass. Several copies were made, Each portrait was colored and touched up by the artist who took the group, One of these pictures was given to a near relative of the President, who lives in Baltimore. The portraits were all good likenesses, and she prized them very highly. Here is where the mysterious part comes in. About three months before Mrs. Harrison's death the colors in her picture on the glass commenced to fade. When she died only the head was visible and that faintly. Then the same phenomenon was observed in Dr. Scott's portrait. It began to grow dimmer and dimmer until only the head remained. Dr. Scott died within a few weeks of his daughter. The curious part of the matter is that President Harrison's portrait stands out as clear and strong as it did on the day it was finished. The same colors were used on all these portraits and there is no apparent reason why one should not last as long as the other.
