PASTOR RANDALL WITHDRAWS RESIGNATION

After Serving the Andover Baptist Church Five Years He Concludes to go Elsewhere.—Many Express Their Regret.

Rev. W. H. Randall, pastor of the First Baptist church of Andover, surprised Andover people very much last Sunday morning by offering his resignation to take effect on or before three months in accordance with the rules of the Baptist denomination. Mr. Randall has been the very efficient pastor of the local church for the past five years, and numbers the entire community among his friends, and it is with much regret that they learn of his intention of leaving us.

For the past few months Mr. Randall has been ill, but is much better now, nearly his own good health again. After a few week's of rest he will undoubtedly resume his pastorial duties in a new field.

The following is his resignation:

Andover, N. Y.
April 9th. 1916.

To the Andover Baptist church,

Dear Brethren and Sisters,

For the past five years we have worked together in the interest of the church, the community, and Christ's kingdom. These have been years in which we have much to be thankful for, some of our experiences we shall always cherish. Some have moved away, and others have been called of the Father, to the heavenly life. As we have seen God's truth carried home to the hearts of young and old, and in some cases their glad surrender to Christ we have rejoiced with them. There are others near the kingdom's door, and by right and loving care you may lead them to Christ. The babes in Christ need much from you that they may become strong in the knowledge of their Lord. They are looking to you older members of the church for aid, and the example that you set before them, the spirit you display, the interest that you take in them, and the efforts that you make to help them will determine their future, and that of the Andover Baptist church.

There comes a time in all our lives when we must say good-bye even to the best of friends. Feeling that the time has come when I have reached the parting of the way, and that another may be able to do you more good, and better advance the church's welfare, and the Master's interests, I do now hand in my rseignation. To take effect three months from today or sooner if we think best. This will give you time to clear up all matters to look for another pastor and to carry on your work without breaking up your services. While I remain in the village I shall do all in my power to help you carry forward the best interests of the church and cause.

My desires, hopes and prayers are and ever shall be that the Andover Baptist church shall hold high the banner of the Cross under wise and good leadership blessed of God.

Yours in the Interest of Christ.
Wm. H. RANDALL,
Pastor.

COST OF MILK

Many Items Included in Price Consumers Must Pay for Liquid Fluid

From the Harrisburg Patriot.

Manufacturers, transportation people and other business men employ expert efficiency counselors strictly to account for all items of cost of production, transportation and doing business. L. W. Lighty, dairying expert of the Pensylvania department of agriculture, says that the farmer can use business methods with good results. To place the dairy on a profit-making basis Mr. Lighty says:

"The farmer is a manufacturer and should be a business man and cannot begin too soon to do some careful cost accounting. In the production of milk enter many items of cost. The feed cost is the largest and the next is the labor cost, then follow the buildings and the cost of delivering the milk at the station or creamery. The interest and depreciation on the stock and equipment is an important item. Taxes and other miscellaneous items, six or seven in number, all help to swell the cost. Experts at Cornell University compiled cost figures obtained in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and New York and found that the average cost of keeping a cow a year ranged from $107.67 in New York to $103.19 in Massachusetts.

"The New Hampshire figures were obtained by keeping a strict record of 26 farm herds in a cow testing association for one year. The cows were above the average of the state in quality and production. The average cost of keeping the cow for a year was $147.73 and the average cost of a quart of milk from these 26 herds was $.042. The New Jersey cost of milk is the same and the figures were taken from the work of the agricultural experiment station herd which has better animals than the average on the farms. Connecticut and Massachusetts respectively found the cost of a quart of milk $.046 and $.052, the figures also taken from the work of the experiment station herds. The New York figures were obtained by keeping careful records of 174 farm herds consisting of about 5,000 cows during two years. In 1912 a quart of milk cost $.051 and in 1913 a quart cost $.044 on the average.

"Here is something strange. In 1913 feeds were higher, labor was higher, cows were higher and yet the cost of milk dropped seven-tenths of a cent per quart. Why this change? invariably, when we begin to keep records of the production of the cows, the cost of production is reduced. So long as we keep no records, we keep boarders and not a few robber cows. Let me show you what the Cornell investigators found in 1912. An average loss was sustained by the owners of 540 cows of $46 per cow, while the average milk production per cow was about 1,500 quarts the year through. Cows to make a profit had to produce fully twice as much milk during the year.

"Wherever and whenever we keep records of the production of our herds we find from one-third to two-thirds of the cows we feed are not making any profit and often we sustain considerable loss by keeping such individual cows. The most practical, most economical and altogether the best way to keep these records is by the organization of cow-testing associations. At a very small cost to the individual farmer, a strict accounting and record of production can be kept of every individual cow in the entire community. These neighborhood organizations have reduced the cost of milk production by nearly one-half in many communities.

This is a good time to sell farm land. And most sales of farms are brought about through classified ads.

April Meeting Community Co-operative Club

The fifth general gathering of the Andover Community Co-operative Club was held in I. O. O. F. Hall, last week Thursday evening, April 6th.

The same determination to do the very last thing possible to advance all of the interests of this community was manifest throughout the entire evening.

The Booster Bunch Orchestra was there with some snappy music to open the meeting. Their selections were followed by a saxaphone quartette which so pleased that they played an encore.

Miss Nellie Welsh, soloist, accompanied on the piano by Miss Reva Clarke, sang two selections before the boosters would stop their cheering. Miss Walsh has a wonderful pleasing and clear voice, and her solo work receives many kind words.

The program committee arranged for a number of three-minute addresses from the following gentlemen: Attorney C. M. Lash, J. A. O'Leary, P. C. Berkwater, E. S. Potter, A. R. Baker, Attorney C. L. Earley, George Barrett and Rev. Chas. Collins.

The talks were all in a very clever vein and sounded the note of true optimism.

Ex-alderman O'Leary made a valuable suggestion as to how to rapidly increase our population. He said Andover was the best town on earth. That it was an extremely healthy place. So much so that he pointed with much pride to the number of maiden ladies within her gates. He also pointed out the fact that there were quite a healthy lot of old bachelors in Andover, some of which were quite prominent in village politics and business, even being members of the Booster Club. His recommendation was that our old bachelors pluck up courage enough to take to the altar the "forgotten blessings" of the other sex, and he gave it as his opinion that our population would soon make a nice increase.

F. S. Potter brought the house down with an original poem, as follows:

The program committee knows that I can't make a speech.
This oritorical business is just out of my reach.
There is Common, and Stephens,
and our worthy friend, Lash.
When it comes to speech-making,
they can hand it a smash.
But I never could do it in a way that is right
So please pardon the mistakes
that I make here to-night.
There is my old friend, Herb
Snyder, the jolly old sport,
He has bought him an auto to help him to court.
It will be a good one you can sure bet your life.
Bib says, he thinks it will get him a wife.
He thinks that they can live at their ease
With his income as Town Clerk,
and the buying of cheese.
He told me a secret, and I guess
he was right,
If you want to go out for a duce
of a night
And take a new auto, and round
the girls shine,
One gallon of gasoline beats four gallons of wine.
Then there's Mr. Frank Burrows
dep'ment store man,
He is boosting the boosters the best that he can.
On the good of the town his mind
is sure bent,
But if you want him next summer
just call up Camp Dent.
There is Barrett, who clerks down
in Burrows' store,
If he had a million, he would clerk there no more.
He would buy Gurnsey cattle, as fast as he can
And start a big trust on the Standard Oil plan.
And there is Foster, now Charley don't have much to say
But just keep your eye on him
when his wild goes away.
There's my old friend, Calhoun,
he can deliver the goods,
Although from Genesee, that neck
of the woods.
He can get up a banquet in a way that is right.
If you want a good time, just be here one month from to-night.
Vaudeville from the city, some girls that can sing,
And Cal tells me their slippers
that high they can fling.
They will sing, they will dance,
they will swing their skirts so;
And you will all want a seat in the ball-headed row.
Then there is Berk, of the Erie,
he has nothing to do But just answer questions, "when does train eight go through?"
Then there is Farwell, and Horton they can shave you quite well,
But of their reputations I would sure hate to tell.
There are lots of you boosters, if I had the time
Your comings and goings would look well in rhyme,
But I sure must hurry and quickly make way
For there's other boosters with something to say.
So here's to the boosters, as busy as bee's,
There is no organization that can beat the three C. C. C.

Geo. Barrett said his wife thought this club should again change its name, and call it the "Roosters' Club" because we didn't have women members.

Rev. Mr. Collins chided the members not to forget the moral and spiritual needs of our community, when we were advancing the commercial.

The "round table" talks from the gentlemen named was a new departure and one all say was good.

After the bountiful supper served by the Senior Class of Andover High School President Fausant called the meeting to order and proceeded with the business of the evening.

In his address he made a number of very valuable suggestion which we will give News readers in a subsequent issue.

An expression of the club was asked on how far the members would stand back of the new Village Board in an endeavor to clean up the town morally as well as physically. The trend of the expressions were that the members had confidence in the Board of Trustees' ability and sagacity and that the members of the club would give them their hearty support in any and all undertakings calculated to make Andover a better town.

The banquet committee for the May meeting was appointed as follows: W. S. Calhoun, H. W. Mackmer, Chas. Foster, A. Monte, and Floyd Farwell.

The secretary gave his semi-annual report, covering the work undertaken by the club during the first five months of its existence.

The matter of the adoption of by-laws for the government of the club was referred to the executive committee.

F. S. Potter, chairman of the rest-room proposition, and Henry Stephens and E. D. Baker, members of that committee, reported progress. The matter was being thoroughly investigated and would soon become tangible.

C. A. Robinson, President of the Allegany County Pomona Grange, was called upon for remarks regarding the matter of better market facilities for Andover. Mr. Robinson drew the cheers by asserting that farmers were the only men God ever made, all others were parasites, living off the farmers. He then allowed that farmers had been chumps in not getting their produce to market in a more saleable condition. Until they can educate themselves to a point that they bring to the buyers more marketable produce they should be content with the markets they now have. He then told of a farmer, who fitted his produce for market, and by the use of only a few hours extra labor, received a much greater price.

He had put the question to the members of the local Grange, "What can the Community Co-operative Club do to help the farmers in this community most?" One answer was "Break up the organization of produce buyers now buying farm products in Andover." Another, "Improve Greenwood street."

Rev. H. B. Williams, chairman of the Local Charities Committee, reported that 85 garments, two bushels of potatoes and other needed material had been collected and distributed by his committee since the March meeting to the worthy poor in Andover. There were yet a few garments left. Principal Sterner, who had co-operated with the committee in distributing some of the clothing said that he felt that the committee had done noble work, and that he knew of many places where the charity had been much needed and was very much appreciated.

It was decided to make the committee a permanent one, for future work whenever there was an opportunity arising in the community.

John C. Lever, chairman of the Automobile Trip Committee, reported that the committee had not as yet held a meeting. That they would have a meeting and make all needed arrangements in a few days.

P. C. Berkwater, of the committee on Andover's entertainment, reported that arrangements were being made to hold a fair at the Auditorium, the first week in May, to raise funds for the work of the committee, every dime of which would be used in permanent improvements, in creating a suitable playground and park repairs.

Dr. Common, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, thanked those, who had so cheerfully taken part on the several programs for the past five weeks, and asked that the committee be relieved by the appointment of a new committee. It was voted to comply with his request, and the following gentlemen were named as the Program Committee by the president: Henry Garvin, Lee Pomeroy, E. B. Rollins, T. B. Bassett, and T. K. Regan.

A. R. Baker reported from a committee appointed by the executive committee, in relation to the proper procedure to be taken in organizing a Humane Society in Andover.

It was regularly moved and carried that the monthly dues be changed from 10c to 15c per month, making the supper and dues 50c each.

Rev. V. L. Eggleston, chairman of the membership committee, reported that we now had 110 members, and that there were sixty-seven of them present. Owing to the poor roads many of the farmers could not get out, but was pleased to note the presence of a few new members from the surrounding territory present.

It was suggested that some people thought that this club was only for an invited few, when nothing of the kind was ever even thought. Every person in this section, who wished to work for the betterment of this community, was urged to affiliate with the club.

"FI-FI" CAST ANNOUNCED

Andover people are looking eagerly forward at this time, to the coming of "Fi-Fi of the Toy Shop" to be given at the Auditorium on Easter Monday evening, April 24th. Judging from the unprecedented success of the piece, all over the country, it is certain prediction that Andover people will be much enthused and pleased with the fantastic doings of old Tackhammer's toy dolls which are brought to life by some magic smelling salts, and vie with each other in a series of bewildering adventures. Seldom, if ever, has a more pleasing operetta been given locally. Its originality throughout lends a potent charm, and Mr. Frye, who has been producing the show in the larger cities of the East, reports that the audiences have gone wild with enthusiasm, and often have insisted on a return date within the same week.

The plot of Fi-Fi is deliciously whimsical and is such that it does not require a Sherlock Holmes to find it.

Owing to the exceptional stage accommodations, a larger cast is being used than was at first planned for, so that now it numbers a little more than 100. It has always been observed that Andover is not lacking in theatrical and terrpsicorean talent, and it will be noted with pleasure that it is well represented in "Fi-Fi". (pronounced Fee-Fee).

The cast of the principal characters is as follows:

Clowns
Porter Richardson
Marl Wilson
Bonnie Miss Florence Baker
Tackhammer Roy Engle
Aurelia, a witch
Mrs. Mable Grenolds
Lieutenant Tinheart
Leo Raufenbarth
Fi-Fi, a French doll
Miss Regina Raufenbarth
Prince Lollypop, Clare Backus
Capt. Barnacle, sailor doll
Harold Dawson
Jap Doll Adah Bell Bassett
Loosey Ray Doll
Marjorie Borden
Inkspot, black doll
Veronica Hyland
Taking Doll Reba Burrows
Aurelia, a fairy
Mrs. Mabel Grenolds
Man-in-the-Moon
Sandman
Archie Diffin
Nellie Walsh
Bo-peep
The committee has been exceptionally fortunate in securing Miss Regina Raufenbarth for the title role.

It is the hope of the Senior Class members that their treasury will be substantially augmented by the financial returns of "Fi-Fi" in order that they may complete the plans for a trip to our nation's capital.
