YOU NEEDN'T BE A MILLIONAIRE

Dressing well doesn't necessarily imply spending more than you can afford. Of course you can pay a lot for clothes if you want to, but why pay for more value than you actually get? We've always made it a point to put in the things that are highest in quality and most reasonable in price.

In Men's and Young Men's Clothes for example. What better can be had than Stein-Bloch Smart and Clothcraft Guaranteed at $15 to $25?

It's the same all the way down the line. Shirts, Hats, Socks, Collars, Underwear—everything you buy here is bound to please because you feel that it is worth every cent you pay for it.

We haven't forgotten the boys—Smarter Suits or Top Coats cannot be produced. The little fellow from 2½ years up to his larger brother at 18, if he still wears the knickerbocker trousers, are priced reasonable enough so you'll not be disappointed. Hats Caps, Waists, Shirts, Underwear Etc., that makes the outfit complete.

JAMES BROWNLEE

In a copy of the "Border Telegraph" published at Galashiels, Scotland, we learn of the death of James Brownlee, who was a grandfather of two Andover women, Mrs. John Farley and Mrs. James Mulholland.

We publish herewith the account of his life.

We regret to record the death of ex-Bailie James Brownlee, which occurred somewhat suddenly at his residence in Paton street, Galashiels, on Wednesday morning. Mr. Brownlee, who was a dyer by trade, was the founder of the well known dyeworks so closely associated with his name, and now carried on by his sons. He also for some time farmed Eastlands farm, and carried on a dairy business. Deceased had a remarkable record of public work, and accomplished much good work on behalf of the community. For a period of about twenty-eight years he was a member of the Town Council, and for twenty of these he acted as a Magistrate. He retired from the Town Council in 1900. For almost forty years Mr. Brownlee served on the Galashiels Parochial Board and Parish Council, on both of which he had officiated as Chairman. He was, in fact, the first Chairman of the Parish Council. The work of these Boards did not exhaust his public activities, for he was a member of Melrose Parochial Board for some twenty years, and in connection with his holding of this office it is recorded that during that period he was only absent twice from either Board or committee meetings. His absence on both of these occasions being due to his being in England on business. As showing the deep personal interest he took in his public work, and his anxiety to save the ratepayers' pockets as much as possible, the following may be mentioned from the "Telegraph" of October 28th, 1897:—"Bailie Brownlee, who has just been re-elected chairman of the Galashiels Parish Council, is one of the best public servants in the burgh—a man who when attending other meetings at a distance in the county in most cases pays his travelling expenses out of his own pocket. He deserved for this course of action a vote of thanks. The conference with the above was held at Glasgow upon the Poor Question. After the business there, Mr. Skinner, the Inspector of Poor, stated that Bailie Brownlee had attended the conference at his own expense. It was pointed out to him that the Council was entitled to bear the expenses of their representatives, but he replied that he would pay it himself, whereupon he was duly thanked. The ex-Bailie was eighty-nine years of age. The funeral took place to Ladhope Cemetery, on Saturday, and in spite of the stormy weather was largely attended.

Mr. Brownlee also had a daughter, Mrs. Mary Taylor, mother of Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Mulholland, living at Perry, N. Y.

THE FORUM

ITH

By Rev. V. L. Eggleston

I.

"I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith."

I do not know of any words that better sum up the work and duty of life than these of the great apostle. Life is a battle and its highest and hardest duty is to keep faith, to keep agreements, to do the thing promised to be the thing professed.

"But," replies some one, "it is impossible to be all that one professes. Human nature is weak. The profession is the expression of what we would like to be, the ideal toward which we strive. It is unjust to call a man a deceiver or a hypocrite for not living up to his professions. No one does or can. If we profess anything high or noble, we must often fall short of it."

This is a plausible excuse for many of the short-comings of life, but it is open to criticism. There is a difference between a profession and an ideal. An ideal far above the practical life is right and most praiseworthy, but a profession much above the life is a deception, just as it would be in business.

To say: "I will pay you at a certain date if I am able" is right; but to give a note of hand, absolutely promising payment at a certain date and then failing to pay when due, is not right. It is a disgrace, and is so regarded by every business man, and so it is with moral profession and practice. To say: "I am not what I wish to be, but am striving toward a perfect ideal," is quite right, but to change the ideal into a profession, to give out to the world that we are what the ideal calls for, and then so content ourselves with this profession, without making a decided and daily effort to realize it in practice, is quite another thing. It is what, in business, would be called a false pretense and a fraud, and many so regard it who do not openly say what they think. It is a position that does double harm. It makes us powerless for good, both in regard to the higher things we profess and upon the lower plane of life on which we live, for a false pretense destroys confidence even where confidence is deserved.

II.

The true position of the growing man seems to be the keeping of a high ideal in view and steadily approaching it, though with the knowledge that it can never be perfectly realized, and then a profession of things reasonable and possible and with a full expectation of making them materialize in daily life and with a manly confession that every section falling off from it is a failure, a defalcation, to be made good with all possible dispatch, just as notes in bank are made good when, by some misfortune, they cannot be paid at maturity.

I mean to say that moral promises and professions ought to rank with financial promises and professions and that in the latter case if one promised to pay a note in bank on a certain day, and failed to do so, he would be regarded as a bankrupt, and would be treated as such, and would be the free prey of every man who had the power to do him injury.

It is said that China is the country where professions of morality are most widely divorced from all conversation, standing on the most profuse expressions of honor and obligation, while at heart all is cunning and deceit.

It is easier to believe such things of the distant heathen than of ourselves, but the most promising missionary field is that which any man may discover and cultivate in his own heart and life and especially upon this point of being what we profess to be and making our moral as good as our financial pledges.

III.

But the critic, in this matter of doing as we agree, "lives in a glass house." Hardly any one is exempt from just censure. We are all careless about the pledges we make, the failures to keep a promise, an appointment, the failure to be where we have appointed to be at a certain moment, the failure to pay some trifling sum that we have agreed to pay, the failure to keep our promises, or improvement made to ourselves—all these little and great failures do not cause us half the pain that they ought to. We do not feel disgrace as we ought to when an agreement has been made and broken, as to time or money or anything else that concerns our numerous relations with our fellowmen. The truth is that the failure to keep agreements is the most universal weakness of mortal man.

A universal improvement at this point, and one that is quite possible, would contribute immensely to human happiness and prosperity. It would, many a time, save a merchant from bankruptcy; many a time save to a weary worker half the care and suffering of life, and among friends would immeasurably add to the confidence that man should safely put in his fellowmen.

Does he mean what he says? Will he do as he agrees? Does he hold his word sacred? Will he make a heroic effort to be where he has promised to be and to do what he has promised to do? Is he actually what he advertises himself to be?

Oh, how anxiously these questions are asked of this one and that one, and how hard it is to know the true answer; too often it is only known when it is too late; too often there must be some horrible answer in the negative where life's whole hope and faith expected the affirmative.

IV.

We need a keener ability to judge of human nature, a better faculty for penetrating below the surface and divining the real character before it is too late, before some terrible harm has been done as the result of deceit on the one side and ignorance on the other, and this ability might be and ought to be acquired in early youth by every one who claims to be cultured.

The majority of business men fail at some time or permanently, and this is due in great part to the failure of others to keep their promises. There is hardly a business firm on Main street but is carrying, on its books, a large number of bad debts, often amounting to a sum sufficient to relieve them of all embarrassment in times of stress, often indeed enough to save from bankruptcy. People have agreed to pay them on the agreement so had held overdue, and so a fine business must be crippled or ruined.

A reputation for prompt payment of all obligations and for the faithful keeping of all promises, is the highest evidence of a strong and manly character. The satisfaction there is in having such a reputation ought of itself to be a constant stimulant to its acquirement.

The ability to read human nature and the ability to cultivate it in ourselves, with a gradual advance towards a high ideal of being what we profess and sweep into something still better than we have ever been the true life of man, and aspirations to be to be things that we have not been before, and to be beyond what we are.

To fight the good battle with the world, and with ourselves, within our own daily life, is a noble life, the life which God intends we should live.

BODY IN MILLWHEEL

Jamestown Man Missing a Week, Died From Drowning.

Jamestown, April 9.—The body of James H. Warren of Cowing Hollow was found wound around the millwheel at the plant of the Jamestown Metallic Bed Company, at 9 o'clock, this morning. Warren had been missing since last Sunday. The police were asked to search for him last Wednesday.

The company has been having considerable trouble reducing the flow of water over the generators. This led to the finding of his body. His coat had become firmly wound around the generator wheels.

It is supposed that Warren fell into the raceway some distance above the wheel. Coroner Illston has issued a certificate of death by drowning. Warren was a machinist. He leaves a wife and two children.

There Is Much To Do In Getting The Family Ready For

Easter

For ALL must have "something new"—the old saying being that the wearing of new clothes on Easter brings good fortune all the year.

Then, too, Easter marks the height of the season this year. That is why we have made more than usual preparations. In these departments most appealed to, Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, Millinery, Ready-to-Wear Garments, you will find every requirement of the 1916 styles. WE ARE READY. ARE YOU?

Suits - Coats - Dresses

Styles That Have Permanency And the most refined Elegance

A happy combination. The styles of this store are not selected for their first lining unusualness, but are considered from the viewpoint of the wearer, who requires fashionable garments of superior elegance in design and tailoring. Individuality without "freakishness" is a marked characteristic.

THE LATEST SUITS—Include belted models, youthful and becoming, fitted tailored flare suits for the tall slender women. Mandarin effects, braid bound suits and simple tailored effects.

COATS—Of wearable blue serges, wool poplins, checks, taffeta and serge combinations, velours and mixtures for street and motoring, and a great many models of decided sport styles.

DRESSES—Taffeta silks, crepe de chines, combined with chiffons and georgette crepe, many of them with delicate embroideries in gold or silver.

This is, indeed, a garment store for every woman who expects the newest styles and the most excellent qualities.

Millinery Of The Moment

Remarkably Beautiful and Becoming Millinery.

Hundreds of them—no two alike.

A Hat for every purse. The famous Gage Hats and the more simple adaptions of the latest Millinery modes by our own milliners.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreadful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

MISSES COLORED GIRL ON BET; FINED $4.50

Court Sees Humor of Situation and Lets Man Off Easy

Pittsburg, April 17.—Raymond Watkins, of Homeville, bet a friend a dollar he would kiss the first girl that passed him. He did. She was black, and indignant as well. Watkins, after collecting the bet, was arrested and paid a fine of $4.50, thereby losing $3.50.

Watkins and his friend were standing on a corner when the bet was made. Estella Stanton 18, a negress, turned the corner, gazing sideways into the street, when Watkins gently seized her and planted the kiss on her cheek.

She called a cop; Squire Hahn heard the facts, saw the humor and let Watkins off with the payment of costs, amounting to $4.50.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No Other Newspaper in the World Gives so Much at so Low a Price.

There has never been a time when a newspaper was more needed in the household. The great war in Europe has now entered its second year, with no promise of an end for a long time. These are world-shaking events in which the United States, willing or unwilling, has been compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

The presidential contest also will soon be at hand. Already candidates for the nomination are in the field, and the campaign, owing to the extraordinary character of the times, will be of supreme interest. No other newspaper will inform you with the promptness and cheapness of the Thrice-a-Week edition of the New York World.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The ANDOVER NEWS together for one year for $1.75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.
