America! Always and forever!

* * *

And for what are you prepared

* * *

Politeness, like paint, is often spread on for effect.

* * *

Straw hats and perspiration will soon be ambling along.

* * *

No one is necessarily good because he is making good.

* * *

But, then, the fellow who disagrees with you is always a mutt.

* * *

Boys will be boys, but some are too devilishly boyish to run at large.

* * *

Another week has passed into history and we love you just as much as ever.

* * *

The man who earns his wages invariably finds a wage waiting to be earned.

* * *

You can't generally gauge the quality of a man's kindness by the affection of his dog.

* * *

There are times though when our wise men are just as foolish as the rest of us.

* * *

Boost the fellow who boosts for good roads. He deserves it and the roads need it.

* * *

The essence of wisdom is to keep one eye on the Mexican and the other on the Jap.

* * *

The political pot keeps right on bubbling over and soon there will be nothing left but the nominees.

* * *

Peace talk keeps right on bubbling up over in Europe and as religiously bobs right down again.

* * *

Who says the world isn't on the move? You can see a murder almost any night by going to the movies.

* * *

The man with money never lacks for friends. But, then, some of them have more love for the money than for the man.

* * *

You will never be able to sprinkle syrup on the tail of a fly so long as you wait for the other fellow to catch it for you.

* * *

They say that some facts are stranger than fiction. But what modern male wants to worry his noodle over just plain facts?

* * *

It is comparatively easy to get anything within reason that you want. The only difficulty is in making up your mind to go after it.

* * *

Some fellows are always looking around to see whether the other fellows are working or not. And that is why the boss is always watching them.

* * *

Before marriage some men take their best girls out and scatter money to the winds. But five years later wifey often yearns longingly for the price of a stick of gum.

* * *

Senizer Don Venustiano Carranza opened his mouth and emitted a terrific roar the other day. This time he kicked us out of Mexico in one breath and conceded that we are still there in the next.

* * *

It is true, nevertheless, that a fool can sit down on his knees in the street, plow up the dirt, and every wise man in sight will rush over to see what's in the ground.

* * *

It has remained for the modern dentist to solve the unsolvable problem. When a woman gets into his chair her mouth is harnessed up to such an extent that it is utterly impossible for her to articulate a single word.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE CONFERENCE

There will be a conference at the Farm Bureau Office at Belmont, Friday, June 9th, at 10 a. m., between Director Edward Van Alstyne, Albany, C. J. Crosby, of the Extension Department and the purpose of locat- s' Institutes and Ex- ools in the county, for

LOCKING THE DOOR TOO LATE

When a farmer owns a valuable blooded horse he protects himself from loss at the hands of thieves by putting a padlock on his barn door.

The banker who cares for your money locks it up in his great burglar proof safe at night.

When the merchant goes home after the day's labor he leaves his goods under lock and key and bolts and bars.

The individual invariably takes measures to protect his own.

But not so with us as a nation. We have accumulated vast stores of wealth, but have neglected to provide the necessary means for the protection of that wealth.

It is true that after months of indifference congress has at last passed a preparedness measure by providing for the increase of the regular army and the National Guard to a total approximate force of about 700,000. But it will be several years before this force can be gathered together and armed and equipped and drilled and disciplined and put in shape to meet an enemy on equal terms. In the meantime we are just about where we were before the bill was passed—without a lock to our door.

It is not likely now that we will have any trouble with European countries after the present war is over. We sincerely hope not.

But we are not so sanguine as to the attitude of Japan. Our present state of national helplessness has forced congress and the administration to bow to the demands of Japan and eliminate from an immigration bill certain sections which were designed to protect American laboring men from the cheap Japanese labor that has been flooding this country. There was no help for it. It was a case of bow or fight, and we are in no condition to fight.

If Japan would be content with her victory all might even yet be fairly well. But it is doubtful if she will be content. The Japanese are a warlike people, determinedly bent upon securing equal rights on the American continent.

And right here enters the present element of danger to our peace and security of the future.

The Mexicans hate everything American. They are imbued with the mistaken idea that we are a people who will not fight, and hence they consider us beneath their contempt.

It is reasonably well known that Mexican emissaries are in Japan seeking the aid of the Japanese people in a war against the United States. Nothing would suit the Japanese designs and purposes better than such an alliance. It would afford them the coveted opportunity and excuse for seizing the Philippines, which they greatly desire. A great army could be landed on our Pacific coast and we could not prevent it. Another tremendous army of Japanese could be landed in Mexico, and in co-operation with the Mexicans could invade us across the border at a hundred different points simultaneously. Our present military strength is so ridiculously small that we would be hopelessly outnumbered and outmatched at every point.

Press dispatches show every indication that the Mexicans are expecting just such an alliance with the Japanese, and if the attack comes at all it will not be delayed until we have had two or three years in which to collect and drill an army. It will come soon, while we are still in a hopeless and helpless condition.

The American people are at last awaking to a realization of the peril of our national helplessness, and congress is taking hesitating steps toward defense for our homes and our great wealth. But are we locking the door too late? Will the marauder gain entrance before the padlock can be made?

A stick of dynamite is a child's toy compared with the Mexican-Japanese situation which confronts the American government and people to-day.

A single word from Tokyo or Mexico City is of more vital concern to us than a whole column from the European front.

As The Editor Sees It.

Much of our future success in this country depends upon our ability to keep our young men on the farms and away from the cities. Statistics show that the farms are gradually becoming depopulated and the cities are being overcrowded, with from two to five men waiting for every job. If our young men would stick to the farms, and improve and develop the uncultivated acres, it would be doubled and trebled. Bright lights and white ways appeal to the young eye, but they do not feed empty stomachs. The farm is a good place to be and a far better place to stay.

* * *

It will not be difficult to keep the farmer trade in this town if our business men go after it in the right way. But waiting and drifting will not do it. The farmer must be convinced by cold facts that it is to his interest to do all of his trading in his town, but it will take something besides empty words to do it. He is a man of facts, and nothing but facts will have any weight with him. Hence, we repeat, it is our duty to get together and remedy the defets in our commercial system that now exist and make conditions such that the farmer will turn to this town instinctively as the most logical and profitable place to trade.

* * *

Now who will make the start in this kind of a forward movement? If each one waits for the other we will simply keep on drifting until we all drift under the see our home town more forward, and this paper will be right behind him and pushing and shoving to the limit, for we want he sod. Let a leader step forward and keep right on moving and climbing. If you know of a man who would make an ideal leader, go and tell him so—punch him, wake him up, start him to doing something. Then do your own share to encourage him and help him along. If you are the one for a leader, step out and let us see you, and hear you, and perhaps in the end we will be able to do something besides just drift, drift, drift.

WHERE DRUGGIST WINS.

"Is there any profit in selling postage stamps?" inquired the man in search of information.

"Not directly," replied the druggist, "but it gets people into the habit of going to the drug store, and after that it doesn't take long to make chronic invalids of them."—Kansas City Star.

Chances to buy so-called "second-hand" things, often good as new and only half as expensive, are continually appearing in the "For Sale Ads."

It's the pleasantest time of the year to "take a look" at advertised real estate. No matter whether you're quite ready, to buy or keep investigating.

MEMORIAL DAY

our country and our free institutions from nations that were empire mad.

He said that the two greatest heroes of the Civil War were Generals Grant and Sherman, and paid both most flattering tributes and repeating the poem by James Whitcomb Riley entitled "Grant."

A little over nineteen hundred years ago a peasant boy was born in Judea of Galilee the speaker continued. He was the son of a day laborer, born in poverty. He grew to manhood on the sunny plains of Palestine. He had a song in his heart, and a story to tell. He was born under the dominion of the Roman empire. After he had come to maturity he sang his song and told his story. In brief this was his story. That God was the father at all. All men were His children, therefore all men were brothers and sons of God. He taught that in the sight of God all men were equal. During most of the centuries preceeding might had made right and kings and princes ruled as suited them best.

The common people flocked to hear the teachings of this man because he was attempting to lift them up to his standard, but the in authority hated him because they believed that he strove to drag them down to the level of the peasantry. They were mistaken. He was striving to lift all men up. His enemies killed him. He died a felon's death without having left a single written word, so far as we know, and it seemed that his life had been a failure. But he told the truth, and truth is mighty and must prevail.

Years rolled on and centuries passed by His followers grew stronger and stronger. Men began to realize the truth of His story. There came a time when there was organized in Eastern Europe from among the so-called Christian nations the Great Army of the Cross. The soldiers of this army were called the Crossbearers, or Crusaders. Their object was to march into Palestine and rescue the sepulchre of Jesus Christ from the control of the infidels. Every man, private and officer, wore upon his breast an emblem of the cross. The hilt of every sword was made in the form of a cross. The crusaders set forth to battle for the glory of that peasant boy, who died so many, many years before. It was a visionary army. They were going to make war upon men who had never known them, who knew practically nothing about the teachings of Jesus Christ, for the purpose of gaining control of the land around his sepulchre.

If ever the soldiers of any army were entitled to wear upon their breasts the emblem of the cross, if ever any army had a right to use the cross as its motto, and have it engraved upon its armorial bearings, that army was the one in which you fought, for you went forth to uphold the permanency and integrity of a country whose primal declaration is that "all men are created equal," that they all have the same inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuits of happiness. You went forth to free four million slaves and give them this same important privilege. You went forth to perpetuate and sustain the principles which Christ taught, and you were more truly the Army of the Cross than the crusading army that marched into Palestine.

When you were in the Army the scouts and videtts preceeded you in advancing into a new country. When a river was reached that had to be crossed a guard was established at the ford to protect the crossing. After the main Army had crossed the rear guard, that had been left at the ford, crossed also.

You are the rear guard of the army left at the ford on eastward side of the river of life. Companies, regiments, brigades and divisions have safely crossed before you, while you have been so faithfully protecting the ford. In fancy I look across life's river into the beautiful country beyond and see that the larger part of that grand army is safely over, still farther ahead across the river I see advancing up the beautiful, radiant hills of eternal life the scouts and videtts. I discover that the young men, beardless boys first who fell in battle, those boys who went before gave their lives for their cause for liberty, when they went. They have gained eternal life are always young.

To you, the veterans of the rear guard, we would say the bugles are almost ready to sound the last advance, the drums are almost ready to beat the last forward march, the rear guard, and when you shall to cross the river, you are entitled to wear the crown on your breasts, to bear aloft your banners. You fought for brotherhood of mankind and rights for all.

As long as history shall remain will your deeds be honored, as long as men love liberty and freedom, will your works live. As long and as enduring as fatherhood of God will your accomplishment be glorified.

...of Great... ...mind US"

Lord Strathcona, who rose from the humble rank of a trapper for the Hudson Bay Company to one of the strongest men in the British Empire, died the other day full of years and honor. He always insisted that his success in life was due to three things: INTEGRITY, THOROUGHNESS, DILIGENCE. It was this trinity of words in action that made him a good trapper, a successful officer of the company for which he worked, that built the great Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Lord Strathcona had great opportunities and he rose to them. His real capital was the three words that are the working capital that every young man may have without bond or interest. They will work for any man who will work with them. The certain reward is character and competency.

And this matter of competency, provision for age and dependents, is the severely practical issue of your life. It does not come to you in chunks, but in modest portion, and it is the care and safety of the weekly and monthly portions that —Everybody is urged in attending the pictures at the Auditorium to arrive in time to see either the first or second performance from the beginning, that is, to see Reel No. 1 first. When one arrives so as to see the third or fourth reel first one does not get the "punch" of the play and keen interest is not awakened and the pictures are not so much enjoyed. It is like reading the last chapters of a book first, after which the first pages can have but little interest. To make it convenient for every one to see the program from the start, two exhibiitons are given each Wednesday and Saturday evenings, beginning at 7:30 and about 9 o'clock. The early show makes it easy to take the children and get home early. The 9 o'clock show can be attended by those who have shopping and other affairs to see to and see the show afterwards. The Band concerts too, which soon commence, end at 9 o'clock — just in time for the last performance. The Paramount Pictures now being shown are too good to see wrong end to. Be there at 7:30 or 9 hereafter and enjoy these beautiful pictures to their fullest.

SLEEP.

I cannot sleep, the yokel said.
It seems I'm shifty in the head,
when I put in to clear. No nods are hatted 'neath my roof. I'm mighty wrecked from head to hoof. I'm going bugs I fear.
There is for me no sweet repose.
No naps I cop; I cannot doze.
I am a wretched guy. The Somnus kid has scampered hence and who can tell just when or whence. He'll put a nick in I. The poor unsteady boob was sad. I said to him,
Wouldst thou be glad, an earful
I will hand. He said if you will slip the guff I'll soak it up; no thought I'll muff. I've tried to stick, but fanned. Said I, 'tis well; just follow me and slumbers
I will give to thee, but you must go it straight. Cut out the jitney torch and suds and blow your coin for steak and spuds and clean house in the pate.
Then floor a job and hold 'er
