cent. in membership before September first, if possible.

The Y. P. B. hour was conducted by Mrs. Jennie Crawford of Angelica, who gave a report of the convention recently held in Rome.

Mr. Stratton, President of the Y. P. B., was introduced and spoke enthusiastically of that organization.

Miss Rice, one of the Y. P. B's, read an address on tobacco which was given at the convention. He says there is twice as much land devoted to the culture of tobacco to-day as there was 10 years ago. Less wheat and corn and fewer cattle and hogs than 10 years ago.

The music for the evening session was given by the young people of Genesee and Bolivar.

Mrs. Walker, the speaker of the evening, gave a most interesting address, taking for her subject the story of David and the five small stones with which he armed himself to fight Goliath.

Reports of Superintendents, a preliminary drill by Mrs. Walker, and the reading of two prize essays, Miss Reva Clark of Andover being the prize winner, were items on the morning program.

A most helpful Bible reading was given by Mrs. Lytie Davis, who also pronounced the noontide prayer.

The devotionals for the afternoon were conducted by Mrs. A. F. Bennett, of Cuba. The first order of the afternoon was the election of officers, which resulted in returning all the old officers with the exception of vice-president, Mrs. Lytie P. Davies being chosen to succeed Mrs. R. B. Burrows.

The resolution committee reported as follows:

The members of the 37th Annual Convention of Allegany County W. C. T. U. desire to express our profound gratitude to our divine Leader for His beneficent care and guidance during the year which is past.

Looking for the speedy overthrow of the liquor traffic we concentrate our lives anew to those principles for which our organization has so loyally stood in the past.

Realizing that a dying foe is a desperate one, we would emphasize the importance of united effort and unflagging energy, and we pledge ourselves to stand in the fight face to face to the foe, and trust that if we die in the battle a post mortem examination will discover no bullets in our back.

Resolved, That we still pledge our allegiance to that political party that embodies in its platform the principles of total prohibition of the liquor traffic for the individual, state and nation.

Resolved, That we will give our support to those publications which refuse advertisements of liquor and tobacco, declining to bring into our homes anything that acts as agents for these great evils.

Resolved, That recognizing the fact that a large part of the present public sentiment against alcohol and other narcotics is due to scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, we recommend special attention to the work of this department.

Resolved, That we view with alarm the increasing use of Coca-Cola and other so-called soft drinks which contain ingredients of a habit-forming character, and we greatly deplore the fact that these advertisements are so generally found in our church papers and religious periodicals.

Resolved, That we continue to emphasize our belief in a single standard of morals for men and women, and that those must be recognized and practiced if the health and vigor of the nation are to be maintained.

Resolved, That we hail with delight the young and enthusiastic workers which are being brough into the organization, splendid activities of Y. P. B. and L. T. L and we pledge ourselves to do all in our power to aid and encourage these, our offsprings, as a mother should.

Resolved, That we still hold our position as steadfast and enthusiastic believers in "Votes for Women" and we will continue to educate our members, that they may be fully prepared to intelligently assume the responsibilit of voting citizens.

Resolved, That we extend our sincere thanks to the pastor and trustees of this church for the use of the building, to the people who have opened their homes for our entertainment, to the musicians and to all others who have aided in any way to make this convention a success and inspiration.

WHY PROGRESSIVES ENDORSE HUGHES

those two men will direct the affairs of this nation during the next four years. And the Progressives, convinced that of the two Mr. Hughes is the more efficient and the more American, will use the Republican party in order to elect him.

A logical, resolute and self-denying patriotism would be strangely garbed in sackcloth and ashes. In co-operating with the Republicans in this campaign, the Progressives will do so as a matter of civic duty, because they believe that thereby they can best help to rescue the nation from unworthy hands.

And whatever may be the result to the Republican party and its ticket the Progressives are assured of a large measure of victory. If they should provide enough votes to restore Americanism as the moving principle in the government of this country, the triumph will be theirs. But in any event, they have the consciousness of having dictated the anti-Democratic platform and of having compelled the nomination of the one man, rather than Theodore Roosevelt, whom they believe fit for the Presidency in this crisis.

Though Mr. Hughes should fail of election and it should be shown that the Republican party has so fallen in public esteem and confidence as to be incapable of winning even with Progressive support, the Progressives will still have the satisfaction of knowing that they put duty above all personal and party considerations and did the big, patriotic thing for the benefit of the naion. —Philadelphia North American.

CHEAPER CHECK COLLECTIONS

Country Wide Payments by Local Checks Facilitated Through New Federal Reserve Plan.

To facilitate the transfer of money from one part of the country to another, the Federal Reserve Banks inaugurated on July 15th the country wide system for collecting bank checks. This is an event in the development of the Federal Reserve System, second in importance only to the opening of the twelve Federal reserve banks' in November, 1914.

Speaking of its effects, R. H. Treman, Deputy Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York says: "The use of checks instead of currency for the payment of debts is a custom that now prevails almost universally throughout the United States. For this reason the question of effecting the prompt and economical collection of checks, especially those payable at a distance, has been for years past a problem of ever-increasing difficulty, the complexity of which has been growing with the development of the country's business.

"The banks themselves have usually made arrangements with each other for these collections, which in many cases have not been entirely satisfactory. The routes chosen have often been round-about, thus necessitating a waste of time in collecting the items, and some abuses have grown up in connection therewith so that these arrangements have never produced a simple, comprehensive and scientific plan, such as is now contemplated by the plan inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board.

"The new system is of importance to every one who receives out-of-town checks, or has out-of-town remittances to make. The reduced cost of check collections will be of general benefit. The actual and proper cost of transfer of money between points will be more equitably distributed, that is, some items formerly collected free will properly carry a small charge, while items on which heretofore somewhat excessive charges have been made will now bear a charge approximately equivalent to actual cost of collection.

"There will be less money tied up in the mails and each community generally will probably benefit by the retention in the local banks of funds which have hitherto been transferred to the larger cities as a necessary incident to the existing collection arrangements.

"This new collection system is only one of many benefits which the operation of the Federal Reserve System will bring to the business interests of the country and which will inevitably result in better and more scientific banking methods. The country has already benefited through the freedom from currency panics which the Federal Reserve Act has ensured, and the greater stability in the supply and cost of credit which the system is bringing about.

"In order to bring about this needed reform, the national banks and the state banks which are co-operating with the Federal Reserve System, are called upon to forego the income from 'exchange' charges which they have been receiving for remitting for checks drawn upon themselves. This will result in a general revision of the relations between the banks and that class of depositors whose accounts have been carried at an actual loss to the bank. These depositors will undoubtedly be asked either to keep their balances sufficiently large to compensate the bank for the services rendered, or to pay the bank a reasonable, though nominal, sum for such services, so that the bank will not be required to perform any service at a loss. Many bank depositors probably fail to realize the items of cost in banking. For instance, every check passing through the average size bank costs from two to three cents to handle, and this is typical of similar small items of expense which have entailed some loss, the aggregate of which is quite large.

"The various changes made necessary in the banks in the development of this banking system which is producing results so advantageous to the country have entailed upon the member banks some losses of revenue, and the business community should properly be expected to share the cost of the evolution of the system."

CONCERNING SUFFRAGE

There are thousands of women in New York State who are justified in feeling that the government of men has not given to them a square deal and that they couldn't do any worse for themselves if they were voters. Those women are the workers in hotels and restaurants and ticket sellers who are not protected by the nine hour lay which limits the work of women in stores and factories.

The Duff Bill introduced into the last legislature would have remedied this defect, but both justice and chivalry were "out of town" at Albany and thousands of tired women will work inhuman hours in consequence.

Premier Hughes of Australia, who has been much before the English people during present war times, when asked recently about suffrage in Australia replied that the women were much interested in politics in his country; that they voted in as great a proportion as men; and that the experiment in democracy had been entirely satisfactory.

In the equal suffrage state of Oregon, the Oregon Child Welfare Commission is sending a child welfare exhibit about the state. The Commission has explained that one of the things it is trying to show the state is how it can escape the record of New York State where one-fifth of the state revenue goes for the maintenance of defective persons."

Ida M. Tarbell, not so long ago numbered as ananti-suffrage asset struck many a blow for suffrage in her press reports of the Chicago political conventions. She paid high tribute to the importance and sagacity of the new Women Voter's Party and declared it to be the "oneclean definite piece of work in all the frantic uncertainity" of convention doings.

HUGHES FOR SUFFRAGE

In a recent interview with the Republican candidate for president, Hon. Charles E. Hughes he announced that he was formerly opposed to equal suffrage but that he had changed his mind. He saw that there is a growing demand by women everywhere for the vote and if men continued to oppose that demand, women might organize on sex lines which would be a deplorable thing for the country. Therefore he believed that the vote should be granted to them by the most expeditious method possible.

Who Is This Man?

YOU may be one of thousands who have said that they "don't like lectures." The Chautauqua management had you especially in mind when they planned their program. They put this man, Dr. George P. Bible, on the list as a lecturer because they knew you'd say when you had heard him that he "was the real goods," or words to that effect.

He keeps his audience on the edge of their seats because he knows how to talk and says things that they want to hear. Out of seventy-five Chautauqua audiences he addressed two years ago more than 50 per cent wrote in asking for his return.

So we KNOW what he can do, and we KNOW you'll like him. HEAR HIM!

EVER HEAR A BALALAIKA?

THE peasants in Russia are fond of playing the balalaika, a stringed instrument that makes the most haunting and bewitching music you could well imagine. It is an instrument common to the Slav races and has been played for generations and generations, and its primitive form remains unchanged to this day. The gypsies have used the balalaika in their festivities and dances for as far back as the customs of the strange people can be traced, and altogether it is a most unique instrument!

To Be Played Here

It is featured by Loseff's Imperial Russian Quartet in their third day Chautauqua program and will be played to the accompaniment of folk songs and folk dances exactly as it is played by the Russian peasants. The Imperial Russian Quartet will appear in gorgeous Russian military costumes, and their programs on the third day of the Chautauqua promise to be prominent features of the first days' entertainment.

Don't forget that season tickets bring the cost of the Chautauqua to only a few cents a number, and you should get yours TODAY.
