DISTRESSING RHEUMATISM

How many people, crippled and lame from rheumatism, owe their condition to neglected or incorrect treatment!

It is the exact combination of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil with glycerine and hypophosphites as contained in that has made Scott's famous for relieving rheumatism when other treatments have utterly failed.

If you are a rheumatism sufferer, or feel its first symptoms, start on Scott's Emulsion at once. IT MAY BE EXACTLY WHAT YOU NEED.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 16-s steading, that was evident. If it was a mining venture there was nothing to keep secret. The drive pointedly asked the girl how long she had lived there, and the evasive answer was "altogether too long."

We ate our lunch, hitched up the team and drove on. I left a couple of magazines at the spring. A half a mile out I looked back and she had found the books. She waved one of them at us.

A few miles from the house we found a little grocery store owned by a breed and we asked him who the people were at the cabin. He replied he did not know anyone lived there, that no strangers bought food at his store so the why will always be one to guess on.

The driver had an automatic revolver and he shot at jack rabbit a dozen times with clean misses, and after I had ridiculed his marksmanship he handed the gun to me to try on a big jack reared up a few rods from the trail. As I was about to shoot the rabbit shifted his position and a mesquite cluster shut him off. I got out of the buggy and walker around the bushes to get a shot when I heard that buzz, a noise that will send any man up in the air, even if he never heard it before—the rattle of a diamond-back.

I yelled, jumped and then looked. There coiled the fat snake with his ugly head up from the middle of the coil, and that rabbit I was after had to dodge to escape being run over by me.

The driver got back at me with ridicule, so I went back to get a shot at the snake. He crawled into the brush. I cut a stick and asked the driver to help me prod the snake out. I wanted his rattles. They must have been big ones, for I can hear them yet. But the team frightened at the buzz and the scent of the snake, would not stand, so the snake is there yet, and probably has all his rattles.

Man or beast instinctively know the rattle, and danger of these snakes. The first time I ever heard the buzz I knew what it was. An old rim of a camp horse will go wild if it gets near a rattler, and range cattle and sheep will often be stampeded by one snake.

It is said animals have learned the rattle and the scent by association with the danger, but this is not true. A rancher told me he was thrown from a saddle-pony that had just arrived from New York, when the horse suddenly came near a snake. He said it was in the fall when the snakes were shedding their skin, and when they are said to be blind; that the snake did not rattle and that the horse could not have seen it. But an instinct, scent or something warned the horse and it suddenly shied and throwed him. Afterward he found the snake in the brush.

In the middle of the afternoon a tire on one of the wheels came loose and we stopped while the driver cut wedges and fastened it on. Nearby was a mound covered with mesquite, so I beat it for the shade and what I could find. Anything like a mound in the southwest has always interested me. I know what is under many of them.

Some other fellow also knew—and he had beaten me to this one. Some one had dug a hole about four feet across straight down for about eight feet, then started a tunnel from the bottom into the mound. This cut thru a wall of mud and rocks.

This mound, like hundreds of others in Arizona, was the ruin of an ancient habitation. It had fallen into ruin, shrubbery had grown over it, and for centuries the foundation walls had been locked up and preserved.

I called the driver to come. He started on a run calling to know what I had found, and when I answered an old ruin he turned back and flatly refused to see it, and he advised me to quit fussing around that hill as it was time to beat it.

"What is there to see?" he asked. as we drove on. "A wall," I said. "But a wall don't get you nothing, and it ain't much to look at."

I explained to him that when that wall was laid the most learned men of the world thought the world was flat, and there was not a white man on the whole western continent.

"But what difference does that make to the looks of the wall? I've got one around a calf pen that looks just like it. Why don't you go bugs over that?" And he was so completely disgusted with him that I drained the canteen and let his tongue hang out for the rest of the drive.

I tried to find out more about the mound ruin and who had been the explorer, but none of the ranchers I asked knew anything about it. From the appearance of the earth thrown out it had been done a year or two before, but whether by a government explorer or curiosity seeker like myself, I could not know.

This was a small mound, perhaps 30 feet across, and was doubtless the ruin of a single building. The curious circumstance was there was no other mounds or anything that could be ruins anywhere else in that locality, while nearly all the ancient ruins I have seen have been in clusters or in communities. An another singular thing was there was no water anywhere near it, or any draw or ravine that could ever have carried water. The mound was on a level prairie.

It takes weeks and months to excavate a ruin carefully, and one needs teams, plows and scrapers. For centuries they have grown over with mesquite, whose long roots make digging very hard and slow, and the fact that nearly all the prehistoric ruins are remote from habitation, is the reason why more of them have not been excavated. A complete camping outfit is necessary to undertake the work.

I hope the man who dug that tunnel into the mound may see this story. I hope some day he is going back to uncover the ancient home and bring to light relics that have laid in that tomb no doubt for a thousand years—the utensils of a race of people that lived in the southwest centuries before Columbus was born, and of whom there is no history. And I hope when he goes back he will ask me to be one of the diggers. I will contract to work eight hours a day, stay on the job to completion and work for my board — and what relics I can hide out when he isn't looking.

By Hamilton B. Williams

The human race is growing taller mentally and spiritually. There is moral apprehension at all events how meager soever the application. But it is something to know that there is Truth and Good and Beauty. It has been a long trail up from the jungles in which we once lived, and evolutionary processes are slow. We are growing. The Christ above all has been a revolutionary force in the development of the race. It was only five hundred years before this day that God was conceived as universal. Up to the time of Jeremiah Jehorah was only a clan-god and limited to a particular people and place. Jesus contributed the idea of God being not only the only God, but a Father. Logically the brotherhood of men was the next step, and although even to-day it is not a matter of actuality, it is conceived as a possibility.

In Jesus we see ourselves as we ought to be, as we shall be when we have grown up.

We see in Jesus a real man and not a ghostly religious concept, a real man, point for point, and like unto us. For too many ages the Christ has been vague and unreal. The race shall leap to him when he is made to be what he is in our religious teaching. It is a matter of fellowship we insist upon our Friend being like ourselves. We are willing to grant Him lordship and we want Him to be perfect in human dimensions. We must grow into the likeness of a real human being. The measure of the kingdom of Jesus must be set forth in spiritual diameters. When we plumb the depths to which human sympathy may go, send out a line as far as fraternity may outreach, lift eyes to the heights of Right, gleaning words, and see our stretching the trail of eternal life that has God as journey's end, we shall then have some idea of the magnitude of the kingdom of Jesus.

We are as tall as we see things.

The Rise and Fall of Presidents

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—History records that Andrew Jackson was elected in 1832 and was the last Democratic President up to the present time to succeed himself. Martin Van-Buren followed Andrew Jackson, but since the Whig party was formed only one Democratic President, Franklin Pierce, has had a Democratic successor.

The Federal party lasted 12 years, and Washington and Adams belonged to it. Adams' administration was so unpopular that it killed the party. The Whig party was in power eight years. The Democratic party is the only political organization dating back to the early days of the Republic, having named the Presidents for 64 years. The Republican party has controlled during 44 years.

George Washington was 57 years old when inaugurated, and he was sworn in at the head of Wall Street, April 30, 1789. A statue in front of the sub-treasury, marks the spot. The campaign was conducted in a narrow area, only 100 to 200 miles wide, along the coast from Boston to Savannah, and less than 4,000,000 people were concerned.

John Adams served but one term, and sixteen states cast their electoral vote for him. The leading of the Federalistic party became aristocratic, and it died. However, Adams did not and he lived to be 91.

Thomas Jefferson was a member of Washington's cabinet, and the founder of the Democratic party. He was the first President to be inaugurated in the new Capitol at Washington.

James Madison was a Democrat, as also was James Manroe, and the latter did good work in fixing up our present constitution. John Quincy Adams, who had attained distinction as a diplomat, followed, and he, as well as his successor, Andrew Jackson, belonged to the Democratic party. Jackson had great natural power, and it is related in his biography that he was taken prisoner at one time by the British. An officer ordered him to clean his boots, and Jackson indignantly refused, and was struck a severe blow on his face with a sword, which left him scarred for life.

Martin VanBuren came next, being elected from the votes of 26 states. He was a Democrat, and his administration was marked by trouble with Indians.

The Whigs came into power by the election of William Henry Harrison. The new President caught a severe cold at the inauguration, and died within a month. John Tyler served out the term.

The Democrats returned to power with James K. Polk, who had the Mexican war on his hands. The Oregon boundary line was established in this administration, and the Department of Interior was created.

The Whigs won the following election with Zackary Taylor, who was a military hero on account of his part in the Seminole and Mexican wars. He died in office, and the term was completed by Millard Fillmore, who served for three years.

Franklin Pierce, a Democrat, followed. Then came James Buchanan of the same party. Buchanan subdued the Normans in Utah, and John Brown's raid at Harper's Ferry was during his administration.

Abraham Lincoln was elected by the Republicans, and 33 states voted in the electoral college. He was succeeded by Andrew Johnson, and the latter was impeached by the House, but acquitted by the Senate.

U. S. Grant was a Republican, and a military hero. At the close of his term he went around the world, and was received everywhere with great pomp and ceremony. He engaged in banking in New York, but the firm of Grant & Ward failed. Grant wrote his memoirs, and the family fortune was reestablished.

Rutherford B. Hayes defeated James G. Blaine for the Republican nomination, and served after a great contest in which many Democrats claim until this day that Tilden should have had the office.

James A. Garfield was elected as a Republican, and his term was filled out by Chester A. Arthur.

Then followed Grover Cleveland, first of the Democratic Presidents since the Civil War. He was the first president to be married in the White House. Benjamin Harrison succeeded him as a Republican, but Cleveland came back at the expiration of the Harrison term.

There followed William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft, Republicans. Then Woodrow Wilson Democrat.

All of which "old truths" contain a good deal of "now information" or "things forgotten," for most people who have followed out this story.

Uncle Sam's Money Is Up

What will be the attitude of the United States towards foreign commerce is a question very simply answered, if one will forget the matter as a political issue, and examine into the activities of the American International Corporation. The title indicates that foreign affairs are a question of concern. Fifty million dollars is "up," and such names of captains of finance and industry as Percy Rockefeller, Theodore N. Vail, Charles A. Stone, Lovett, Corey, and a lot of others, appear means that hundreds of millions of Yankee dollars have been pledged to one of the most colossal enterprises in the history of American business. South America, China, Europe and Asia, are being invaded with plans for financing enterprise and industry American capitalists have arisen to the occasion, and while politicians have been talking it over, our big business men have actually gotten into the game. Tariffs, treaties, wars, navies — and all that sort of Government concern, may take its regular course, but the mobilization of finance and industrial resources has not waited. It has organized for the purpose of sending mining machinery, dredges, locomotives, rail road cars, bridges, electrical machinery, and facilities of all kinds to harness the energy and natural resources of South America and other countries where commerce and trade has been dead for a century waiting for the very movement now concerned in this new undertaking.

Twenty-five years ago "English capital" controlled flouring mills, breweries, railroads and factories, throughout the United States. During the past two years millions of securities have been "coming back" and now Europe, England included, makes its banking arrangement of the United States. Suddenly we have become the great creditor nation of the world. It brings the United States face to face with a leading part in world-affairs.

The missionaries and priests always do the social pioneering in new lands, but by the time they arrive on the job they always find that capital has preceded them. So it is in the pioneering of world commerce—finance has started out and is blazing the pathway — and the Government will be along after awhile.

LASSEN WIPING OUT LAKE

Ashy Mud Steadily Filling Water of Manzanita.

Ashy mud flowing in a steady stream from Lasse Peak's crater is pouring into Manzanita lake. Forest rangers coming to Redding, Cal., report that the lake will be obliterated in 18 months or two years if the flow continues at the rate that has been kept up for three weeks or more.

Ordinarily the water of Lake Manzanita is a solear as that of Lake Tahoe pebbles being countable at a depth of 100 feet. Now the water is ashen in color and thickening like mush near the shore, which is gradually crowding into the lake.

Suffered Great Pain

Letter Tells of Long-Sought-for Remedy.

Dear Mr. Editor—I am making a personal appeal to your readers who are bothered with kidney and bladder troubles and rheumatism, to give up the use of harsh salts, or alcoholic liquors or medicines and in their place take a short treatment of "Anuric" and be convinced of its wonderful virtues as I was. I suffered great pain, had a great deal of irritation, water became foul, tried everything advised but with no results. I sent for a box of "Anuric Tablets" and soon discovered they brought relief. I have used them since, and now the water is natural, my health good, my appetite splendid. Some of the doctors pronounced my trouble enlarged prostate. Now I have no more trouble and I most assuredly feel that this latest discovery of Dr. Pierce's is the best remedy for bladder and kidney troubles that I know of. If I can induce anyone to give it a trial, I feel that he will thank me for calling attention to this great boon that relieves this seemingly worst of all troubles that human flesh can call heir to.

(Signed) H. H. PLESSINE.

NOTE: Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach, or send 10 cents for large trial package.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic and reconstructor for any one.

At any rate don't give up hope of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "Anuric" have proven that it will make you feel like a different person.

EDITOR—Please insert this letter in some conspicuous place in your paper.

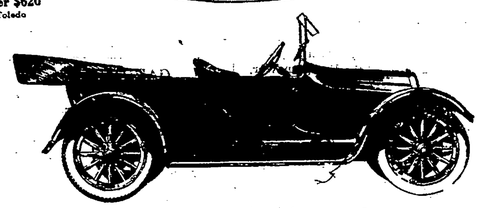
Overland Model 75 B

$635 5 Passenger Touring Car Roadster $620 f.o.b. Toledo

31½ Horsepower



Speedy and Easy Riding

There's little comfort in most low priced cars. You can't use their speeds. They jostle you—they ride roughly—they don't hold the road.

The $635 Overland is different. It is not only the speediest of low priced cars—

But you can use the full speed of its powerful motor when you need it.

It has long 42-inch, easy riding, shock absorbing cantilever rear springs. In addition the 75 B Overland is a longer car—104-inch wheelbase. And it has 4-inch tires.

Its smoothness and ease of riding at any speed would do justice to a much larger and heavier car.

Come in and let us demonstrate. That's the best kind of proof.
