FIGHT "FLU"

The "Flu" germ gets to the system thru the nose and throat, and therefore those organs should be fortified against infection. Spray the nose and throat with a good antiseptic: We suggest MI-31 Antiseptic Solution, and will give you a full size bottle free with every purchase of an atomizer.

Get plenty of sleep and rest. Continue well by exercise in the fresh air.

Keep out of crowds.

Eat plenty of nourishing food.

Avoid exposure to chill and wet.

If you feel any "Flu" symptoms consult a doctor at once. Night and day use the great Inhalative Vapure, put a few drops on a loosely woven cloth and inhale frequently, to kill germs in the nose and throat. The feeling you will experience in using Vapure will convince you of the protection you are getting; and 100 doses of Vapure cost only 50 cents at the Rexall Store.

Entertain Past Grands

The Rebekah Past Noble Grands Association of Allegany county, met in Andover, Thursday afternoon, Feb. 21st, at 1 o'clock. A luncheon was served by the Andover Rebekah lodge. The tables were attractive with decorations and place cards in keeping with Washington's birthday. The menu was excellent and nicely served by those in charge.

The unfavorable condition of the roads caused a smaller attendance than usual, not all of the lodges being represented. There were about 40 Past Noble Grands present, representing Cuba, Bolivar, Allentown, Wellsville, Whitesville, Alfred and Andover lodges.

Three candidates received the degree and following the business meeting a short program was put on by Andover ladies. The next meeting is to be held at Angelica, March 20th.

To Get Another Wolf

An addition will be made to the famous wolf pack here within a few days, according to the owner, Dr. E. H. McCleery, who stated today that he had purchased a nine-year-old wolf from a woodsman at Montana. The wolf was captured several years ago and is believed to be one of a few Rocky Mountain wolves in captivity.

The wolf has been shipped and will arrive soon. Dr. McCleery added that he will have wolves of 14 unrelated families in his pack and that he is continually receiving communications from all over the country from persons who either desire to sell or buy wolves.—Kane Republican.

Strike Salt Vein

Keeping Clothes Clean

When the man of the house begins to frown at the item of clothing on the family account book and garments seem to wear out or look shabby long before their time, it is time for the homemaker to pause and consider ways to remedy the situation. Clothing which has been well-selected will preserve its good appearance if it is treated with a little scientific care. The woman who learns the secrets of washing garments of different materials, cleaning, removing stains, and pressing will find that the expense for clothing is conspicuously cut down. To aid her the government, state college of home economics, women's magazines, and many commercial companies publish and will send her excellent booklets free or for a very small price. From these any woman can give herself a valuable course in clothing care and profit by the investigations of the best chemists and clothing specialists, in cutting down the clothing bill.

Trench your wind at an early age to down and take care of Mennen and save yourself trouble while helping him to develop habits of independence and orderliness, says the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell University.

As soon as the child begins to walk he may be taught to hang up his night clothes in the morning, and his day clothes when he undresses at night, if hooks are within his reach. As he grows older more responsibility may be added if the simple equipment in his room is conveniently arranged. Hooks for the child may be placed low in the wardrobe in his own room as well as in the close: where the family wraps and overcoats are kept, and a definite place of his own may be arranged for sweater, hat and mittens. A special low shelf or box arrangement may be provided for rubbers and shoes.

Each child should have a simple laundry bag with a convenient opening within his reach. A lower bureau drawer, which slides easily, holds his clean clothing and toilet articles. For older children, a rod in the close: adjusted to child height may hold dresses and suits on small clothes hangers.

Such simple equipment which the child can easily reach and which he feels is definitely his own, gives him a real incentive for looking after his clothing and relieves his mother of many small tasks every day.

Surgeon's New Knife Is Electric Current

A notable development in electro-surgery is announced in the perfection of a device whereby electric current is used to make incisions. The current not only cuts finer than any knife, but at the same time closes the blood vessels so that no bleeding occurs, and the operation is said to be painless. The inventor, Dr. W. T. Bovie, formerly of the Harvard Medical School and now of Northwestern University, has received the John Scott Medal and has been awarded one thousand dollars by the city of Philadelphia for his work in electro-surgery.

Last Saturday the employees of the Grand Union grocery at Susquehanna, had the thrill of their lives when they discovered a huge snake, over three feet long and as large around as one's wrist, wound around a bunch of bananas. The snake, which was semi-dormant, fell to the floor when the bunch of bananas was disturbed by James Tellier new Grand Union manager, who at once proceeded to kill the reptile by hitting it with a heavy weight. The snake is said to have been a young boa constrictor and Mr. Tellier was informed that it would have been worth $400 alive. Needless to state he followed his natural instinct and put the snake out of commission as soon as possible in the manner mentioned. The banana presumably came from Porto Rico, or some other Southern clime.—Portville Review.

PRESIDENT ENTRENCHES SELF TO LAW ENFORCEMENT

President Hoover Placed Great Emphasis Upon Enforcing 18th Amendment, in Inaugural Address.

Washington, Mar. 4.—With simple, forceful language reflective of his own personality, Herbert Hoover today dedicated himself and his administration to law enforcement at home and the promotion of peace throughout the world.

These two purposes stood out in bold relief in his inaugural address, delivered from a simply decorated stand on the East front of the Capitol after he had taken the oath as the 31st president of the United States.

Declaring that the most malign of all the dangers from which self-government must be safeguarded today is the disregard and disobedience of law, the president said that "to consider these evils, to find their remedy, is the most safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress," he said. "It must not come to be in our republic that it can be defeated by the indifference of the citizen, by exploitation of delays and entanglements of the law, or by combinations of criminals."

Turning to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, Hoover asserted that abuses which had grown up around it are due in part to the failure of some states to accept their share of the responsibility for concurrent enforcement and to the failure of many state and local officials to zealously enforce the law.

"But a large responsibility rests directly upon our citizens," he asserted. "There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it. The duty of citizens to support the law is co-equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist.

"Our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support. The worst evil of disregard for some law is that it destroys respect for all law."

As one immediate step for an improvement of conditions, President Hoover declared it essential "that a large part of the enforcement activities be transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice as a beginning of more effective organization."

Reiterating his determination to appoint a national commission for a searching investigation, the chief executive disclosed that his inquiry would go to the whole structure of the federal system of juris-prudence as well as to methods of enforcement of the 18th Amendment and the causes of abuse under it.

Solemnly asserting that the United States not only desires peace with the world, but to see peace maintained thruout the world, the president expressed the hope for ultimate American adherence to the World Court and declared that the acceptance of the recent treaty for the renunciation of war "should prove the way to greater limitation of armament, the offer of which we sincerely extend to the world."

Looking to domestic affairs the chief executive said further agricultural relief and "limited changes" in the tariff "cannot in justice to our farmers, our labor and our manufacturers be postponed," adding that he would request a special session of congress for consideration of these questions.
