Andover High School TIDBITS

Eighth Grade

We are sorry to say that Martin Lynch will not attend school for the remainder of the year.

This week we are studying "The Gold Bug" by Edgar Allan Poe, for English. We are illustrating it by cryptographs, invisible writing and dramatizations.

Tidbits

Carl Greene has left school. We are all sorry to have him go as his absence will be deeply felt.

Don't forget to attend the dedication exercises at the high school auditorium next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Everyone in Andover should be present and inspect our new building.

Perfect Attendance—Third Quarter

Peter Breiding, Edward Cannon, Robert Common, Daniel Farwell, Claire Greene, Oliver Kemp, James Mulholland, Raymond O'Boyle, Burton Seely, Horace Trask, Ralph Williams.

Milton Clarke, 91 Years Old on Tariff and Prohibition

what McKinley called "parisian vortexism" towards the liquor traffic. Thanks to congress they passed the prohibitory law over his veto. Congress knew what they had to do or lose their jobs. With over two-thirds of our territory under prohibition, they saw the end near of their pet license system. The two old license parties adopted the prohibition policy for three reasons: To save their own political necks; head off the prohibition party and get prohibition without a party to enforce it. We now have prohibition as a part of our constitution, ratified by 46 states of the union. Rhode Island and Connecticut standing out. New York thought to repeal her ratification by one majority and Gov. Smith's signature. They swore to uphold the constitution. Two-thirds might have played their trick, but only one majority showed their disloyalty. America has no place for perjurors outside the penitentiary or the ball and chain gang. Every state that had an election on prohibition had to fight the organized booze syndicate (national). When Ed. Cheves had an interview with the chairman of the bribery committee, he verified the report that the committee had bought editorial space in all the newspapers, secular and religious, that money could buy to publish their misleading and lying editorials as the editor's own. One said that the prohibition speakers found public sentiment so strong against prohibition that they could not get an honorable hearing, and had cancelled their speaking contracts and gone home. What the committee's propaganda had to do with the general vote is uncertain. But this we know from the election returns, that some ninety per cent. of the voters, including non-partisan anti-saloon members and church members from laymen to bishops went with the liquor crowd on election day and voted for the candidates of one or the other of the old liquor license parties that have ignored moral and financial considerations and stood for greed and appetite since the excise and license laws of 1862 that made our government partners in the liquor crime. Such votes are unworthy of moral guides. No well-meaning person would follow their leadership. They are convicted before the court of reason of helping the liquor crowd to force over a fifty year reign of rotgut booze on a so-called free and independent people. Gabriel or St. Peter couldn't tell any difference between their votes and those of the worst thugs and bums of our great cities that stand for drunkenness, crime, poverty and misery. A bad example before the rising generation. In consideration of such voting, under date of Feb. 3, 1916 we wrote: Christain friends and fellow citizens come out from among the liquor manufacturers, thugs, bums, theives, gamblers, harlots and murderers. Stand up for your own interests, your family and fireside, for your boys and girls against this great octupus, the liquor traffic, that reaches to the home, shop, factory, school, church and the capitol where our lawmakers get so drunk they don't know what they are at. To the legislature as in Iowa where they get so drunk they threw books and ink-stands at each other and unconciously voted for the manufacturers and dealers bill that annulled Iowa's prohibition law.

Such is state prohibition under a license administration. We will never get prohibition under an adverse administration. To quote Eugene Chaffin: "We get one per cent. efficiency in the law and ninety-nine in the administration."

In 1862 a majority of congress was Republican, many Democrates having seceded with the southern states. Lincoln reluctantly signed the excise and license laws with the promise that it would be repealed in the near future or as soon as the necessity of the war was over. The writer was 25 years of age in 1862 and had never heard of a license saloon. Some towns sold licenses to grocers and tavern keepers to sell liquor. At that time about four gallons of liquor was used as a beverage per capeta. Under so-called campaigns of education by the two old parties the percapeta consumption of liquor run up to 22 and a half gallons for every man, woman and child under our government. To support the waste and ruin of the traffic our government issued greenbacks (a kind of a mortgage on the future) Some will never be remeded, some went up in smoke in the Chicago fire, and some in the San Francisco earthquake and fire. Some went to the bottom of the ocean when a drunken pilot ran the Titanica against a floating iceburg and sent it to the bottom with its human freight. Such tragedies as that and the wreck of the excursion train near Corning with its fearful tons of life, emphasize the necessity of prohibition.

We called the saloons schools of vice or veritable emissaries of immoral contagion from which the drink-crazed victim goes to make trouble, perhaps to do murder on his fellow friend or wife or child. In the report of such tragedies they call him a treacherous fiend or brutal husband or father. They don't mention the brutal and treacherous vote: who helped make such scene not possible but probable. Perhaps the voter did not mean to be brutal, but they should take notice of what they are doing. We hold it is within our bill of rights and in accord with our constitution to rid ourselves of the liquor traffic, disagreeable drunks, their idiotic imbecile paupers, criminals, insane and their consequent public and private burdens and taxes.

Such is a part of our personal liberty that makes our country great and turns the eyes of Europe with longing to our boasted land of the free. Fellow voters, put no trust in candidates who are afraid to let their political views be known. Cast your ballots for the candidates who are pledged against official graft, to concentrate the people's wealth under official control and waste, and that are pledged to support the prohibitory amendment and its enforcement. Let the rising generation read in the annals of history when the golden era of liberty had nearly set in the gloom of an eternal night hanging over the country gathered around the camp of prohibition and honor and presided over her destinies, freedom must have met with an untimely grave. They waged the war of ballots and won. They maintained for us a republic that shall endure when empires, monarchies, kingdoms and principalities shall have gone down to eternity and kaizarism and militaryism shall menace the world no more.

We thank you for your kind interest and if we have said anything to offend you we would call your attention to the proverb that says "He whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad."

Again we thank you.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

Copyright 1929 by Frank Crane

THE ART OF PLEASING

Now that we are learning to do all sorts of things, it might be well to devote a little attention to that most important art of all arts, the Art of Pleasing.

It is an Art and not a Science. A Science you may learn out of a book. An Art takes practice.

It is not a sin or moral something we are talking about, but just common sense and expediency. You want people to please you; then learn how to please them.

Permit, therefore, a few hunches for inquiring minds on this matter:

1. Beware of egotism. In some form or other, that is what we dislike about everybody. Do not praise yourself, nor dispraise yourself, nor, in fact, talk of yourself at all. Habitual dispraise is a common form of disagreeable egotism.

2. Do not be tragic. Have a sense of humor. Most things do not matter. Nine things out of ten that are threatening disappear when you laugh at them. It is very disheartening to live with one who is perpetually tragic.

3. Cultivate a pleasant voice. Do not talk too loud, nor mumble so one cannot hear you, nor slur your words.

4. Be neat. Clothe yourself as well as you can afford. Do not have dark fingernails, frayed cuffs, towsled hair, nor unclean shoes. Keeping clean is not egotism, it is a due regard for other people's feelings. Clean your teeth. Beware of halitosis.

5. Write plainly, one letter at a time with comfortable spaces between.

6. Do not be argumentative. Why argue? Most things do not matter.

7. Observe the little politenesses. Say "I thank you" and "If you please." Get up when a lady enters the room. Take off your hat when you meet a woman.

8. When you are slandered or abused, say nothing, as a rule. People can respond to anything you say, but it's hard to answer silence.

HOOVER'S HOME ECONOMY. $9 YEARS,80 MILLON. KAHAN LOSES TITTA RUFFO. FOCH IS DEAD.

President Hoover, believing that economy should begin at home, will run the presidential yacht Mayflower out of commission. The President will do his yatching in a rowboat when fishing. The country will save $300,000 a year, and 148 sailors that have wasted their time on the Mayflower will be assigned to new naval vessels.

The Mayflower has been added to the cost of maintaining a President ever since the days of Theodore Roosevelt, and President Hoover's determination to discontinue a thoroughly undemocratic arrangement will be generally appreciated.

The people would not grudge a good President any comfort or luxury. But a $300,000 yatch tacked on to a $75,000 salary seems fantastic.

George F. Baker, dean of American bankers, ruler of the gigantic First National of New York, which is one of his minor possessions, has celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday.

For every year that he has lived, Mr. Baker has given at least a million dollars to education and other good purposes.

Everybody wishes him many more years to get and give.

Since the people do not yet know enough to develop their own resorces and supply what they need, it is fortunate that they have such men as Baker, Rockefeller and others to show them how.

Otto H. Kahn, protector of grand opera, learns that his enemy is the talking moving picture. That must surprise him as much as it surprised the seventy-foot dinosaures when the rats ate them.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have taken Titta Ruffo from Mr. Kahn's Metropolitan Opera to sing for the movies, and it was as simple "as taking candy from a child."

Mr. Ruffo sings ten times before a recording machine and is paid $350,000, or $35,000 for each short singing period.

Even the Metropolitan's diamond horseshoe cannot compete with that.

Marshal Foch is dead. Farewell to a great warrior, a true man. He has gone and taken his wages—a name that will live in history and the eternal gratitude of his countrymen.

In command of all the allied armies, he had 10,000,000 men under his command, by far the greatest army gathered together since men first began wholesale killing.

And his motto, that every man should adopt, was: "THE OFFENSIVE ALWAYS."

Allons, "Let us go," was the last words uttered by Marshall Foch. It is the first word of the French national hymn that he heard so often, the hymn to which the Revolutionary soldiers marched from the south of Franch into Paris. "Allons enfants de la patrie," etc.

The last words of great men, piously collected, have little value. The great men probably did not know what they were saying. Mehr licht, "more light," were the last words of Goethe.

Frederick the Great's last words are supposed to be tete d'armee, "head of the army." He often spoke French in preference to German.

Pitt, whose genius kept Napoleon out of England, said as he died, "My country, how I leave thee." He was worried about the future.

What a man does while he lives is more important than what he says when he dies.

you'll never find the fountain of YOUTH in a washtub

SOMEWHERE there may be a woman who can be alluring after a hard day of rubbing and scrubbing over a steaming washtub. But we have yet to find her.

How much easier it is to leave the labor of washday to an electric washer. A small sum puts one in your home. Three cents a week will run it. Then there's an electric ironer... actually does shirts and children's dresses as well as flat pieces... a week's ironing for 5 cents.

Be modern. Stop in and see your nearest electrical dealer. Free yourself from household drudgery with electric servants. They're not only easy to buy, but economical to use. With the cost of your electricity less today than 15 years ago, you can afford to use it freely for every task.

Local Movies Enjoyed

Andover, ever progressive, had a little demonstration of "Hollywood life" at the Auditorium, Wednesday evening, when Huber Watson, of our village, well known as a naturalist, put on a film of moving pictures, including several local people, which he had taken with his movie camera. The pictures were all procured near our village, and, by the way, brought out some beautiful and scenic spots new to us and no doubt the majority in the audience. Upon the screen were depicted several of our familiar birds with their eggs and nests of young ones, and some that were strange to many. A fox's den with the young ones playing in the "door yard," the Watson family pet, a young woodchuck, taking his supper from a bottle. Several local people were included in the films demonstrating that should Andover decide to set up opposition to Hollywood in the movies we have good actors and stunt men to call upon.

The last act was a demonstration of Mr. Watson's trained squirrels, wild ones which he caught in a box trap and trained. Together with the descriptive lecture of the pictures given by him proved a most novel and entertaining program, thoroughly enjoye byd the large number in attendance and would admit of repition.

Governor Roosevelt has proclaimed Friday, April 12th, as "Bird Day," asking that all school teachers emphasize to heir pupils the economic value of bird life and the necessity for preservation of the species as a means of checking devastations of crops by insects.

HAD ONE AT HOME

"Come with me to the zoo."
"No, thank you; I'll stay at home. My eldest daughter does the kangaroo walk, my second daughter looks like a parrot, my sons laugh like a hyena, my wife watches me like a hawk, my cook is as cross as a bear, and my mother-in-law says I am an old gorilla. When I go anywhere I want a change."

Having to mortgage the house to buy a few cooking utensils isn't easy to laugh off, yet that is just about what is happening in lots of families.

Some of these peddlers who sell in house to house must think we've got solid silver instead of aluminum.

Your home should have a kitchen equipped with fine heavy aluminum for healthful, economical, waterless cooking, the cook has it coming to her. And we owe it to you to see that you have this ware at sensible prices.

No matter how much you pay for quality than Mirro Vapo Aluminum cannot be bought, at any price; accept our invitation to come in and look it over.

We have just unloaded a big car of roofing. This includes ashphalt shingles, both individual and strip, roofing in three grades and weights, both plain and slate surfaced, building papers, tarred felts, pure ashphalt roof paint and Portland cement.

We saves a lot of money to buy roofing in car load lots, the price goes and the freight only one-third the local weight.

Roofing is cheap now in comparison with any price period since the war. Now is the time to get your roof.

Individual ashphalt shingles are the cheapest and least expensive when cost of service are considered of any roofing you can buy.

They are the roof of a life time.

Dunswick Tires are making new friends every day. They are priced right, the guarantee protects you against accidents and you get more miles per dollar than you can buy elsewhere way.

Dong—"Yeah. He says he can remember when baking powder outsold face powder!"

Lady—"Have you given the gold fish fresh water, Jane?"

Jane—"No, mum, they ain't finished the water I gave them yesterday, yet."

We were all set to talk to you about lawn mowers this week but this morning with the ground white and still coming it looks more like snow shovels, but we have a fine assortment of medium and high grade machines in latest design and at right prices, tell you more about them later.

If you would like to see something really slick come in and let us demonstrate the Red Wheel oven regulator on a Dangler Gas Range.

It only costs half as much for garden seeding when you can buy them for 5 cents a package.

We also have a large supply of Leonard's tested bulk seed, the seed that always grows and are true to name.

We have your favorite variety of Wax Beans, wrinkled peas, and sweet corn; garden beans are a very short crop this season, and market prices at the highest point in many years, but our stock is adequate and in greater variety than ever before.

If you want outstanding quality in a wax pod bean for the table or canning plant Webbers Yellow Wax.
