Cotton Comes Back. Capper Backs Farm Bill. Coolidge is Early. Why Farmers Laugh.

Cotton growers will be glad to hear that big department stores are specializing in cotton goods. "Cotton arrives" is the announcement of one store, biggest in New York, doing about $93,000,000 a year.

"Dotted swiss," "pique" and "ginghams" are featured energetically.

"Often woman changes," the French say. Real or imitation silks have been the rage; now King Cotton comes back.

If Americans will advertise, and emphasize "Cotton goods grown and made in America," instead of advertising "British cotton cloth," that will help.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, trusted by farmers, backs President Hoover's farm bill. He opposes the debenture subsidy plan, which would pay a bonus to exporting middlemen, cost the taxpayers heavily, and do the farmer little, if any, good.

Calvin Coolidge, as director of the New York Life Insurance Company, arrived 20 minutes ahead of time for his first director's meeting.

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings."

The former president is interested in life insurance, not for profit, but for possibilities of public service. His day's work yesterday paid $50; not much according to present ideas. But it's 50 times as much as Mr. Coolidge's father paid the black-bearded giant who earned in the Coolidge blacksmith shop $1 a day 50 years ago.

Tears and laughter afford relief. Loud laughter, violent weeping, cause the mind to rest and bring temporary peace.

There will be farm-relief laughter in news that railroads have consented to lower freight rates on wheat flour from the Middle West to the Atlantic.

The notion that farmers will get more for their wheat when flour mills pay lower freight bills will make the saddest farmer laugh.

Relief for flour manufacturers is welcome. They are having a hard time, with chain stores regulating their profits.

But charging them ten cents less a barrel for shipping flour will not cause them to give farmers two cents a bushel more for wheat.

Relief for farmers and for many others will come from generally increased prosperity, and especially from sharing national wealth more widely.

American farmers once sold corn for less than the amount of the tariff now proposed.

Prisons have changed. One ancient hero, solitary in prison, had to encourage him only the example of a humble spider spinning and respinning a web as fast as it was torn down.

A well known oil magnate, jailed, because he wouldn't answer Senators' questions, has the deeper, pleasanter inspiration of a blonde trained nurse.

In the medical department of the jail, this blonde lady works for the sick and suffering, and says to her oil man assistant, worth $100,000,000, "Please hand me that iodine," or "Watch how I fix this bandage."

Much can be learned in such an atmosphere.

268 RATTLERS

Also a Bunch of Blue Racers Dug Out of One Hole in One Day by One Man.

Major Elmer E. Kemp of the United States Army, sends us the following snake story clipping from Santa Fe, New Mexico. We do not know whether it is customary to make the same deductions in snake stories as it is with fish stories or not; suffice it, however, to say that the Major himself is some fisherman.

Here is the story at any rate:

A photograph is offered in evidence of 268 rattle snakes and blue racers dug out of one hole, in one day and killed by one man. The Tucumcari News, believing he is deserving of more than passing notice, tells the story:

C. R. Downing, postmaster, merchant and farmer, of Obar, phoned the News Saturday, giving the information that Jim Willis, rancher, living eight or ten miles northeast of Obar had killed 268 snakes: 202 rattles and 66 of other varieties.

Sunday a trip was made to the Willis ranch to see the dead reptiles and they were there, too. The rattlers had been strung on a wire, that is, a yard or so of the longest.

Some were as large around as an ordinary man's wrist and from a yard to 44 inches in length—from that size on down to the babies—six or eight inches in length and about the size of an average lead pencil. Only the large ones were on the wire.

The blue racers—the larger ones—were also strung on a wire. They varied in length from five feet to two and one-half feet and from an inch to two inches in circumference. The smaller ones, not wired, ran from two and one-half feet down to six or eight inches—the babies being not much larger around than a wheat straw.

The Willis brothers have known for several years the snakes have been using the abandoned prairie dog town for hibernating purposes.

They watched the hole last fall and killed 96 rattlers and 60 blue racers at the time the reptiles were on their way to their winter bed room.

One day the first of last week, Jim Willis was in the vicinity of the den and noticed a large rattler out sunning. The snake crawled into the den as soon as disturbed. Jim returned home, secured a shovel and started digging.

He found a cavern, left by the prairie dogs, several feet in width and a foot or more in height, four or five feet underground and there were the snakes.

The blue racers were wound into a tight ball and were at one side of the cavern; the rattlers were not so tightly wound together and were in another part of the hole, showing the two varieties do not associate even in winter quarters.

Mr. Willis chopped the heads off the snakes with a hoe. The rattlers had from a button up to eight rattles and a button.

The snakes were dug out on the old McGee ranch.

Baseball Fans Should Play, Doctor Asserts

Albany.—Baseball fans who prefer to get their exercise in the grandstands are urged by Dr. Edward H. Marsh, secretary, New York State Health Department, to get into the games themselves.

"Sitting in the grandstand is better than staying indoors," said Dr. Marsh, "but a moderate amount of active participation is still better." Dr. Marsh urges a physical examination first to determine if the heart will stand the exercise.

Dr. Marsh warned that a "glass arm" might result from too violent exercise at first. He advised individual training along lines adopted by the big clubs; that is, simple tossing of the ball for a few days before playing a full nine inning game.

Notes on Law Enforcement

By CHARLES E. SMITH

A great deal is said and a great deal is written on law enforcement as applied to the Eighteenth Amendment. But looking at it from a constitutional standpoint there are several interesting facts that are brought to light.

There is a principle of American law which reads that the United States Constitution, the Acts of Congress, and the treaties made are the supreme law of the land; that a state does not have the right to abridge or annul any of the provisions in either the Constitution or an act of Congress; and that a state should enforce equally and wholly all the laws in these documents.

It would seem, from these great American principles, that every state and every public officer should enforce all the laws equally and fearlessly. Even if there was a question of usefulness, adaptibility, or practicability of any law, it should still be entitled to respect and enforcement until either amended or repealed.

A little thought and reflection on the question in will convince anyone of the grave seriousness involved when any law is violated and disrespected. Life and property may hang in the balance in the settling of this question.

Civil Engineer Plans Larger Lake for the Allegany State Park

D. Walter Brown, Buffalo civil engineer, who has been engaged by the Allegany State Park Commission to study plans for the proposed lake in the valley of Red House creek, presented tentative plans for a lake larger than any previously considered, covering some 106 acres and having in it three small islands, at a meeting of the commission, held Friday, in Buffalo.

Discussion of the plans brought out that more money than now is alloted for the lake would be required and Mr. Brown was instructed to prepare his plans more in detail, to be taken up again at the meeting of the State Council of Parks, to be held at Niagara Falls on the 24th and 25th of this month.

Members of the commission were said to view Mr. Brown's plans favorably, and to feel that, if more money is required, the additional amount will be approved by the State Council of Parks.
