WHERE THERE IS NO PLACE TO GO

New York Fresh Air Kiddies Due in Andover July 18.—Have You Put in Your Order Yet?

As has been customary in Andover the past few years, some of our generous-hearted Christian people will open their homes again for the entertainment of New York Fresh Air Kiddies. It is expected that the little folks will reach Andover July 18th for two weeks.

If there is anything finer than the work the New York Tribune and the Staunton Kiwanis are doing to giving the hundreds of children of the New York tenements some place to go for a summer vacation, we cannot think what it is at the moment. That there is reciprocal pleasure in this annual visitation of the tenement children is shown by the fact that many families in the city and country are asking for the same boys and girls they entertained last year.

No one has any conception of how many children live in the tenement on the East Side in New York until the blare of trumpet sound on the street. Before the echo has died away there are heads at every window, and there is a pouring out thru the doorway of men, women and children, suggestive of an anthill, the occupants which have been strangely disturbed. So drab is the life of these people that they welcome anything out of the usual that breaks the monotony of it. We have the spectacle of old men and women in all stages of decrepitude, mothers with babies in their arms and other babies clinging to their skirts, children of older growth darting out between the legs of their fathers and lost to sight around the corner before a restraining hand can reach them—all eager to know what it is all about.

The tragedy of the children of New York tenements is that they have "no place to go"—no place except the street and alleys and those questionable resorts and haunts where the pull on character is always downward and where, all too often, their souls are smirched and their young bodies defiled. The fine thing about the enterprise of the Tribune and the Kiwanis is that it is furnishing them some place to go for a fortnight; some place where Christian influences are thrown around them, some place where they can think and talk about wholesome things, where they can rest and relax and enjoy healthful recreation.

The problem of tenement is also in a very real sense the problem of every community and city—the problem of providing some place for boys and girls looking for amusements, seeking adventure, yearning for companionship to go some place except the streets and dance halls and other resorts where the influences are likely to be all against them in the most important period of their lives; places where they may meet and play and be entertained and instructed, and all the while, be under the influence of other boys and girls and men and women of the right kind.

We may differ about the creeds and dogmas, we may speculate upon destiny, we may exercise our spirits over the high problems of mystery, we may yield to the emotions of patriotism, the fascination of science and the beauty of art. But the fundamental belief is the belief in the better, the "more abundant" life. The fundamental morality is to make those around us happy, and the one essential emotion is love of our fellowmen. Most important of all is to help boys and girls to grow strength and beauty and nobility of character.

Much has been said about the lure of sin. Not enough has been said about the deadly dullness. It is not possessed of some magic spell before which human character and human purposes seem doomed to dissolution. Rather the opposite is true. The places which invite moral disaster are wicked because they lack charm. The haunts of evil are patronized mainly because there are not opportunities for normal recreation and wholesome adventure. When the real truth about Sodom and Gomorrah comes out, we expect to hear that young men and women of those unspeakable cities had no place to go.

If you have not yet sent in your order, do so at once to Mrs. Walter Greene, Andover.

FROM FARM HOUSE TO WHITE HOUSE

That May Be the Career of Owen D. Young. Debt Negotiations Makes Presidential Possibility.

Prominent Democratic leaders at Washington are already promoting the presidential candidacy for 1932 of Owen D. Young, the farm boy who became the world's greatest compromiser by solving the reparations puzzle in Europe.

This man, to whom the world looked for guidance in settling the tremendous financial problems growing out of, the World War, is regarded by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and others as the one outstanding Democrat to whom the party can turn. "He is a man of unquestioned ability and accomplishment," says the Senator.

Mr. Young and Gen. Dawes took up the debt question in 1924, going to London without any official status. In Mr. Young's brain was born the basic idea of the so-called Dawes Plan—called so because Gen. Dawes was the presiding member of the Reparations Commission. Mr. Young, presiding over the most recent negotiations, with J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont as associates, cleaned up, in less than four months, the biggest and most complicated financial entanglement in the history of the world.

This man of the hour is the product of a New York farm who educated himself. Born at Van Hornesville, in Herkimer county, N. Y., he worked on his father's farm as a boy, driving in the cows from the pasture, milking them and doing the morning and evening chores.

Later he guided a plow behind a team of horses, helped with the harvesting and did other forms of farm work. When he had time, he attended school, and later worked his way thru the law course at Boston University, completing a three year course in two years while earning enough for his keep by tutoring.

In 1908 he was already on the path to success, the only two years out of college, and married Miss Josephine Sheldon Edmunds of Southbridge, Mass. Five children were born out of the marriage and four are living.

New Mr. Young is chairman of the Board of the General Electric Company and chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America.

He has engaged in many public activities, and won many honors the world over. Thru it all his love for farm life has not abated.

For Mr. Young, after moving to New York in 1913 and finding that his business often called him to Schenectady, bought his father's old farm not far from the scene of his business activities. He and his family live on the farm when he is able to get away from his many duties in New York and Europe.

SURVEY TO FIND THE DELINQUENT

Labor Dept. Going After Employers Not Providing Compensation Insurance For Their Workers.

Albany.—Representatives of the New York State Department of Labor under the direction of Industrial Commissioner Francis Perkins soon will survey the entire state to discover and prosecute employers who fail to provide workmen's compensation insurance.

The drive opened in New York City with the conviction of two employers who were sentenced to serve jail terms. Three hundred employers who failed to provide compensation insurance were rounded up in the drive and the evidence turned over to the attorney general for prosecution.

Commissioner Perkins has set up a separate division in the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation to handle claims in which the employers are without compensation insurance coverage and special investigators are assigned to duty in the new division.

The entire force of factory and mercantile inspectors in New York will comb the business districts for negligent employers during the next few weeks with special attention to small contractors, taxi fleet owners and various minor enterprises in which insurance obligation is frequently ignored.

GROUP TO STUDY OLD AGE RELIEF

Governor Names Commission of Nine Members and Asks Them to Present Plan Next Year.

Albany.—New York State's Commission on Old Age Want, created by the Legislature upon Governor Frank D. Roosevelt's recommendation, has started its labors to devise a system of old age pensions to eliminate what the Governor has termed "a dark blot on our modern civilization."

The three members appointed by Governor Roosevelt are Mrs. Sidney Borg, a social welfare leader; Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal church, whose wide study of the whole field of old age security against want makes him one of the leading experts; and Mr. James M. Lynch, whose record as labor commissioner and member of the industrial board of the State is known to all.

The President pro tem of the Senate appointed to the commission Senator Seabury Mastick, Senator Samuel H. Hofstadter and Cornelius N. Bliss, and the Speaker of the Assembly appointed Assemblyman Frank X. Bernhardt of Buffalo, John T. Train of Utica and Thomas F. Farrell of New York, a leader in Catholic charities.

In announcing his appointments the Governor expressed "confident trust that this commission will have a very definite and practical plan to present at next year's session of the Legislature.

"There has been a growing realization on the part of our people that the State, itself, is under obligations to those who labor, that the children who contribute by his toil to the wealth and prosperity of the Commonwealth is entitled to certain benefits in return, which only the Commonwealth can give," he said. "This principle, so far as it affects the healing of the sick, the amelioration of the sad lot of the insane, the care of the orphan and the education of the child, has been, I am proud to say, more clearly recognized, more firmly established in the State of New York than in any other political division of our country.

"It is my feeling, that the time has come to take a still further step, that we should forever banish the black shadow of old age want. For those who may no longer earn their daily bread, through some swift falling sickness, or slow incurable disease, we have provided, and we are providing, hospitals, sanitariums and institutions where, so far as possible, they may be restored to useful life, or, if that is not possible, receive care and comforts. But how about those whose bodies are not stricken by sudden disaster, who worked hard and faithfully, through long years, until time has his heavy hand upon them? Is there no obligation on the part of the State to look after these? It is through no fault of theirs that they cannot contribute to our prosperity as to labor for the good of the whole State. And yet, what answer have we made, except the creation of that gloomy institution that haunts, like some horrible nightmare, the thought of every aged worker, the poorhouse.

"By a proper system of Old Age Pensions this dark blot on our modern civilization can be eliminated. I want New York to take the leadership in this matter, as it has in other things. I believe that all will agree that whatever the details of the plans which will be worked out by the new commission, it is clear that they will not advocate taking our aged poor away from their homes and placing them in hospitals and other public institutions. In the final analysis, good economics as well as proper humanity dictates that if the state is to aid them in their declining years that aid should be given to them under conditions where they may maintain their independent lives and hold up their heads as citizens of America."

CUBANS SURVEY SUGAR TARIFF

Because United States Was Their Good Friends, Believed They Wouldn't Raise Their Sugar Tariff.

"La Politica Comica," official organ of the laborer in the sugar fields, until now holding steadfastly that the tariff couldn't be raised by such good friends of Cuba as the people of the United States, at last, after the House vote, comes out with an editorial in place of a cartoon, entitled "The Yankee Talons."

"The United States (in so voting) has created one of the most serious economic problems of Cuba's life. It may be said that the Yankee talons, urged by the passions of a relentless protectionism, have sunk themselves into the Caribbean Isle with the most tragic of intentions."

The editorial recounts the extension of the sugar industry at the behest of the United States and the resulting increase in purchases from the United States.

"And then the dagger was raised to strike, when least expected. First, thru the Fordney law, which operated as a bar to any increase for Cuban sugar. And now, when this sugar country is hardly able to defend itself, its prices having fallen to ruin, a protectionist policy carried much beyond all friendship and international consideration, puts a tax of two and a half cents on sugar in order, apparently, to protect a few beet sugar interests, which, if they some day reach prosperity, will have attained it by sacrificing the interests of the American people, who will be obliged to pay exorbitant prices for one of the necessities of life.

"There is one chance left; that the President of the United States may veto this outrageous bill.

"What is Mr. Hoover going to do?" asks La Politica Comica.

A. Crandall was with Mr. Gleason and as he saw him slump down, gave the alarm and a physician was summoned. But death had been almost instantaneous.

Wallace C. Gleason was born at Shongo, N. Y., January 12, 1869. He passed his youth and a great portion of his life at Genesee, Pa. August 11, 1887 he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Conts.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Gleason moved his family from Genesee, Pa., to Andover where he has been active in business circles as a produce dealer and feed mill operator.

Few men enjoyed the friendship of a greater number of his fellows than Wallace Gleason. He was always pleasant and a big-hearted congenial companion, never shirking his duties.

Besides his wife the deceased is survived by a son, George Gleason of Bolivar and two daughters, Mrs. Nora Stevens of Bolivar and Mrs. Leah Dugan of Andover, also a nephew, Charles Gleason, who made his home in his family.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. Dynes at the home on Main street, Wednesday afternoon, under the auspices of Andover Lodge No. 786, I.O.O.F., of whom he was a prominent and very active member. The beautiful Odd Fellow ritualistic ceremonies were given at the grave.

Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

CORPORATIONS ARE TO BE DISSOLVED

Those Who Fail to File Returns Will Find Their Charters Revoked by New Law.

Albany, June 15.—The names of 31,084 corporations in this state have already been compiled and placed on the list of concerns liable to be dissolved by proclamation under a new state law, according to officials of the state department of taxation and finance. Delinquent companies, the names of which begin with the letter "A" number 6,253 and of these 710 begin with the word "American." Under letter "B" there are 5,969 such corporations, while letter "C" finds 5,847 firms, which have failed to file returns. The remainder of the list completed to date shows 2,747 under "D," 3,142 under "E," 3,270 under "F," and 3,866 under "G."

A large group of workers are preparing the list of delinquent corporations, and to prepare this the list of corporations now existent in this state, arranged alphabetically, is being thoroly checked to find concerns not filing an annual franchise tax return during the period of five consecutive years preceding this month.

The list of such establishments not filing returns during this period is to be given the secretary of state on June 29 and he is directed by the new law to make a proclamation as to those corporations, declaring them dissolved and their charters forfeited. This proclamation is to be published in the December issue of the state advertising bulletin. For a period of six months the names of these corporations will be reserved, and then, if no steps have been taken to pay all franchise taxes past due, the firm names will be released for general use by new companies.

If the present ratio of delinquent concerns is maintained thru the remainder of the corporation list it is estimated that between 85,000 and 100,000 will be liable to dissolution.
