Money and Love. Holmes, Brandeis Dissent. Modern Youth. Nobody Knows the Future.

In New York a man killed himself. The reason:

"He lost my money."

In Chicago, a young English woman, 28, jumped to death from a 12-story window. Her message:

"I love Ed Page, 1209 Astor Street."

Shakespeare's "Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love," is not true of women. Men die for money, women for love.

* * *

Justices Holmes and Brandeis of the Supreme Court, are often together in the headline "Holmes and Brandeis dissent." Justice Holmes, 88, oldest man that ever sat on the bench, and Justice Brandeis, one of the ablest lawyers and one of the best men in the United States, are old fashioned Americans, taking freedom of thought and speech quite seriously.

Rosika Schwimmer applied for citizenship, and the Supreme Court rejected her appeal, because she is a pacifist, does not believe in war and says she would not fight.

She is past 60 and could not fight much anyhow. Apart from that, Justice Holmes reminds his fellow judges that the Founder of Christianity was also a picifist.

There is no doubt that if Christ returned as an immigrant at Ellis Island, he would be rejected after brief inspection of His teachings.

You can hear the words or reproof, "What makes a rich man give all his money to the poor?" Go back to Russia."

* * *

Those that deplore the tendencies of "modern youth," late hours, short dresses, wild parties, cocktails and the rest, will be interested in an investigation and report by Chicago's Episcopal Church.

Young people are wild, says the report, but the blame rests with the parents. Dr. Young, head of the Howe School of Indiana, says he is more worried about the parents than about children.

It is a fact that bootleggers' customers are the parents. Children despise the law, and parents set them the example.

* * *

Nobody knows what may be ahead of him.

Frank Presbrey, in his able book, just published, "History and Development of Advertising," quotes an old advertisement offering $10 for the return of "one Andrew Johnson, who had run away from James Selby, a tailor, at Raleigh, N. C., to whom he was apprenticed."

That boy, when he ran away, didn't know he was going to be President Andrew Johnson of the United States of America.

And Thomas A. Edison, when he sat at his telegraph key, thinking about sending more than one message on the same wire at the same time, did not dream that his THINKING would add tens of billions to the wealth of the world.

* * *

Richard E. Enright, for years head of New York Police, says murderers should be put to work to support their families, instead of being sent to the electric chair.

Working and producing, the murderer would be more useful than lying in quicklime, outside the prison wall.

Mr. Enright also advises that thieves be imprisoned and employed long eneugh to make them repay those whom they have robbed.

The murderers would approve his suggestion, the thieves not.

Heart-Heart

By Jessie Crosby Slaughter

THE JOY OF SERVING

This beautiful morning I left my bed early, put on part of my clothing, and went to a front window where a rocker stood waiting. I love to watch early morning passers, while my morning paper is coming.

The newsboy presently appeared. With him was a much smaller boy—evidently a brother—not over five at the very most. This little fellow carried three or four papers under his tiny arm. Proudly he strode beside his senior, his eyes dancing with delight, at the trust reposed in him. I could not hear his words, but he evidently asked if he should deliver my paper; the big brother nodded, as any great personage might nod in approval of a subordinate.

The tiny boy dashed up the steps—seven of them, and it required effort for his short legs to accomplish the man-size elevations; how he swung and glowed and smiled in the sweet morning air, wholly oblivious to the spectacled eyes that watched from behind the lace curtain! With an expression of profound interest he singled out one of the three papers and placed it carefully at the bottom of my door, just as near to putting it into my hand as possible; then he turned and sped away, laughing, as fast as those short legs could carry him.

His financial accomplishment could not have been over a half cent gain—no, it was not that; the little fellow was in glee because he could do something good—something useful for somebody, and do it well. For him, the delivery of that newspaper was a super-accomplishment. Had I been fully dressed, I might have frightened him by rushing out and seizing the darling in my arms.

Do we grown-ups get a "kick" out of the worthy deeds we do for others, if any? Sometimes I have to study awhile, before I can recall any good deed I have done lately. I have not quite become "as one of these."

Rude Rural Rhymes

NOT IN VAIN

I read a rhyme and its refrain was this, "I have not lived in vain." I rather guess 'most any gink would anyhow prefer to think that he would leave some little blank if under Death's attack he sank. If you have left a bit of ground a little better than you found, or set a tree in field or lawn to fruit and flower when you are gone, or made a concrete walk to keep a footing when the mud is deep or laid a road along the plain, I guess you have not lived in vain. If any one would want you back so be you quit your earthly track; if you are wiser than you were when first you felt life's pulses stir; if some old act mean, indiscreet you know you would not now repeat; if you have made some inward gain in conscience, character or brain, I know you have not lived in vain. Yes, even tho your life you scan and find scant good to any man, I still must trust the unseen plan. There is no key to Life or Death in any word that science saith. God wills to do but not explain. You are a link within a chain, and no man ever lived in vain.—BOB ADAMS.

THE CALL OF THE OUTDOORS

CLEAN CAMPS LIKE CLEAN KITCHENS

Bettey and her mother were again discussing the annual camping trip for which Daddy and Little Bill had been planning the past two months.

Betty and her mother were again poised to know anything about camp hardships, according to Bill's ideas. Hadn't he been out two years, and wasn't he past 16?

Mother knew what a time Betty would have if she could not go to look after her, because at home Bill seemed to get most of his amusement out of teasing Betty. But Betty was not to be left behind so easily.

"Well, Mother, I am big enough to go," persisted Betty. "Why, don't I help you wash the dishes, and peel potatoes and watch things on your stove so they don't burn? And I'll bet I could do that in camp too. Maybe I could even help Daddy do the cooking."

"But Betty, you surely would not leave your mother at home and go far away to an old camp in the woods with nothing but a tent to sleep in, and no stove over which to cook, and no nice clean kitchen," argued mother unavailingly.

"Oh, Mother! You are old fashioned. Daddy said so!" retorted Betty. "Why, how did people live before they had cook stoves and clean white kitchens, and nice soft beds, and all those things?"

"Yes, Betty dear, they lived without those comforts, but folks enjoy life more with them; and mother doesn't want her baby girl to go so far away," argued Mother.

"Please, Mother, we will be gone only two weeks," continued Betty, "and don't you remember those signs we saw up there last summer near where Daddy and Bill will camp? They said 'CLEAN UP GROUNDS, BURN ALL RUBBISH,' and they were put up by the Izaak Walton League.

"I'll bet the kitchen in Daddy's camp will be almost as clean as ours here, Mother. And I would like to sleep in a tent, and help cook breakfast over a fire, like the Indians used to do. Please, Mother, it would be so different. May I go?"

Betty's argument about the possibility of having a clean kitchen even in a camp, and the desire to enjoy something different from the luxuries of home, was sufficient to break down mother's resistance. She decided to accept that oft-repeated invitation of her husband, and go camping with the family, even tho she might have to rough it, and sleep between blankets instead of crisp white sheets.

Imagine Daddy's surprise that night when Betty rushed to meet him half a block away and announced that "the girls of the family" had decided to join the camping party. "But, Daddy," she warned, "remember that the kitchen at the camp must be kept clean, or mother won't stay. You'll help, won't you, Daddy?"

Fresh berries keep most satisfactorily if they are carefully picked over and spread out an a shallow dish in the refrigerator.

BAKERS' STORE NEWS
Published by Baker Bros. Hardware, Andover, N. Y.

Hardware Clerk: "What do you wish, madam?"

Mrs. Justwed: "A pound of hangnails, please; I just bought some new pictures."

This is ideal weather for painting and roof repairing. A few pounds of Asbestos Filled Ashphalt Cement on the seams and around gutters and chimneys, then a good coating of Ashphalt Paint and your roof takes a new lease on life.

We are offering a very complete stock of Ashphalt Shingles, Roll Roofing, Building Paper and tarred felts.

We buy this material in car load lots, get the lowest market prices and pass this saving on to our customers.

It will pay you to figure with Baker Bros. if you want to get right prices on quality roofing.

Flit is probably as good or better than any of the house fly sprays now on the market.

It not only kills flies, but it will clear out ants, roaches and bed bugs; does not damage your curtains or draperies, leaves a pleasant odor and is a very proper disinfectant.

A small hand sprayer and a pint can of Flit in the house will add much to your comfort and we are offering both for 75c, the regular price of the liquid alone.

Sprayers sold separately—15c.

Mino Vapo Seal Cooking Utensils take a lot of the drudgery out of hot weather cooking and still give you the finest quality of foods.

These utensils are approved by chemical food experts and medical men every where in this country.

You don't have to worry about infected food if prepared in Vapo Seal Aluminum.

The open season for hay ropes is just around the corner. Plymouth Pure Manilla Hay Rope takes the lead in all markets, because every foot is of uniform quality. No weak strands in Plymouth.

"Sambo, where you all gwine in such a rage?"

"Ah's a gwine to git that doctah what sewed up my operation with white thread."

Fillers for pint thermos bottles usually cost as much as complete bottles but we have picked up some that we can offer at 79c.

The only persons that lose money on poor paint is the man who buys and uses it. Look at the houses around town that have been painted three years or more and see who received full value for their dollar.

There are too big reasons why paint that is low priced per gallon is high priced; the pigments are not made from materials that will stand the weather and the liquid used for thinner has a large portion of water.

In testing it was found that the cheap per gallon paint after a heat test decreased from one-third to one-half in volume just for filler and easily boiled out.

Moore's Pure Linseed Oil Paint has no adulterants, is all paint, honestly made and is gaining in favor among good paint users the country over. We sell and recommend Moore's Paint.

Solid braided sash cord in quarter inch size is as strong as three-eighth inch Manilla rope.

It makes good clothes lines, calf tie, trip rope for your hay car and many other uses.

We have a few thousand feet to offer, put up in 100 foot hanks at 95c each.

This is as low priced as good cotton clothes lines.

We have one only ten foot hay rake to sell at a bargain price. If you have to have a new rake for this haying you can save some money on this one.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS

A priest offered 25 cents to the boy who could tell him who was the greatest man in history.

"Christopher Columbus," answered the Italian boy.

"George Washington," answered the American lad.

"St. Patrick," shouted the Jewish boy.

"The quarter is yours," said the priest, "but why did you say St. Patrick?"

"Right down in my heart I know it was Moses," said the Jewish boy, "but business is business."
