Heart-Heart Talk

By Dr. John Joseph Haines

SILENT ELOQUENCE

A calm summer day. Overhead, the great sun beams with kingly beneficence. The forest stands with glorious summits pointing heaven-ward. The grass, studded here and there with wild flowers, smiles its silent approval of everything above and around. A delicate perfume permeates the already sweet atmosphere. Silence—silence everywhere eloquent beyond expression.

It is the teaching of Nature. Even the unlettered may comprehend to fullness. No lexicon is needed to point out hidden philosophies; no dictionary to detail mysterious or perplexing orthography. Only the seeing eye is required, to be able to grasp the grandest of forensic flights, Nature pleading its cause.

A calm summer evening. The moon, blushing at first, rises in her flight, to become magnificant in her bewitching beauty. Listening earth hears thru the majestic silence the nocturne, the symphony, the cathedral chimes . . . the music of the spheres . . . "The Hand that made us is Divine," sing the stars. Sable is is ivine," sing the stars. Sable Night sweeps over all—the world has gone to rest.

It is all so eloquently convincing, this silent oratory, this concerto. It proclaims with the creation its Great Creator. Close the printed tome with its hieroglyphics that fade with the years! Gaze on the eternal scroll of earth and heaven, and, read the wisdom of the Most High, whose silent eloquence resounds thru the ages from the beginning to the end of time!

It is all so true—so beautiful. Doubt and deviation have no place nor part here in presence of the Absolute. I need no lexicon to counsel me! but, upon the stained page of this life of mine, I may write truthfully, "All hail the Infinite, of which I am offspring. Here I pledge my fidelity to all that is grand and inspiring, while I drink in the silent eloquence of heaven and earth that show His handiwork with undeviating, ceaseless fidelity."

The Return From Captivity

Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Fulfillment of prophecy is finely exampled in this lesson study. Years before, Isaiah had declared that there would be deliverance for the Jews in bondage by one named Cyrus. Jeremiah in writing a letter of encouragement from Jerusalem to the brethren in captivity stated that after 70 years there would be a release. In that fullness of time the event took place which perfectly met both prophecies. It was just 70 years from the first deportation, in the fifth year of King Jehoiakim, to the first year of Cyrus. Also the same period between the destruction of Jerusalem and the completion of the second temple.

Keep in mind that Daniel was an old man when he interpreted that handwriting on the wall on the same night in which the Chaldeans were captured by Darius, as the waters of the Euphrates were turned aside and the enemy entered under the city walls. Within three years Cyrus became king in Babylon. Daniel was still living; he would surely be a man that Cyrus would wish to meet, for he had great fame as a man of wisdom and one who could interpret dreams. He had been a prime minister and anything he said would command respect from a thoughtful monarch.

When it was read from the Scripture rolls that Isaiah had said in prophecy that one named Cyrus would be the man to restore Jerusalem special attention was given thereto. Further, it was strategy to have a favorable people in Palestine, for that little country was on the highway to Egypt. The decree was promulgated giving permission to any captives to return to the land whence they had been taken. Many were so well settled in Babylon that the opportunity did not appeal to them. The younger who may not have been fully satisfied where they were, the adventurous and those who were strict religionists and were ever thinking back to the Temple days were among those who said "We will go and rebuild Jerusalem and its Temple."

The brethren were urged to make gifts with which to further the work in the home land if they did not care to make the return personally. Cyrus did the noble thing, in contrast to Belshazzar who hurled insult by his use of the vessels taken from the Temple in plunder. These were given to the returning colonists. The total was 5,400. The route chosen by the 50,000 was probably by the more northern way of Aleppo and Damascus rather than the direct way across the desert. Safety was a greater consideration than speed on this journey.

THE CALL OF THE OUTDOORS

Do rural children respond less to Nature's beauties than city school children? Do they prefer rough, unkempt grounds, crude outbuildings of sheathing boards, broken down fences, glaring heat of late spring and early fall suns, or the chilling blasts of winter against an unprotected and rudely constructed schoolhouse?

Persons touring the country frequently arrive at the conclusion that rural school pupils are insensible to surroundings—or that their parents consider that environment does not influence their children's characters, or desires to learn the rudiments of education taught in rural schools.

This is the view taken by many of the country's students of progress and of human character, with the result that a movement to revolutionize conditions surrounding the public schools of rural districts has been inaugurated.

Already committees are at work in various portions of the country to bring about changed conditions for the rural school children. It is recognized that rural districts cannot be supplied with the magnificent architectural structures erected in metropolitan cities. However, rural school authorities are being shown that a tendency to such modern construction and facilities as is possible in rural districts produces salient results not only in the characters of pupils attending them, but in their education.

Still further, these school authorities are being taught that ground improvement and beautification at rural schools has the result of keeping the pupils interested in their surroundings, their own rural pleasures and pursuits and thus dissipates their desires to break away from home ties and enter the cities.

This movement toward betterment of rural school conditions, while yet in its formative stage, already has become nation-wide. It had its inception in a small rural district of South Dakota, where a local chapter of the Izaak Walton League took up the beautification of its neighboring rural school grounds. Its work was reported to national headquarters of the League at Chicago, which immediately took up the matter of improving rural school grounds as one of the League's many conservation activities. YOUTH

One thing I know of the present day kid, he will raise higher than ever we did. Yes, he is off to much better start, clearer of head and cleaner of heart. Daring to say what we only hinted, coin of his gold is yet to be minted. Free of his speech and free of his action, free of repulsion and free of attraction, much less commanded and much less forbid, he will rise higher than ever we did. Let them be shaken, the laws of convention, till some day the good are good by intention, standing up straight but standing up freer not by the customs of somebody near, not by the pressure of those in the rear. None from struggle is exempted, what is life but to be tempted, what is living more than learning greater wisdom in our spurning, climbing higher in returning than the point from which we slid? These will rise higher than ever we did. Life's maze and they've come to it; we can never see them thru it, neither wise nor strong to do it With them walk a little way, charting courses out a day. Offering advice to youth, error ever mixed with truth. "Here's my sword, I hope 'twill serve you; here's my faith, I hope 'twill nerve you. Our paths divide, God bless you kid. You will rise higher than ever I did."—BOB ADAMS.

STATE PRODUCE HIGHLIGHTS ON

From New York State Dept Agriculture and Markets, August 13, 1929.

Apple Market Steady

The season's first carload of Duchess apples from the Western part of the state arrived today, according to the New York office of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets. The fruit showed fair color and was attractive in quality. The commercial 2½ inch pack sold at $2 per bushel basket and 2¼ inch at $1.25-1.50.

Cauliflower Lower

Catskill mountain cauliflower was in very generous supply on the local wholesale district this morning and prices slumped in a very weak market. Jobbing business on good quality consignments was transacted at $3-3.50 per crate. Occasionally some really fancy realized $3.-75-$4.

New York Grapes Arriving

Champion grapes have commenced to arrive in limited quantities from the lower Hudson Valley. The grapes were of excellent size and color and sold slowly at $1.12-1.25 per small crate of eight baskets.

Dressed Calves

The market on country dress calves ruled steady. The demand was slow but receipts were so light that the market did not clog. Per lb., choice 21-23c; fair to good 18-20c; common 17-18c; small to medium 17-18c; and lightweights 16-17c.

Live Poultry

On the live poultry market, prices were nominal. Friday's prices still hold. Receipts are light. Fowls, leghorn 26-27c; colored 29-30c; broilers, rocks, 2½ pounds and over 37c; 1½ to 2 pounds 32-35c; 1½ pounds 25-30c; reds, 2½ pounds and over 32c; 1½ to 2 pounds 26-28c; under 1½ pounds 22-25c.

Butter—Cheese—Eggs

The butter market held steady despite the rather uneasy feeling prevailing among the operators caused by accumulating supplies. Higher score 44½c; extra 43½c.

A firmer feeling prevails on the fresh cheese markets as western prices advanced one half cent. Flats, fresh fancy 23-24½c.

The egg market is firm. Fancy eggs shows upward trends. Nearby hennery whites, closely selected extras 46-49c; average extras 43-45c; nearby hennery browns, top quality 41-47c; nearby hennery whites, closely selected extras 46-49c; average extras 43-45c; nearby gathered whites, firsts to extra firsts 36-39c. Nearby hennery browns, top quality 41-47c.

Live Stock

As today's market is only nominal, Monday's prices are given as a guide to shippers and producers. Steers: Market irregular, common and medium $11.50-13. Bulls: market irregular; medium $7.50-9, common lightweights $6.50-7.25. Cows: market slow and irregular. Good $8-8.50; common and medium $7-$7.75; cutters $4-6. Vealers: Market steady. Good to choice $16-19; medium $12-15; culls and common $10-11. Calves: (whole milk-feds excluded) market irregular; medium to choice $10-11.50; culls and common $6.50-8.50. Lambs: market irregular; good to choice $14-15; medium $12-13.75; culls and common $10-11. Sheep: market steady. Ewes: medium to choice $4.50-6.50; culls and common $2.50-4.25. Hogs: market steady. (85-130 pounds) $12-12.25; (130-160 pounds) $12.-25-$12.50; (165-220 pounds) $11.-85-$12; sows (rough) $8-9.25.

Hay Steady

Receipts were light and mostly undergrades which are moving slowly. Good hay wanted. No. 1, $26-27; No. 2, $24-25; No. 3, $20-$22.

Plenty of sunbaths this summer for the children mean fewer colds next winter.

Langworthy Reunion

The 30th reunion of the Langworthy family was held at the parish house in Alfred on Tuesday, August 13. The day was fine and the occasion a delightful one for all, 56 persons being present, among whom were friends from New York City, Atlanta, Ga., and Minneapolis, Minn.

At 1 o'clock a fine dinner was served and later a pleasing program of musical numbers, readings, letters from absent ones, etc., were enjoyed.

The officers elected for 1930 were: President, Lynn L. Langworthy; vice president, Fritjob Hildebrand; secretary and treasurer, Miss Susan Langworthy. The place of meeting in 1930 was not announced.
