AndoverHighSchool TIDBITS

Friday's assembly period was under the direction of Mr. Perrone. It was opened with a song. The feature of the period then followed. It was a pantomime entitled "And the Lamp Went Out." It was cleverly done. That meant it was enjoyed by all. The cast of characters follows:

The Reader --- Kathryn O'Donnell
Evelyn De Vere, the Heroine, Julia Joyce
Ralph Grayson, the Hero, James Mulholland
Mrs. DeVere, Evelyn's mother, Doris Church
Herbert Vanderslice, the villain, Francis Vickers
Stage Manager --- Ralph Williams

The program was closed with a song by the assembly.

Mr. Hardy has asked some of the upper class girls to take care of the office during the day. The girls enjoy assisting the principal.

The Senior Class held a candy sale, Friday afternoon. We thank you one and all.

—Senior Editor

A Junior Class meeting was held in Mr. Perrone's room, Sept. 25th, to organize and plan for a Halowe'en Party. Wednesday, Oct. 30th, is the date and the High School Auditorium is the place.

The committees were as follows:

Refreshments and amusements—Glenora Baker, Winona Earley, Florence DeRemer, Edward Crandall, and Ralph Williams.

Decorations—Julia Joyce, Francis Cable, Elizabeth Baker, Daniel Farwell.

General Chairman—Ella Baker.

OVER-AND-OVER

Andover High School scores on the gridiron. Yes, for the first time probably in over a decade a touchdown was made. Burt Seely, Andover's fleet halfback, was the performer. Sure was some performance, when he caught a high punt five yards behind the goal line and galloped 105 yards along the sideline to score the most beautiful touchdown this part of the state will see for some time. Of course the Andover team was pepped up a bit so they proceeded to make the extra point when Francis Cable rushed the ball over. This put the local boys in the lead. They kept this lead until late in the third quarter. Then the superior strength of the Wellsville Junior Varsity gave them two more touchdowns. The final score was 18-7.

Line-up:

Wellsville	Andover
L.E.—Colby	Church
L.T.—McEnroe	Breiding
L.G.—Riggs	Tuttle
C.—Engelder	Mulholland
R.G.—Potter	Howland
R.T.—Shear	Edwards
R.E.—Ives	Williams
Q.B.—Davie	Brundage
L.H.—Gardner	Seely
R.H.—Wartous	Cable
F.B.—Miinte	W. Brown

Score by periods:

Wellsville	6	0	6	6	—18
Andover	0	7	0	0	—7

Scoring: Touchdowns: Wellsville, Miinte 2, Hopkins 1.

Andover, Seely 1. Point after touchdown, Cable.

Substitutions, Wellsville: Wells for Colby; Kelly for Wells; Gent for McEnroe; Chrisjohn for Riggs; Pease for Engelder; Rae for Potter; Ackerman for Shear; Miller for Ives; Hopkins for Davie; Brundage for Gardner; Beach for Watrous; Carmichael for Miinte.

Andover: F. Brown for Williams; Fuller for W. Brown; Lever for Tuttle; Clark for Breiding.

Officials: Referee, Gardner; Umpire, Scheen; headlinesman, Shine.

Friday, October 4, the Andover boys go to Bath, where they will play Haverling High School. The game is called for 3:45.

Rude Rural Rhymes

WIGWAMS

With the season nearly done, corn has ripened in the sun. Farmers cut the same in blocks, carry in and lean in shocks, wigwams for the friendly ghosts of the vanished Indian hosts. Many a high-cheeked spirit goes up and down the stubbled rows. We have seen them late and soon underneath the harvest moon. Not on autumn eves alone, aborinjun tents are known. When I plant the climbing bean, something similar is seen. Uncle Quincy's favorite kind, very excellent I find. From the ones Aunt Nellie gave me, every year some seed I'll save me. Make four hills in every set, slant the poles each quartette. Then the runners, skyward sent, weave a fabric for the tent. Let us then thanksgiving life for the Indian bean-corn gift keep his memory gold and green, pavilioned in corn and bean, not completely outward shoved from the fair land that he loved.—Bob Adams.

Heart-Heart

By Dr. John Timothy Stone

ONLY A VIEW-POINT

We used to hear the quotation: "All the world loves a lover." We do not hear it so much in these later years. It is not true, anyway. The only perfect lover the world has ever known, met an ignominious death on the cross.

It might better be said that, all the world loves the optimist; at least he commands the respect of his audience, and, draws a good alary. It is so easy for one in comfortable circumstances to be an optimist.

A very esteemed contemparory recently said: "There is no doubt as to the great wealth of our country; look at the automobile sales." Then, he proceeded to give a row of nine or ten figures, in proof of his assertion.

Therefore, every man that owns a gasoline vehicle is a well-to-do and prosperous man! It seems to me a long leap to that conclusion. Even within my somewhat narrow field of observation, I know dozens of cheap cars bought on payments—and, often well worn out before the final payment. Often the bottom of the flour bin is scraped, that the payments may be made in response to the demands of an air-tight mortgage.

I am not a pessimist. Truth is neither pessimism nor politics. It is religion—nothing else. When we throw away truth, we part with religion. Can we afford to do that?

Not one-tenth of the car owners that I know are out of debt entirely; and no man is either prosperous or even well-to-do who is in water over his head, and cannot swim.

A municipality or state organization that buries itself in bonded indebtedness is signing away its liberty in a dangerous fashion. The borrower is servant to the lender—another truth.

The individual or corporation that lives beyond its means is not far from the rocks ahead. The practice of running in debt may look good on paper, and furnish alluring statistics, but it is far from being an indication of wealth. A flivver is by no means indicative of prosperity or independent living.

Keeping Fit For the Sake of Others

Daniel 1:8-20

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

This quarterly temperance lesson derstand that the more you think makes use of the text that was studied on July 28. Other scripture portions that need careful consideration are I. Corinthians 9:19-27; I. Timothy 4:7-12; II. Timothy 2:1-5. Items concerning Prohibition and its enforcement to be first page news. Henry Ford has recently renewed his statement that he wants only temperance workmen in his employ. The cost to self, machinery and others is too great to have any other kind. Both big and little business has long since reached this conclusion.

Daniel was a propagandist when he wanted to use his own common sense against the arbitrary command of the Babylonian king, who was a puppet to habit when he ordered that non-body building foods and drink be given to the young men who were in training for a practical presentation at court. On the other hand this Jewish lad and his companions had ideas of their own about what was good for them, and their opinions had been confirmed by all that they had witnessed of profligacy while in this foreign land. If they were to pass the proposed examination they must have an unsluggish mind housed in a strong body. To accomplish this they must eat so that they could really think. They knew far less about alcohol than we do today, but they did unthink about it the less you will drink it. In fact many drink the poison in order to stop their thinking process, and they invariably succeed.

The result of a vegetable diet and wholesome drinking was apparent when comparison was made with those who had been fed up on the "dainties" from the king's table washed down with the poison drink, which is unchanging in its reaction. These lads studied while others slept off the effect of false stimulants and they passed A1 when examination time came. The whole matter goes back to the fact that this Daniel was not an echo of custom but rather was one who "Purposed in his heart," An objection by the king's high officer did not alter Daniel's "purpose." He was both sure and steadfast.

This enforcement of the prohibition laws, to which every honest citizen is committed, is but a project method of finding out the facts, and this was what Daniel proposed. Already overwhelming evidence has been obtained in favor of total abstinence from alcohol, which is invariably a poison. The more faithfully this project is tried the more will the result be for the betterment of humanity. Who would want to go up in an airplane with a pilot who is even an occasional drinker? Alcohol is good to pickle a dead fly in but not good for any flyer.

Here's Howe

By E. W. Howe

THE SAGE OF POTATO HILL

ASOKA, BARBARIAN. A SUGGESTION. UNWISE NAPOLEON.

I have not been able to find an account of a man who was entirely intelligent, or of one who was entirely honest. The best example of an honest and intelligent man was possibly Asoka, a barbarian. It is said of him that tho he conquered in battle as easily as did Napoleon, he grew to have a horror of war, and would have no more of it. Asoka had victory to his credit in full measure. No one could say he was a coward, or that he was not the best of commanders. He was rich, and regal in splendor of palaces, robes, jewels, and obedience from his subjects.

So the man chose to thereafter court fame by becoming a just and intelligent ruler, and this course met with so much success that he is at this distant day, best known and respected of the notables of his time.

Any page devoted to a summary of a thousand years of history, gives brief mention of the rulers much alike; so many victories, so many defeats, and thru it all about the same thievery and oppression. But instead of the usual line given an ancient ruler in the necessary brief summary of history, Asoka gets a star in front of his name, and a footnote recording distinction no other king, president or chief has.

The history of Asoka is shadowy. The history of Asoka is shadowy, and I somewhat distrust it, but it at least persists, and is a suggestion a modern ruler might have made reality.

Why should not a ruler acquire fame with honesty rather than with the roguery that has distinguished his class almost without variance? Napoleon was a rarely intelligent man. In the Russian campaign, which wrecked him, he took a chance that was surely unnecessary. He appreciated he could not successfully invade England because of the channel separating Calais and Dover, but overlooked a more serious handicap—Winter—in invading Russia.

Why was it impossible for Napoleon to be as wise as the barbarian Asoka, who, after becoming satiated with victory and power, chose to try for still greater glory, as a just and intelligent ruler? St. Helena is a good story, but an unnecessary tragedy: I regret Napoleon's history is not an inspiration to all men that honesty is the best policy. Had Napoleon adopted Asoka's plan as late as Austerlitz, he would have not only has present fame, but a great deal more, and of a better kind.

THE CALL of THE OUTDOORS

BETTER SCHOOL DAYS

"Hully gee, but this is sumpin' like."

"Yep, I'll say it is—it's jes' like the schools the city fellers have, ain't it? Gosh, it's all right to come now."

That is the "different tune" many rural school boys and girls are singing now, as a result of a sweeping campaign to give to rural school children the brightness and attractiveness of surroundings provided for city pupils that was started last spring.

This movement had its rise in a little South Dakota town. A short distance out of town stood a rural school—a schoolhouse with weatherworn clapboards which had not known paint for a generation. The old team shed, with hay rack long out of use—autos never have acquired a taste for dried grass. Outbuildings lopsided and filthy. And grounds unkempt, weeds taller than the children who would like a place to play. Such schools have been the bane of the pupils compelled to attend them.

The little school near the South Dakota town was of the old type—and children hated to attend it. The local chapter of the Izaak Walton League decided to make a change—and accomplished it with the aid of the pupils and the farmers.

That started the movement. The incident was reported to the national headquarters of the League at Chicago. Reports of it were passed on to the chapters of the League throut the United States. The name of the little town was given—with the result that the secretary of the local chapter there was flooded with requests from chapters in more than 20 states for details.

And now chapters of the League in many parts of the country are putting on campaigns to improve the aspect of the rural school—interesting the pupils in cleaning up the grounds, getting the boys in the manual training classes to repair fences and outbuildings—or even erect new ones and securing the co-operation of the girls in planting flower beds and shrubbery, or decorating the interiors. In some localities chapters are offering prizes for the best work done in the country schools and recently in one state—Maryland—the suggestion of a state-wide campaign with valuable prizes to be awarded the schools showing the best results in improving buildings and grounds thru pupils' work was advanced.

Frank House of Howard Dies

Frank House, 70 years old, a prominent and successful farmer of the town of Howard, died at his home, September 24, 1929. He was always interested in the public enterprise of the town and had been a life long resident, being born there October 13, 1858.

He was married Feb. 14, 1883, to Vinnie Smith whom he survived by 16 years. On Jan. 1, 1918, he married Minnie Scribner of Andover, who survives him in addition to two sons, Charles H. and Earl J., both of Howard; a daughter, Lena at home; three grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the late home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Rev. Mr. McKinstry of the Presbyterian church officiating. Interment was in the Howard cemetery.

Usher (to cold, dignified lady): "Are you a friend of the groom?"

The Lady: "Indeed, no. I am the bride's mother."

Sunday School Worker Coming to Andover

The Rev. J. Gordon Holdcraft, D.D., who is the general secretary of the Sunday School Association in Chosen (Korea), will speak at the Presbyterian church, Monday evening, October 7th. Such a position as Dr. Holdcroft holds qualifies him to give a complete picture of all the Christian work being done in that interesting country. We are fortunate, indeed, to have him with us. A large attendance is therefore desired. You cannot afford to miss this treat.

An offering will be taken to defray the travelling expenses of the speaker.

Everyone is most cordially invited.

Free Toxin-Antitoxin Treatmen

Free Toxin-Antitoxin will be given by Dr. S. B. Scott at the shool house each Friday morning at 9:30 during October. All children over six months of age will be treated.

BAKERS' STORE NEWS

Teresa: "That Walter Marks that got married the other day is a very nice fellow."

Tom: "Don't you believe it. I saw him treating his wife as I wouldn't treat a dog."

Teresa: "I don't believe it. You must be mistaken, dear. What was he doing?"

Tom: "Kissing her!"

Just take down the callendar and put a big check mark on the dates of October 10th and 11th, Thursday and Friday of next week.

Those are the days of the Occident Better Baking School and we want you all to accept our most cordial invitation to be present, in fact, we urge you to be here when the school opens on Thursday as we are positive that you will find the sessions intensely interesting and very instructive.

The research work being carried on by the better makers of food products and kitchen utensils are finding out many things about food preparation that every home keeper should know, and a practical talk and demonstration is the easiest and best way to get this information to you.

This "Better Baking School" is free and there is nothing to sell, it is entirely for your instruction.

See notice elsewhere in the News for full particulars.

If you will be buying a mail box to comply with the new postal regulation we can furnish them at $2.95, and we believe it is as low as a good quality box can be bought any where.
